Henry S. Loud, 32 West Fortieth Street, mechanical engineer at 165 Broadway.

Imlay Benet, 187 West Eighty-seventh Street, banker at 115 Broadway.

Anson W. Delane, 311 East 156th Street, a retired civil engineer, and Talesman No. 16, was selected as Juror No. 4, but was withdrawn after the box had been filled because he was in ill health. Axel G. Anderson took his place.

Charles H. Hyde, broad of shoulder, big of girth, and tall above the average, entered the Criminal Court Building before 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning and started for Justice Goff's extraordinary term of the Supreme Court, where the trial of the ex-City Chamberlain on a charge of bribery began yesterday after many delays, extending over eighteen months. Mr. Hyde was smiling jovially as he approached the policeman guarding the stairway leading to the court room, and was about to pass him with a cheery "Good morning," when the policeman stopped him.

"Are you a juror?" he inquired.

"I am not," responded Mr. Hyde, surprised at first, and then realizing the humor of his situation.

"Are you a witness?" went on the policeman, and again Mr. Hyde answered: "No."

"Then you can't go in," decided the policeman. "Only jurors, witnesses, and newspapermen can go upstairs."

"But District Attorney Whitman is expecting me. He won't like it if I am late. Justice Goff wants to see me, too," said Mr. Hyde.

"Can't help it," responded the policeman shortly, and Mr. Hyde, grinning cheerfully, persisted: "But I can assure you there will be no proceedings until I am present."

"Who are you, anyway?" demanded the slightly puzzled officer.

"I'm Mr. Hyde," responded the former Chamberlain, and at that the policeman sidestepped quickly.

Something less than an hour later—the arraignment of the gunmen slayers of Herman Rosenthal and of a man on trial for arson intervened—Mr. Hyde sat beside his counsel, Max D. Steuer and John B. Stanchfield, and assisted in the selection of the twelve men who are to determine whether he forced Joseph G. Robin, head of the now defunct Northern Bank, to turn over $130,000 of his bank's money to the Carnegie Trust Company on Aug. 22, 1910, on the promise that if he did so the deposits of city moneys in his bank should be increased and if he failed to do so the city's balance then kept in the Northern Bank should be withdrawn.

Robin a Chief Actor.

The twelve men who are to try Hyde were selected in almost exactly four hours and fifteen minutes, and before the last man, actually the thirteenth selected, for one juror was excused after having taken his seat, had been agreed on, fifty-nine talesmen had been examined. District Attorney Whitman employed eighteen of the peremptory challenges allowed to him, and Mr. Steuer, who examined talesmen for the defense, utilized sixteen of his.

When he entered court Mr. Hyde said to newspaper men that he would not challenge much; that all he wanted was to get twelve men in the jury box, and he kept his word, for Mr. Steuer accepted several jurors without examination, content, apparently, with the answers which they had made to the District Attorney. The actual trial will begin this morning, when Mr. Whitman will make the opening address to the jury for the State, and then, after one or two purely formal witnesses have been called to establish the fact that Mr. Hyde actually was City Chamberlain in 1910, Joseph G. Robin will be called to the stand.

Robin, ever since his own conviction, has been held awaiting sentence, and it is believed that he will receive a suspended sentence in return for his testimony against Hyde.

The former Chamberlain of the city was quite at ease and apparently light-hearted and happy as he took his seat. And he remained so throughout the morning session. He sprang to his feet when he was called on to face the first juror and gazed at him with a genial smile while Mr. Tinsley took the oath. He caused a ripple of amusement in the courtroom when the State had accepted the second juror by leaping to his feet to face him even before his own counsel had announced whether or not the talesman would be challenged. Mr. Steuer smiled and said he had no challenge, and Mr. Morse took his seat in the box.

But the smile was wiped from Mr. Hyde's lips at recess time—1 o'clock—when Justice Goff announced that when he adjourned court the defendant would remain in custody. Once, to procure a writ of habeas corpus, Mr. Hyde walked in one door of the Tombs and presently walked out another so that he might swear he had been an inmate of the City Prison when his affidavit was made out. But that is as near as Mr. Hyde has ever

VISITS WILSON VIA KITCHEN.

Only Entrance Sir George Bullock Could Find to Governor's Cottage.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 20.—The Governor General, Lieut. Gen. Sir George M. Bullock, and Lady Bullock returned to-day the informal call Gov. Wilson paid them yesterday.

The Governor General is a dignified soldier. He could not find the front door of the Wilson cottage and left Lady Bullock at the piazza while he hunted all around the house, finally rapping at the kitchen door. The maid showed him the way. Before his arrival Mrs. Wilson kept the President-elect busy getting familiar with the formula of English tea for Sir George Bullock. The Colonial Secretary, Mr. Lobb, called later.

The Wilsons unpacked their belongings to-day. Gov. Wilson said he was having the time of his life.

"I am having such a good time that I sometimes think of sending the Electoral College a card of regret," he remarked.

The Governor General's reported intention to give a state dinner in honor of the President-elect is confirmed.

NO CABINET OFFER TO BRYAN.

He and Wilson Repudiate Reports Regarding Secretaryship of State.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 20.—While here Gov. Wilson will spend much time in studying the make-up of his Cabinet, but will come to no decision regarding his future colleagues until he returns to the United States, when he will summon the Democratic leaders and lay his tentative slate before them for consideration.

Referring to the report that the post of Secretary of State had been offered to William Jennings Bryan, Gov. Wilson said:

"Any statement in regard to a Cabinet appointment not emanating from me is without authorization."

Aside from this denial it is positively known that no Cabinet office has been offered to Mr. Bryan nor anybody else.

Congressman William Hughes of New Jersey, who is to be elected to the Senate in Senator Briggs's place, will be here next week, but the arrangement was made before Gov. Wilson came. Probably he will talk politics with Gov. Wilson nevertheless.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Nov. 20.—"I have not conferred with Mr. Wilson since the election, and have never discussed with him at any time any person in connection with any office, and I have no intention of going to Bermuda."

This answer was made to-night by William J. Bryan in reply to reports current to-day that he proposed to visit the President-elect in connection with a Cabinet appointment.

"The public knows that Gov. Wilson has gone to Bermuda to rest, and that he is not selecting a Cabinet," Col. Bryan added. "They ought to let him do the selecting and not spend their time in guessing. If they do guess, I see no reason why I should spend my time in discussing their guesses."

Col. Bryan, accompanied by his wife, is en route to Miami, Fla., to spend the Winter.

STREET CAR PARADE TO-DAY.

City Railways Company to Show Advance in Traction Accommodations.

A parade illustrating the advance in street railway accommodations will be held this morning. At 9:30 o'clock, from the barns of the New York Railways Company at Seventh Avenue and Fiftieth Street a procession of cars will be sent forth, which will exemplify all the different kinds of street railway vehicles in which New Yorkers have ridden for the last half century. It will be closed by an advanced type of low level, centre floor, storage battery steel car which has not yet been put in service.

At the head of the procession will come a horse car of a brand that will make even the Chambers Street cars blush for their youth. This, according to official announcement, will seat twelve passengers, provided they are not of too great girth. Behind it will be a single truck closed car which, though it is now run by the underground trolley system, is a relic from the cable car period. It will seat twenty-eight passengers, eight more than the double truck ordinary closed car such as may be seen any day in Broadway, which will be next in line. Then will be seen a "Pay-as-you-enter car, with seats for forty-seven passengers, and after that will come the cars which are the pride of the New York Railways Company.

First of these is the low single deck stepless car, which has been operating in Broadway for the last few months, giving seats to fifty-three persons at one time, and behind it will be the double-decked stepless car with room above and below for eighty-eight passengers. Last in the line will be stroage battery car, which it is hoped by the New York Railways Company will be the means of finally driving from the streets of the city the horse cars. It has not been put in service, but it will be tried out in a few days on one of the downtown crosstown lines.

In the cars in the parade Mayor Gaynor and the members of the Board of Estimate, the Public Service Commissioners, heads of city departments, and the Directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the New York Railways Company will play the part of passengers. The pared will be down Broadway to the Battery.

HALE ABSOLVES NEW HAVEN.

Railroad Commissioner Says Limited Wreck Was Purely Accidental.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 20.—When John H. Hale, a member of the Connecticut Public Utilities Commission, arrived in this city to-night, after a day of inquiry into the wreck of the Merchants' Limited on the New Haven's Shore Line division last Saturday night, he expressed the wish that the people of Connecticut and New York, but most especially those living in Fairfield County, which has had more than its quota of rail tragedies, might become reassured, and, to hasten this result, Commissioner Hale, declared that there was no doubt that the Greens Farms wreck was purely accidental.

"It might have happened on any train on any road, the Pennsylvania, the New York Central, or any other," said Mr. Hale. "Richard T. Higgins, Chairman of the commission, is still in Washington conferring with the Inter-State Commerce Commission, but Commissioner Ford and myself were satisfied with the case made out by the New Haven road to-day, and the finding will be that the accident was due to the falling equalizer bar and could not have been foreseen or avoided.

"The general condition of the roadbed along that line is good, and I cannot credit this talk of faulty roadbed or rotten ties. I appreciate the hysteria of the people, and the question of crossovers will be amply treated by the report of the commission's engineer, C. C. Elwell, which will be published in a few days."

ROADS PROFFER ALL GRAND TRUNK FACTS

Wickersham Halts Court Inquiry Pending Investigation of Records Submitted by Railways.

GRAND JURY USED AS A CLUB

Will Resume Proceedings Here Unless Department Gets Truth About Deal —New Haven Proposals Received.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Attorney General Wickersham to-night issued a formal statement in which he announced that the Federal Grand Jury proceedings instituted in New York in connection with the New Haven and Grand Trunk deal had been suspended pending an effort to obtain the facts from the records of the roads involved in the investigation. That action was taken, he said, because President Mellen of the New Haven system and President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk Railway, who had been communicated with by the Attorney General, promised to throw open their records for the inspection of agents of the Department of Justice, and to facilitate the effort of the Federal Government to ascertain the facts.

Another reason for the Attorney General's action was that it would enable agents of the department to make an examination suggested by the Massachusetts and Rhode Island State Railway Commissioners, who were in conference with Mr. Wickersham and Jesse C. Adkins, Special Assistant Attorney General, today and yesterday. Unless the facts can be obtained by an inspection of the books and records of the New Haven and Grand Trunk Companies, it is the purpose of Mr. Wickersham to order District Attorney Wise in New York to resume his Grand Jury investigation of the case. In that event, the Grand Jury method will be pursued in trying to obtain information which the Attorney General hopes to get through examination of the books and records of the two railway systems, but which may not be obtainable by mere recourse to matters of record in possession of those companies.

In other words, the Federal Grand Jury proceedings will be held as a club over the heads of the two roads.

It was learned definitely to-night that Attorney General Wickersham had a copy of the agreement between the New Haven and the Grand Trunk systems and that it was supplied to him by President Mellen of the New Haven. Mr. Wickersham's announcement follows:

> The Attorney General had directed a Grand Jury inquiry in New York into the alleged agreement between the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company and the Grand Trunk Railway Company before the visit of the Rhode Island and Massachusetts officials. He had also written to President Mellen of the New Haven Road and President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk Railway for an explanation. These gentlemen have offered full access to their records.
> It was felt that a full and careful examination of the matters offered by the railroads and of the statements made by the Rhode Island and Massachusetts officials and of the sources of information suggested by them should first be made, and for this reason alone the Grand Jury inquiry was suspended for the time being.
> The Attorney General has directed that the fullest investigation be made, and is determined that the matter be probed to the bottom. Unless the investigation results in the complete disclosure of all the facts, the matter will be taken up with the Grand Jury.

"That clears the situation," said Chairman MacLeod of the Massachusetts Railway Commission to-night, when the Attorney General's statement was shown to him by the THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent. "The burden rests squarely on the shoulders of the New Haven and the Grand Trunk. The public will now get all the information and we will know the true situation.

"The question for the Department of Justice to solve is whether there is any connection between the agreement entered into between the two roads relative to the use of New Haven tracks by the Grand Trunk and the cessation of work on the Grand Trunk line. Neither Mr. Mellen nor Mr. Chamberlin is apt to let any latchstrings hang out for the investigators to pull, but Mr. Wickersham has proved by his statement that he intends to follow all trails to their end."

Chairman MacLeod and George Bishop of the Massachusetts Railway Commission had another long conference in the Department of Justice to-day with Mr. Adkins. They suggested ways in which important facts concerning the deal between the roads might be obtained. E. C. Niles of the New Hampshire Railway Commission came into the case to-day and had a conference with Mr. Adkins. There will be a conference to-morrow among Mr. MacLeod and William C. Bliss, Samuel E. Hudson and Robert F. Rodman of the Rhode Island Railway Commission.

Jesse C. Adkins, Special Assistant Attorney General, took up the Grank Trunk-New Haven deal with the Federal Grand Jury yesterday in this city, but only outlined the case. No witness was called. J. Pierpont Morgan, George F. Baker, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the First National Bank; George MacCullough Miller, and Charles M. Pratt were understood to have been among those under subpoenas. It was known that Thomas E. Byrnes, Vice President of the New Haven, and Alexander H. Cochrane, a Director, had been served. District Attorney Wise declined to discuss the case.

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—E. J. Chamberlin, President of the Grand Trunk Railway, this afternoon said he had received a copy of the proposed traffic agreement with the New Haven road, and that it was under consideration. The agreement was forwarded to London, he added.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Charles S. Mellen, President of the New Haven road, declined to-day to make detailed statement regarding the report that he had signed a traffic agreement with the Grand Trunk Railway.

"While the Department of Justice is conducting its investigation I have no statement to make," he said.

The following official statement was issued by the New Haven road:

> Mr. Mellen has signed what is, in effect, a proposition to Mr. Chamberlin for a twenty-five-year agreement, but it has not been accepted by Mr. Chamberlin, and Mr. Mellen is without knowledge what action Mr. Chamberlin will take.

President Mellen told a special legislative committee he would prefer that the State build several proposed trolley lines west of the Connecticut River. He said the New Haven last year consented to finance trolley line construction under conditions set forth in a bill that was vetoed by Gov. Foss. He admitted passage of the act would have placed his company in the position it occupied before the Supreme Court ordered it to divest itself of its trolley holdings. To go back to that condition, the company, he explained, was willing to pay $5,000,000.

Accidents on the New Haven and Boston & Maine roads in the last two years were called to the attention of the Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day by Louis D. Brandeis, at the continued hearing of the complaints of New England shippers. Vice President Horne could not tell the cost of the wrecks. Vice President Buckland denied a statement by Mr. Brandeis that the wrecks were of regular occurrence.

PLANS CROSS-OCEAN FLIGHT IN 30 HOURS

TO HAVE 1,000 HORSE POWER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—At the close of a flight which Claude Grahame-White took yesterday, with Otto H. Kahn as a passenger, the aviator gave THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent particulars as to his plan to fly across the Atlantic.

"It has been my pet scheme for a long time past," he said, "but now I have completed plans for the machine and commenced to build it. It will be of 1,000 horse power, with four engines and six propellers. Each engine will be of 250 horse power, and they will be so arranged as to be independent each of the others; that is to say, if two engines break down, the other two will be quite sufficient to drive the machine. We expect to do the journey from land to land in something between twenty and thirty hours. The machine being built so as to remain in the air thirty hours, all depends on the weather and the course we take. At present we are undecided whether to go by way of the Azores or across to Newfoundland, but I expect the latter route will be chosen.

"The trip is arranged to take place in the Summer, although it is just on the cards that we may not make it until Autumn. The weather then will probably be more favorable; but, whenever we start, I am reasonably sure of success."

Mr. Kahn's Second Flight.

Mr. Kahn, who is at present staying at Lord Londesborough's house in Regent's Park, which he has leased for the year, is taking great interest in aviation. His flight by aeroplane was not his first adventure into space, for it will be remembered that some months ago he was a passenger on the Zeppelin airship during its trial voyage; but after tasting the delights of the aeroplane, Mr. Kahn swears by the latter.

Describing yesterday's flight, he told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that it grew out of a discussion between himself and Mr. Grahame-White as to the possibility of crossing the Atlantic by a heavier-than-air machine in the near future. Mr. Grahame-White told him that he believed it would be done, and, moreover, that he intended having a shot at it himself before long. After some further talk Mr. Grahame-White invited Mr. Kahn to the Hendon flying ground to look over some machines there, with the result that the air trip was proposed, and the New York banker, nothing loth, accepted. Mr. Grahame-White's newest biplane was got out, and, Mr. Kahn having been rigged up in the aviator's clothes, the two got away with a good start. After circling the ground twice the biplane rose several hundred feet and sped away across the country and was soon lost to sight.

Believes Aviator Will Succeed.

On his return, half an hour later, Mr. Kahn said:

"It was a most delightful trip, thoroughly exhilarating. I had been up before in a Zeppelin, and was anxious to compare the two methods of flight. There can be no doubt that the aeroplane is the machine of the future, its wonderful steadiness, adaptability, and—well, safety, when properly handled, putting it far ahead of the airship. There is a great future before this method of transportation, especially in the case of hydro-aeroplanes. Mr. Grahame-White tells me he wants to cross to America in one, and feels that he can get there; and I believe he can."

Mr. Kahn said that he intended staying here until February, when he would return to New York.

"I like London very much," he said. "It interests me greatly. I should like to live here altogether, but I intend going back about February to look after business. I am amusing myself now going to theatres, &c., and having a very enjoyable time, and, as you see, I intend spending a good deal of my time on this side, but not all of it."

Asked concerning the report that Kuhn, Loeb & Co. intended opening offices in London, Mr. Kahn said that there was nothing in it.

Following Mr. Kahn's return to the aerodrome, Mr. Grahame-White made a second flight, taking with him Mrs. Kahn and her daughter for a few spins around the ground.

J. P. MORGAN MAKES GIFT TO THE NATION

Gathers Complete List of Autographs of Signers of Declaration of Independence.

ONE OF THREE COLLECTIONS

Presents Handsome Volume to Congressional Library—Two Rare Signatures Obtained with Difficulty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—A complete set of original autographs of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence has been given to the Library of Congress by J. P. Morgan. They are mounted in a handsome portfolio. The gift will be placed in the manuscript division of the library, and will be open to inspection by the public.

The collection is a notable addition to what is regarded as one of the three great collections of manuscripts in the world. The others are in the British Museum and the Bibliothèque Nationale of France.

For a long time the library of Congress has been endeavoring to complete its collection of autographs of signers of the Declaration of Independence. In spite of its facilities in that connection, however, it probably would have failed in this ambition if Mr. Morgan had not come to the rescue. The main difficulty in completing the collection was in obtaining the signatures of Thomas Lynch of South Carolina and Button Gwinnett of Georgia.

The year after the Declaration was made Lynch started for Europe, but the ship on which he had taken passage was lost at sea and all on board were drowned. Lynch had seen little of public life, and was not much of a letter writer. Very few of his autographs have been found. The autograph of Lynch in the Morgan collection is not the signature to a letter, but a separate signature.

Gwinnett was killed in a duel with Dr. Lachlan McIntosh in 1777. His autographs are very rare.

An official of the library of Congress said to-night that few complete collections had been made of autographs of signers of the declaration on account of the rarity of signatures of eight or ten men who left little public or private correspondence. The only complete collections that this official could recall were Mr. Morgan's personal collection and those of Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet of New York, now in the New York Public Library; John Boyd Thacher of Albany and the late Henry A. Willard of Washington. There are many partial collections.

Mr. Morgan's gift was brought to the White House and submitted to President Taft by Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, with the letter from Mr. Morgan, which says:

"During the recent visit of Mr. Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, to my library, I learned with chagrin and regret that our National Library does not possess a complete set of letters or documents of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

"As a citizen who appreciates the value and significance of such a collection, I herewith present to the United States of America, to be deposited in the library of Congress and administered therein by the authorities thereof, a complete bound set of letters and documents of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, which it seems to me will be more fittingly preserved in the National Library than in that of any individual."

Mr. Morgan's collection of the signers of the Declaration of Independence is complete in the sense that every one of them is there represented by a signed document or by a holograph letter. There are said to be only two holograph letters known of Thomas Lynch, Jr. One was in the Thomas Addis Emmet collection and is now in the New York Public Library. The other, it has always been understood, was owned by Mr. Morgan and is presumably in the volume which he has presented through President Taft to the Congressional Library.

The market value of the gift is from $10,000 to $15,000, or even more, depending on what prices would be brought at auction by the Lynch letter and the Gwinnett document. The late Elliott Danforth of this city had a complete set, but with only the signature of Lynch written on a page of a "History of England" and a similar specimen of Gwinnett. This Danforth collection will be sold in Philadelphia early next month and an upset price of $10,000 is placed on it.

DROPPED DEAD IN RING.

Not a Blow Had Been Struck, but Excitement Killed Young Boxer.

Frederick Merten, 18 years old, a clerk, of 163½ West 102d Street, died suddenly last night in the Century Club in the rear of the Bloomingdale Guild, 146 West 100th Street, as he was about to engage in a boxing exhibition with Thomas Holmes, 19 years old, a driver, of 147 West 100th Street.

Merten had just had the boxing gloves tied to his hands and was walking to the centre of an improvised ring to shake hands with Holmes when he reeled and feel against him. Holmes thinking Merten was joking shoved him aside, and Merten fell to the floor.

One of the score of young men who were grouped around the ring, seeing that something was wrong with Merten, ran to the West 100th Street Station and requested that an ambulance be summoned. Detective Wilbur, who was in the station, accompanied the young man back to the clubhouse and saw at a glance that Merten was dead.

Dr. McNeal of J. Hood Wright Hospital said that death was probably due to heart trouble induced by excitement.

SHOT FOR RUNNING OVER DOG

Three Autoists Hurt by Gun of Animal's Owner, Who Is Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

ERIE, Penn., Nov. 20.—When a large touring car ran over and crushed his dog late this afternoon, a hunter, Lloyd Pastorous, it is alleged, fired both barrels of his shotgun point blank at the rear end of the auto, hitting three occupants, who are in Hamot Hospital. Pastorous afterward gave himself up to the police.

The injured are: William H. Forster, aged 39, President of the Hays Manufacturing Company and Treasurer of Hamot Hospital, who will recover; Mrs. Susan Lamberton Forster, whose condition is critical, and George Kellar, aged 22, chauffeur, who will recover. All three were hit about the head with fine birdshot.

Forster and Kellar said that Pastorous fired at the automobile while within 20 feet of it. Mrs. Forster saw the dog run down and had turned to look back through the car window, when the charge of shot completely riddled the curtain, and broke the wind shield in front.

The shooting occurred at Walnut Creek bridge, fifteen miles west of the city, while Mr. and Mrs. Forster were on their way to their Summer home.

IMPERIAL HEIR IS BORN.

Child of Archduke May Succeed to the Austrian Throne.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—At Reichenau, near Vienna, a prospective heir to the imperial and royal thrones of Austria and Hungary has been born. The infant is the first born child of Archduke Charles Francis Joseph and Archduchess Zita, who were married in October, 1911.

Owing to the fact that Archduke Francis Ferdinand, the next heir to the throne, resigned the right of succession of the children born to him from his morganatic marriage with the Duchess of Hohenberg, the next in line for the throne is Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, whose first-born son came into the world this morning.

Emperor Francis Joseph was acquainted with the news on awakening before the dawn of day. He promised to go to Reichenau to act as godfather to the child. Archduke Charles Francis Joseph and Archduchess Zita, who made a love match last Autumn, were able to carry through their project of marriage by the aid of the Emperor, who frequently says he only wishes the younger generation to be happy.

ZEPPELIN OFFERS ALIBI.

Says It Was Not His Airship That Hovered Over English Coast.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Count Zeppelin has telegraphed to The Daily Mail that none of his airships approached the English Coast on the night of Oct. 14.

English suspicion of Germany's hostile designs was again aroused a few days ago by the report that the airship seen over Sheerness, at the mouth of the Thames, on Oct. 14 had crossed from that country. The belief was then expressed that only the German airships, and probably those of the Zeppelin type, were capable of making such a voyage.

SENATOR RAYNER IN A COMA.

Efforts to Restore Him Fail—Suffering Less, Says His Son.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—United States Senator Isidor Rayner of Maryland, who for some time has been critically ill at his apartments in this city, was practically in a state of coma all day. Efforts to restore him to consciousness failed. The Senator's son, William B. Rayner, issued the following statement:

"The condition of my father to-night is not as favorable as it was last night. While his suffering does not appear to be as intensive, he has practically been in a comatose condition all day, which has caused us great uneasiness."

SULZER HUNTS HIS DINNER.

Goes to Find Virginia Wild Turkey for Thanksgiving.

Gov.-elect William Sulzer sailed yesterday afternoon for Old Point Comfort, Va., aboard the Old Dominion Steamship Princess Anne. Mr. Sulzer is on his way to Petersburg, where he will hunt wild turkey. He expects to bring a bird home for Thanksgiving.

"I haven't had a vacation for a long time," said Mr. Sulzer yesterday, "and a little one will not hurt me. I have a lot of work to finish before I quit Washington—several bills that I have to get through the Appropriations Committee, and other things—and it will take a few weeks to do it. After that I have to think about Albany. In the meantime I'm going to see if I can hit a turkey."

Illinois Association Disapproves New Regulations Requiring Publicity.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The Illinois Daily Newspaper Association, in convention here to-day, went on record in opposition to the recent Federal regulations regarding registration of newspaper ownership, stockholders and circulation. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That this association views with disapproval the growing tendency of the United States Government toward paternalism in matters pertaining to the press, and condemns the new law requiring publicity in matters in no wise concerning the general public."

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 20.—The final accounting of the estate of F. J. ("Lucky") Baldwin, millionaire and rancher, showing all the transactions of the executor, H. A. Unruh, for three years, was made yesterday.

The report, which covers 929 typewritten pages and contains more than a million items, required the services of a dozen clerks working for almost four months. The estate was shown to be worth $20,000,000, after all expenses and minor bequests had been paid.

HARRIMAN ESTATE GROWS.

Estimated Now That He Left $129,255,000, Instead of $75,000,000.

John W. Lyon, transfer tax appraiser of Orange County, had a hearing on the estate of E. H. Harriman yesterday at 165 Broadway. The hearing was private and consumed several hours. It was adjourned until Dec. 4. Mr. Harriman died Sept. 9, 1909, and his estate has been under appraisal ever since. He left his entire estate to his wife, Mrs. Mary Harriman.

The Harriman estate has paid an advance tax of $675,000 in order to obtain the 5 per cent. rebate. On the basis of this tax payment it was assumed that Mrs. Harriman's advisers had told her that the estate amounted to $129,255,000. Shortly after Mr. Harriman's death it was reported in Wall Street that the estate had a value of about $75,000,000.

One thing that has complicated the appraisal has been the fluctuation of stock values in Harriman enterprises. Another puzzling factor has been the appraisal of his Orange County real estate. The appraisal will be filed in Orange County when it is completed.

FIGHTING STOPS FOR PEACE TALK

Turkish and Bulgarian Leaders to Meet at Tchatalja to Discuss Armistice Terms.

ST. SOPHIA A PEST HOUSE

ENEMY THEY REALLY FEAR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—The fighting at Tchatalja has been stopped pending a discussion of the armistice proposals.

According to The Daily Mail's Sofia correspondent, the Allies' terms for ending the war must be accepted or rejected by this morning—the time limit given for Turkey to come to a definite decision. If the terms are accepted the details of an armistice will immediately be arranged between Nazim Pasha and Gen. Fitcheff, respectively the Turkish and Bulgarian commanders. Up to last (Wednesday) night no reply from Turkey had been received at Sofia.

A Constantinople dispatch to The Daily Telegraph says:

"Turkey took the initiative in seeking an armistice, proposing, through the Russian Ambassador, to the Balkan States in general and to Bulgaria in particular, to engage in conversations with a view to examining conditions for an armistice and peace.

"Kiamil Pasha (the Grand Vizier) addressed King Ferdinand in person. M. Guechoff, President of the Bulgarian Council of Ministers, replied, also through the Russian Ambassador to Turkey, that before sending a definite answer Bulgaria would have to come to an understanding with her allies.

"On Tuesday evening the Bulgarian reply arrived in Constantinople and the Russian Ambassador communicated it in person to Kiamil Pasha and to the Foreign Minister. Bulgaria declared that if the Ottoman generalissimo wished to send delegates to confer with the delegates of the Bulgarian generalissimo the Ottoman delegates would be received and conversations on the conditions of an armistice could be begun.

"The Ottoman Government has shown unaccustomed activity in accepting the invitation by already appointing as its plenipotentiaries Izzet Pasha, Chief of the General Staff, who recently returned from Yemen, where he was in general command of the troops, and who is one of the most highly esteemed general officers of the Ottoman Army, and Osman Nizami Pasha, who also enjoys a high reputation as a capable and enlightened officer and whose services as Ambassador at Berlin were much appreciated by the Porte.

"The Plenipotentiaries will be assisted by Shadan Bey, who will act as legal adviser. Shadan is a Councillor of State, and was formerly legal Counsellor of the Sublime Porte."

The Sofia correspondent of The Times, wiring yesterday, says:

"Absolute secrecy is still maintained here regarding the Allies' conditions, but the details telegraphed yesterday may be regarded as authentic.

"The Servian demand for Monastir was anticipated by the fall of that town. The Servians also insist on the surrender of Divra.

"Greece makes no claim on the important islands of Chios and Mytilene, which she has not occupied, but presumably retains the smaller islands already captured by her fleet.

"It is stated in diplomatic quarters that Bulgaria demands the surrender of the Tchatalja lines. All the fortified positions in the possession of the allies at the time of the conclusion of the armistice will be retained.

"It is proposed that the negotiations shall take place at Tchatalja, presumably at the headquarters of the Bulgarian General."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 20.—The fact that the official communications regarding an armistice issued at both Constantinople and Sofia make no mention of preliminary conditions has given rise to comment, as it was generally expected that Bulgaria would insist upon fixing bases before consenting to enter upon negotiations. Indeed, the belief was very general that Bulgaria would demand the capitulation of Adrianople and other fortified places, and the Foreign Minister recently stated to the Ambassadors that Turkey would refuse to entertain any such stipulation.

Apparently Bulgaria has found good reasons for refraining from such an attitude, especially as the beginning of pourparlers will not compel the suspension of hostilities until an armistice has actually been signed.

As has already been pointed out, the question of cholera complicates the issue at Tchatalja, and to-day it is rumored that the Bulgarians are retiring to more sanitary positions near Tchorlu. Violent cannonading audible this afternoon in the direction of Derkos, however, would indicate that some engagement was in progress in that quarter. This morning all was quiet in the neighborhood of Biyuk Chekmedye and Tchatalja.

Fresh troops are arriving daily by steamer and train from Asia Minor.

A telegram from Nazim Pasha reads: "There was no serious fighting to-day. A slight cannonade and fusillade were exchanged at the right and left wings. We have collected the arms and other effects abandoned yesterday by the enemy."

A wireless dispatch from the commander of the Turkish battleship Torgut Reis, timed 1 A. M. to-day, reported that a Turkish detachment operating from Derkos, aided by the fire of the ship's guns, drove back the Bulgarians for a distance of ten miles.

Nazim Pasha, in a telegram timed 12:15 P. M. to-day, said:

"Reports received at this moment state that the enemy facing our left wing withdrew completely last night in the direction of the slopes of Papaz Burgas. Our reconnoitring parties counted over 500 dead Bulgarians on the slopes in the environs of the Tchatalja Railroad Station. From their epaulets it was established that the dead soldiers belonged to the First Infantry Regiment of Sofia. A number of rifles, caps, and officers' swords were brought in by our troops.

"According to statements made by Bulgarian prisoners the enemy have been without food for three days and are retreating. The Bulgarians were unable to carry away all their wounded.

"The morale of our troops is very good."

It is generally believed that the object of the authorities in quartering nearly 2,000 cholera patients in the Mosque of St. Sophia is to deter any enemies from setting foot within the building. The talk in the Sofia papers regarding the celebration of a te deum in that historic pile undoubtedly produced an impression on the Turkish Government, which resorted to this truly Oriental expedient of thwarting such a design.

The Porte has applied to the embassies and legations for the withdrawal of the naval contingents landed on Monday on the ground that their presence is not necessary, while it is added that, should danger arise, there will always be time enough to take measures of precaution. The Ambassadors and Ministers at a meeting to-day discussed the request. It is understood that they decided to leave the matter in abeyance for the present.

SOFIA, Nov. 20.—The Bulgarian troops operating before the line of fortifications defending Constantinople at Tchatalja have received orders to cease fighting, and merely to hold the positions they have won, as negotiations have been begun for the conclusion of an armistice at the request of Turkey.

All the reports from Turkish sources to the effect that the Turkish troops have gained victories over the Bulgarians along the line at Tchatalja are officially declared untrue by the Bulgarian War Office.

Regarding the situation at Adrianople, official accounts state that the Turkish troops, attempting to break through the Bulgarian investing lines, were repulsed on Monday with heavy losses after a battle lasting the whole day. They were compelled to retire to the fortress.

From Dedeaghatch, on the Aegean Sea, it is reported that two battalions of Turkish troops posted on the heights to the north were routed by the Bulgarians. The Turks fled, leaving a train filled with provisions, ammunition, and horses.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—The war has shifted for a time from the field of arms to that of diplomacy. It may be that the war is near an end. Plenipotentiaries for the belligerent Powers will meet to-day at the village of Hademkeui, a few miles outside Constantinople, for a preliminary discussion of the terms of an armistice.

In the meantime, the Turkish, Bulgarian, and Servian commanders have ordered a cessation of hostilities, although cannonading, which Nazim Pasha reports as unimportant, took place yesterday morning.

The sweeping terms which the allies were said to have demanded as a basis for the armistice appear not to have been advanced, but the plenipotentiaries may not know the conditions until they meet, and it is almost certain that they will be on the basis of the Balkan States holding all the conquered country until a permanent treaty of peace is signed.

How many vestiges of his former power they are prepared to concede to the Turk depends largely upon two factors—the strength and supplies of the allied army threatening the gates of Constantinople, and the extent to which the cholera spectre has embarrassed the allies' plans.

It is certain that great transport difficulties hamper the Bulgarian Army on account of the distance from its base and the rough roads. The cholera is counted on by the Turks to weaken the Bulgarian ambition for a triumphal march into the capital and the celebration of mass in St. Sophia. But to make assurance doubly sure, the Turks have resorted to the amazing plan of transforming the mosque into a pest house and have crowded 2,000 cholera-stricken patients within its walls.

A Sofia dispatch to The Standard says that the delegates appointed by the Balkan League to discuss the armistice include Bulgarian, Greek, and Servian officers.

SERVIA PLACATES AUSTRIA.

Grants One Demand—An Ultimatum Was to be Sent To-day.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—The outlook between Austria and Servia has improved. Servia has given way in the affair of M. Prochaska, the Consul at Prisrend, and has agreed that Austria shall send an emissary to Prisrend to investigate the charges brought against the Consul by the Servian Government, which alleges that he incited the Albanians against the Servians and fired on Servian troops.

"This solution of the Consulate dispute," says The Daily Telegraph's Vienna correspondent, "has caused the liveliest satisfaction, and has also quieted the excited public mind throughout the monarchy.

"It can be said that Servia had tried the patience of Austria almost to the extreme limit, as yesterday (Tuesday) at Budapest an unalterable resolution was taken to wait no longer than Thursday at noon, and then at once to forward an ultimatum which, with a military demonstration, would have convinced Belgrade of the gravity of the situation.

"The well-armed Danube flotilla would have received orders to appear before Belgrade and remain there until the Servian answer was received. Further delay on the part of Servia could not be permitted by Count von Berchtold, the Foreign Minister, in view of the excited state of feeling in the monarchy.

"A question put to-day at the sitting of the Hungarian delegation by M. Nugy showed the general opinion. He declared that the attitude of the Servian military authorities toward an Austro-Hungarian Consul was revolting, and said no great power could suffer it without violent resentment."

The Sofia correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs:

"The Allies have definitely abandoned the idea of the partition of Albania. They will consent to Albanian autonomy. An autonomous administration will be set up by stages with the aid of the Balkan States."

BUDAPEST, Nov. 20.—Servia has yielded to the Austrian demand that an official from the Austro-Hungarian Ministry of Foreign Affairs be allowed to proceed to Prisrend to investigate the complaints made by and against the Austrian Consul there.

This relieves the immediate tension between the two countries, as an opportunity is now furnished for an unbiased examination of the grounds of the dispute.

GREEK TROOPS ACCUSED.

Are Said to Have Sacked the Jewish Quarter of Salonika.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—A Constantinople dispatch to The Jewish Chronicle asserts that the Greek soldiers at Salonika sacked the Jewish quarter, ransacking and destroying the synagogues and attacking the women.

Terror and desolation prevail, according to the dispatch, and the chief rabbis of Salonika and Constantinople are invoking the protection of the French and British Ambassadors.

THE BULGARIANS RETREAT.

Leave Advanced Positions at Tchatalja and Turks Reoccupy Them.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. Dispatch to The London Times.

ON THE TCHATALJA LINES, Nov. 20.—Since this morning only the Turkish guns have been firing. It is clear that the Bulgarians have evacuated the positions facing the Hamidiyeh group of forts. The Turks followed the retreating enemy with their artillery, which has a longer range.

I cannot understand the Bulgarians' operations as seen from this front. Their withdrawal may possibly be a feint, but if this is the case why did they make such strenuous efforts to entrench themselves?

Is it conceivable that the Bulgarians believed the sensational stories of the retreat from Lule-Burgas published by emotional correspondents who never saw the Turks in action at all? Did the Bulgarians imagine they would arrive at Tchatalja and find the road to Constantinople open? Or have the Bulgarian Generals orders to make a demonstration without seriously committing their troops, in consequence of the negotiations?

Again, it may be that they want to draw an attack by the Turks and bring on an engagement in which they hope to obtain the advantage by superior mobility. I must admit that I do not understand it.

I have just returned from Mahmud Pasha's lines, where the Turks have massed such considerable strength that it looks as though they would be able to resist indefinitely any attempt on the part of the Bulgarians to approach them if the enemy's forward movement continues to be as sketchy as it has been during the last three days.

The Bulgarians have retired to the hills in the immediate vicinity of Tchatalja. The Turkish infantry have once more occupied the villages in the plain facing the Hamidiyeh position as far as Izzeddin.

Whatever may be the importance of this movement, it has acted like a strong tonic on the spirit of the troops and is making them forget the Bulgarian shrapnel at Lule-Burgas.

A fresh division of good troops arrived at Hademkeui this morning, and as they marched in they loudly cheered the Commander in Chief, whose headquarters are situated in that village.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—M. H. Donohoe, telegraphing to The Daily Chronicle from Hademkeui yesterday, supports The Times's telegram from Tchatalja telling of the retreat of the Bulgarians and the Turks' reoccupation of advanced positions.

When, says Mr. Donohoe, the Bulgars stormed at so much cost, the Turkish shell fire caused considerable loss among the retreating enemy.

Mr. Donohoe says the fortune of war has now turned decidedly in favor of the Turks, who have gained their first advantage in the war at their last stand. They have displayed an infinitely better fighting spirit than hitherto, the infantry particularly showing admirable steadiness and morale. Mr. Donohoe adds:

"To-day there has been comparative tranquillity. Occasionally a little artillery firing has broken out on the right and left flanks, but for the moment the Bulgarians have had enough fighting and show no signs of resuming the offensive. The forts around Hademkeui proved far harder nuts to crack than the enemy imagined.

"A finer class of Turkish reserves is now on the fighting line. They show great steadiness and are doing much to restore the ancient prestige of the Turkish arms."

CHOLERA HORRORS IN TURKISH CAMP

Ground Covered with Dead and Dying Like a Fly Paper, Says Ashmead-Bartlett.

THE DEAD PILED IN HEAPS

Living Almost as Closely Packed—All the Tracks Leading to the Camp Dotted with Bodies.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett, in a dispatch to The Daily Telegraph from Constantinople describing the terrible ravages of Asiatic cholera among the Turks, says:

"Every village through which I passed has its victims, every road over which the troops move to the front is marked by a trail of corpses or of men dying by the roadside. As there are no medical arrangements of any sort, it is impossible to succor and save any of these wretched victims of the war.

"Those who fall are left to die where they drop. No pleading or prayers will move the living to raise a heping hand, even if they are in a position to do so.

"In the village in which I had been stopping a great number of troops had been quartered, and cholera at once broke out. As soon as a man was seized by it he was thrown over the back of a horse, carried outside the outskirts of the houses, and laid on the first patch of open ground, there to die. When dead, his body was hastily covered with a thin layer of earth. These ghastly mounds litter the country.

"But these horrid scenes in the villages in the rear of the army pale altogether into insignificance when compared with the horrors of Hademkeui, the headquarters of the army. It is the men who went through the awful hardships and sufferings of the retreat, who lived for ten days on green corn or scraps of offal picked up as they marched, that yield the greatest number of victims to the altar of Asiatic cholera.

"I never actually entered that village, because the sights I saw from the outside caused me to turn my horse's head in the opposite direction and filled me with a vague terror I had never known before.

"Three days ago I rode over the hills, intending to visit Hademkeui. I mounted the last slope which hid the valley in which it lies, and then I was brought to a standstill by the awful babel of sounds which arose beneath me.

"I looked more closely, and found I was gazing into a valley of the Shadow of Death. There was the station of Hademkeui, and a train was in the station. It was delayed by wretched specimens of sick humanity seeking to escape from the dread spectre.

"The train was leaving for Constantinople, and all who could crawl were endeavoring to secure a place on it, hoping thus to reach a haven of refuge. Some were wounded, some down with dysentery, others with enteric, others were feeling the first spasms of the scourge itself, others were merely sick at heart. Unable to stand longer the constant strain of waiting for their natural deaths, all were trying to escape.

"In the centre of Hademkeui lay a large square, formed on one side by some barracks, on two others by lines of white hospital tents, on the fourth by the high road. This square resembled a successful flypaper in midsummer—it was covered with corpses of dead and writhing bodies of living in all attitudes, some prone, some sitting, some kneeling, some constantly shifting, some with hands clasped as if in supplication.

"In some parts of the area dead were piled in heaps, in others those still living were almost as closely packed.

"This shocking lake of misery was being constantly fed by rivulets of stretcher-bearers bringing in fresh victims from the camps and forts, and by others who crawled in of their own accord, seeming to prefer to end their days in company with their fellow-men, or else expecting to find succor or release from their immediate torments.

"All the tracks leading to this impromptu morgue were dotted with the bodies of those who had died on the road. From time to time empty bullock wagons would pass through and the bodies of those in whom life was extinct would be dumped into them, carted out of the village, and thrown into great pits, where sleep thousands of poor Asiatic peasants.

"'Hademkeui is the immediate prize for which the armies of two nations are now engaged in deady struggle."

KIAMIL BLAMES POWERS.

Says Their Delay in Mediation Has Cost Thousands of Lives.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—The Constantinople correspondent of The Times sends the following declaration given to him by Kiamil Pasha, Grand Vizier:

"We had not yet finished our preparations when we were obliged to answer a declaration of war, declared upon us by the allied Balkan States with the object of dividing our European provinces among them. A fortnight ago, when the chief cities and the strong places had not been captured by our enemies, and in consequence of their seizure of a certain point, we demanded mediation from the great powers with the object of concluding an armistice for the preliminaries of peace. Several days passed before the powers decided to undertake the task of mediation in common. Meanwhile our foes occupied other points in our territory. Not content with attacking us with their regular forces the enemy armed bands which they encouraged to burn villages and massacre old men, women, and children, with the result that thousands of Moslem families, terrified by their atrocities, fled precipitately and arrived in a state of utter misery at the capital, whence they were dispatched to Asia Minor.

"Had the great powers without loss of time communicated our demand for an armistice to the allies they would thus have taken serious steps to insure the cessation of hostilities; would have saved the lives of thousands of soldiers who have fallen in the battles which have since occurred; would have prevented the emigration of the Moslem population caused by the cruelties committed, and would have averted the fall of Salonika.

"Faced by this hesitation we were compelled on Nov. 12 to address the King of the Bulgarians directly, and we have just received a reply to the effect that the allies have chosen Plenipotentiaries to come to an arrangement with our Commander in Chief for the conclusion of an armistice and of peace.

"Had the fortune of war been propitious to us and had the imperial army entered Bulgaria, would the great powers have shown that indifference which marks their attitude to-day? Would they have forced us to quit Bulgaria, as once they prevented us from marching victoriously into Athens and from retaining the territories we conquered from the Greeks? Do the great powers to-day distinguish against Moslems in defeat as well as in victory? If so, what becomes of all their professions of humanity and justice?"

DIDN'T CAPTURE 50,000 TURKS.

When Servians Entered Monastir Ottoman Garrison Had Fled.

BELGRADE, Nov. 20.—According to the latest reports from Monastir, the Turkish garrison did not surrender, but fled in all directions, leaving a large amount of war material behind.

After the terrific battle which preceded the fall of the city most of the Turkish soldiers fled in the direction of Florina, fifteen miles to the southeast, pursued by the Servian cavalry.

The Turks lost 20,000 killed and wounded in the battle and the Servian casualties were also very heavy.

The Crown Prince of Servia made his State entry into the city yesterday.

The Servian press is demanding a strict investigation into the origin of the report of the capture of 50,000 Turks.

MASSACRES AT JAFFA.

Killing of Christians Reported—Russian Warship Hurrying There.

ATHENS, Nov. 20.—Reports of massacres of Christians in Jaffa, Palestine, caused the Commander of the Russian cruiser Oleg to weigh anchor and depart hurriedly for that district to-day.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Although without confirmation of the report of massacres of Christians in Jaffa, officials here admit that they have been apprehensive of such troubles on the Syrian coast, where the religious differences between the Mohammedans and the Christians are more pronounced than in any other part of the Ottoman Empire.

American interests in that quarter are large, not only owing to the extensive fruit trade, but because of the presence of a large number of American missionary and educational institutions. Within twenty miles of Jaffa, which is the port of Jerusalem, are three important American missionary stations, Tayyibeh, Ramallah, and Ain-Areck. There is also a large Jewish population.

Two foreign warships have been lying at Beirut, about 150 miles north of Jaffa. The armored cruiser Tennessee is now speeding directly for Beirut. She is due at Gibraltar to-morrow, but will require almost a week to get to the Syrian coast.

Five Christian missionary societies are represented in Jaffa. The Christian and Missionary Alliance has a station with one missionary, the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East two men and two women, the London Society for the Promotion of Christianity Among the Jews two men and two women, the Seventh Day Adventist Mission Board one man and one woman, and the Tabeetha Mission School four women. There is also an American orphanage.

There are supposed to be about 10,000 Christians among the inhabitants, whose total is estimated at 40,000. There are eight Christian churches and four Jewish synagogues.

SENTENCING YOUNG TURKS.

No Counsel for Defense Allowed at the Courts-Martial.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Both Ottoman and foreign interests in Constantinople are excited over the large number of arrests of politicians and writers belonging to the Party of Union and Progress (Young Turks.)

According to a dispatch from the Turkish capital, the Ottoman Government, through a local press agency, has issued a statement that only forty arrests have been made and that the sole reason for these was the organization of a demonstration by university students in front of the Government offices on Oct. 7.

At first most remarkable stories were circulated in explanation of the arrests. With a view to influencing Musselman opinion, it is explained that the Young Turks were plotting to establish a republic. An attempt was also made to divert Christian and foreign sympathy from the arrested men by the circulation of a report that the object of the organization was to arrange massacres and to blow up the foreign quarter at Pera.

These reports were so manifestly and clumsily false that the Turkish Government felt itself constrained to issue to-day's statement regarding the students.

Diplomatic circles, however, attribute the arrests to a very different reason. They believe they were due to the nomination by the Sultan at the behest of the Unionists of Mahmud Shefket Pasha as Inspector General of the army. This action was intended to cause the fall of the Ottoman Cabinet.

Neither the public nor counsel for the defense were admitted to the courts-martial which tried the arrested Unionists. This severe action of the authorities is expected to suppress Unionist opposition for a long time to come. Nineteen Young Turks were sentenced yesterday. Deputy Carasso of Salonika has been arrested.

A private letter received by a business firm from Constantinople, dated Nov. 15, says that under martial law order is being better kept there than ever before. It concludes:

"You can take this from an old business firm—that Constantinople will always be left to Turkey and that trouble will never occur in the way people abroad imagine."

HYDE SITS SMILING AS HIS TRIAL BEGINS

been to a cell, and Justice Goff's announcement made it appear for an instant as though he was to occupy a cell in earnest.

John B. Stanchfield was on his feet instantly with a vigorous protest and a startled demand to know whether Justice Goff actually meant to lock up Mr. Hyde. The Justice replied slowly and quietly, but still clearly:

"I see no reason why the defendant should not be placed in close custody until the jury renders a verdict. Only twice in my work in the criminal courts have I varied from this rule. One instance was where the defendant was an aged man and the other was a case of illness where it would have been inhuman to put a man under lock and key."

Mr. Stanchfield listened, amazed, and Hyde, leaning behind the lawyer's back, engaged Mr. Steuer in earnest conversation. Mr. Stanchfield rallied his wits at once, however, and exclaimed:

"But, your Honor, it would be exceedingly inconvenient at this time if the defendant were locked up. It is utterly impossible for us to get access to our client at night. The afternoons and lunch hours are the only opportunities we have."

And then Mr. Stanchfield explained that Mr. Hyde practically was his own chief counsel, that as a lawyer he had prepared his own case and that it would entail a great hardship on him to separate him from his associate counsel. The lawyer urged that the trial would be delayed by such a move, and Justice Goff instantly snapped him up on this remark to inquire how long the trial was expected to take.

Mr. Whitman said he thought he could make his case in four days and Mr. Stanchfield replied that two days or, perhaps, a day and a-half would suffice for his side. Justice Goff seemed pleased and announced that he would reserve decision in Mr. Hyde's case until he saw how the trial progressed. Mr. Hyde breathed a sigh of relief and hurried from the courtroom with his lawyers.

The examination of talesmen was expedited considerably by the District Attorney reading to the assembled panel a long list of persons and institutions concerning which he wished to learn if the talesman had personal knowledge. The list included Mr. Hyde and his counsel and these institutions:

Carnegie Trust Company, Empire Trust Company, Fourteenth Street Bank, Guardian Trust Company, Hungarian-American Bank, Mercantile National Bank, National Reserve Bank, Nineteenth Ward Bank, National City Bank, Public Bank, Savoy Trust Company, Trust Company of America, Twelfth Ward Bank, Van Norden Trust Company, Madison Trust Company, Washington Savings Bank, Windsor Trust Company, Broadway Trust Company, in the City of New York, or any of its departments; Merchants & Manufacturers Securities Company, Tennessee Packing and Stock Yards Company and Vita Colorado Mining and Smelter Company.

Stephen C. Baldwin, Watkins Crockett, George C. Cummins, John E. Cummins, William J. Cummins, Martin J. Condon, George D. Crabbs of Cincinnati, P. H. Deely, F. W. Dimock, William A. Keener, formerly Justice of the New York Supreme Court; S. K. Kellock, Liston L. Lewis, Samuel H. Kress, Michael J. Lynam, B. Lenahan, Charles Arthur Moore, Jr., James W. Osborne, Platt Iron Works of Dayton, Ohio; Joseph B. Reichmann, B. Renshart, Joseph G. Robin, P. Ryan, Ryan Parker Construction Company, John V. Smith, Robert L. Smith, Stanchfield and Levy, Herbert Turrell, Samuel Untermyer, Warner M. Van Norden, Harry J. Walsh, W. K. Weaver, and George T. Williams.

In the list will be recognized the names of the Directors of the Carnegie Trust Company, Reichmann, the President, and Cummins, the leading spirit, as well as Lynam, its counsel, and the names of men employed by or associated with Mr. Hyde.

In few instances did the talesmen know any of these persons or had they had dealings with the institutions named. George S. Brainerd, talesman 52, raised a laugh, however, when he acknowledged that he knew so many of the persons mentioned and had dealt with so many of the institutions that he had made a list of them. He read a list almost as long as the District Attorney's which had caused Justice Goff to ask:

"How large a section of the City Directory, are you reading, Mr. District Attorney?"

Mr. Brainerd was excused immediately, while everybody laughed.

B. Arthur Aycrigg, a real estate dealer, also caused a laugh when he said Mr. Steuer had represented him as counsel.

"Did you win or lose the case, Mr. Counselor?" asked Justice Goff.

"I can't recall," responded Mr. Steuer. "What did happen, Mr. Aycrigg?"

"Well, the other man settled for $1," laughed the talesman, and Mr. Steuer, bowing to Justice Goff, remarked: "Well, in that event I should say I had won the case."

Mr. Hyde's trial was begun only after a lengthy objection by Mr. Stanchfield that after they had the case transferred from the Supreme Court to General Sessions the District Attorney, without notice to the defendant, had it retransferred to the Supreme Court and that therefore Justice Goff was without jurisdiction. The Justice ruled that he was privileged to try the case, and Mr. Stanchfield, taking an exception, was forced to drop his argument.

With the selection of the last man in the box Justice Goff adjourned court until 10:30 o'clock this morning.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD

Bulletin.

THE EARLY WINTER RESORTS OF THE UPPER SOUTH

Chill November and the first sharp bite of winter frost turn the face of the winter vacationist toward the resorts of the Upper South.

He is first attracted by the pines of the Carolinas, where the edge of frost is dulled by the protecting barrier of pine-clad hills.

It is an out-of-door life that beckons to the Northerner with the promise of golf and gun and horseback exercise.

Pinehurst is the first to open wide its doors. It is an ideal place for early winter recreation and sport. Winter golf is indigenous to its soil and climate. Other sports of the open help to fill the season's attractions.

To accommodate the travel to this region, the Pennsylvania Railroad will inaugurate, on November 30, through sleeping car service between Pennsylvania Station, New York, and Pinehurst, on train leaving Pennsylvania Station week-days at 3.38 P. M. arriving Pinehurst 8.30 o'clock the following morning.

A Few Remarks on Staying "Put"

¶ All the world likes a man who "stays put."

¶ In loyalty to an employer, to a friend, to a principle, to a girl, the man who "stays put" is held in high esteem.

¶ And the reason for this is, that it is natural for men to applaud a virtue in which human nature is deplorably deficient.

¶ This is perhaps a rather pretentious introduction to the subject of Saks clothes, but if Carlyle can argue from the coat to the man, we surely can argue from the man to the coat.

¶ Human nature itself is not less steadfast in purpose than most ready-for-service clothes in shape-retaining qualities.

¶ The snap and style of most ready-for-service garments droops, dwindles and disappears after a little use, even as a millionaire's fortune after his death.

¶ But a Saks garment "stays put"—every day men come in here, seasoned wearers of Saks clothes, whose garments still retain, after months of hard usage, those shapely qualities and that individuality of style which we first put into them.

¶ And that is the best possible proof we can furnish as to the manner in which Saks clothes are made.

STRANGULATION, SAYS GIBSON CASE EXPERT

Dr. King Insists Mrs. Szabo Met Death That Way—Startling Story of Scene in Boat.

PAIR BENT OVER, IT'S SAID

Eye-Witness Relates Man Had Hands on Woman and Upset Skiff After She Sank.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Medical testimony to prove that Mrs. Rosina Menschik Szabo, victim of the Greenwood Lake tragedy, was strangled to death was given to-day, the third day in the trial of Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer charged with her murder. A great part of the afternoon was taken up with the examination and cross-questioning of Dr. George W. King, county physician of Hudson County, who was present at the autopsy. Dr. King, who testified he had made 2,000 post-mortem examinations, agreed with the findings of Dr. Otto Schultze of New York, who performed the Szabo autopsy, that the Viennese woman came to her death through strangulation, pressure being applied from the outside of the neck and exerted upward and backward from the front.

The cross-examination was long and involved. Much time was lost in reducing the technical language to words the jury could understand. The most interesting witness and the one whose testimony Isidor Wasservogel, Assistant District Attorney, considered the most damaging to the defense was John Minturn, storekeeper of Sterling Forest. Though he suffered under cross-examination, his testimony was a surprise to the defense and a shock to Gibson and his wife.

Minturn said he saw Mrs. Szabo and the lawyer in the boat on Greenwood Lake on July 16, the day of the tragedy. When first he saw them they were bent over in the boat. He said the man's back was toward him, and both were bending over, close together. The man's left arm was across the upper part of his companion's body—her shoulders or neck. Minturn saw Gibson make a motion with his right hand toward the upper part of Mrs. Szabo's body. In illustration the witness moved his right hand toward the throat of County Detective Mayer, who was posing with him to represent the positions in which the storekeeper saw Mrs. Szabo and Gibson in the boat.

Gibson clenched his teeth and his wife paled. Mrs. Gibson moved nearer to her husband's side.

Minturn told of Mrs. Szabo and Gibson going out of the boat on the side opposite him. He said he saw Gibson come up, swim to the boat, grasp it by the prow, then move along to the stern. He next saw the man in the water tip the boat bottomside up, he testified. The cynical smile was gone from Gibson's face at that point in the story. He, his wife, and his lawyers were leaning across the attorneys' table listening to every word the witness said.

"What then?" asked Mr. Wasservogel. The man in the water hung on to the end of the boat, the witness continued. Minturn saw him hold to the boat with one hand and put the other hand to his shoulder. Then Gibson caught the boat with his free hand and made a similar motion to the opposite shoulder with his other hand.

The cross-examination of Minturn was severe. The chief attack on his credibility was the criticism that he had not given that testimony at the preliminary hearing, where he had answered no to a question whether he then had told all he had seen of the case.

"When you saw Gibson taking off his—" began Robert H. Elder of counsel to the defense. The witness interrupted.

"I did not say that, but that is what I assumed," Minturn corrected.

Mr. Elder said his testimony implied that.

"I am simply telling of the motions I saw the man make," the witness returned.

Minturn was closely questioned as to whether he had suffered mentally at any time. He answered no. He said he had not noticed whether Gibson wore a bathing shirt. When a part of the record of the preliminary examination was read Minturn asserted it was incorrect. He was asked by the cross-examiner whether he doubted the accuracy of the record.

"I think the man who took it down was asleep or did not get it all down," replied the witness promptly.

Fred C. Tilden of the New York Bay Cemetery in Jersey City, told of Gibson's purchase of a $20 lot in the cemetery and the burial of Mrs. Szabo's body. Mrs. Margaret Stearn of 104 West Eighty-ninth Street, New York, was the next witness. She lived with Mrs. Szabo in the house 48 West Sixty-fourth Street, and bought the Austrian woman's furniture. She is an Englishwoman. Mrs. Stearn said Mrs. Szabo told her of her intention of going to Europe. She told of having gone to Mrs. Szabo's door to ask her about the furniture. Gibson was there, she said, and he went out when the door had been opened in response to her knocking. He pushed her aside, advising her not to "part with the property that belonged to me."

Mrs. Stearn testified Gibson returned about July 20 and asked her to buy several of Mrs. Szabo's gowns. Gibson, she said, also wished her to buy Mrs. Szabo's canaries and parrot. In reply to her question, Gibson, she said, told her Mrs. Szabo had gone away and would not return. Mrs. Stearn, like others, spoke of Mrs. Szabo as Mrs. Ritter, the name under which the Austrian woman was known.

The story of a visit by Gibson to the home of Mrs. George Teichmann, 330 West Fifty-fifth Street, New York, in search of mail for Mrs. Szabo, was told by Mrs. Teichmann. Gibson, she related, appeared at her door on July 27 and asked for letters for Mrs. Ritter.

"Why does she not come here?" asked Mrs. Teichmann.

"She has gone to Chicago. She has an old gentleman friend there," Gibson replied, the testimony ran. He afterward said his client had gone to Boston.

Mrs. Louise Marett of 46 West Sixty-fourth Street, New York, said Gibson when he called for Mrs. Szabo's trunks told her the Viennese woman had gone to Chicago to be married. Mrs. Nellie H. Strohm, another tenant in the house, testified that Gibson—who was, she said, a frequent visitor at the Szabo flat—told her that Mrs. Szabo was not coming back. Donald Lyon, the Brooklyn notary, who acknowledged the signature of the alleged Mrs. Menschik to the waiver of citation on July 31, told of the visit to his office of Gibson and the supposed mother of Mrs. Szabo. He described the woman as rather short and stout, between 50 and 60 years old, heavy for her height, round-faced, dressed in black, wearing a small hat covered by a veil. He judged her to be a foreigner.

Mrs. Szabo's will, documents connected with its probate, checks, letters, and other papers were put in evidence. Bank employes told of the Gibson and Szabo accounts. Many of the papers were introduced over objections by the defense. John W. Armstrong of the Franklin Savings Bank, New York, testified that Gibson once told him Mrs. Szabo died of Bright's disease and heart trouble. Another time the lawyer said she died in Warwick, he related, and finally Gibson told the truth as to the place of her death.

Franz Menschik, brother of the Austrian woman, gave very brief testimony as to his family. He identified his sister's signature. The services of the village barber in interpreting not being satisfactory, at the suggestion of Mr. Wasservogel, Charles Goldzier, one of Gibson's lawyers, was sworn in as interpreter. Mr. Goldzier was to have acted in the dual capacity of cross-examiner and interpreter. He was ready to ask the first question, when Gibson forbade cross-examination of the witness.

Dr. King described the condition of Mrs. Szabo's body. His cross-examination was conducted by Dr. John J. A. O'Reilly of Brooklyn, the medical expert of the defense. Through long and devious routes Dr. O'Reilly led Dr. King ever back to his expressed opinion that Mrs. Szabo was strangled—not drowned.

"Could the condition of the organs of the throat, as you described them, have been caused by a grappling hook?" the witness was asked.

"If there was rigor mortis, I don't see how that could have been done," he replied. "If there was no rigor mortis and the body was lifted by a hand about the neck, and if there was sufficient weight, it might do it. A hook never could do it, for it would show outside marks."

"Would any pressure leave a mark?"

"Ordinarily it would."

There followed a long examination as to the different methods of asphyxia and the possibility of producing strangulation without leaving external marks. Dr. King was asked if the lungs were found expanded when a body had been underground fifty-four days. He replied, "As a rule, not."

The enlarged condition of the woman's kidneys was a subject that occupied much time. Justice Tompkins asked:

"Is it charged that her kidneys were the cause of death?"

"They may have been," replied Dr. O'Reilly.

Dr. King was asked if enlarged kidneys might not have been an indication of acute disease, which Dr. O'Reilly described as "striking one down like lightning out of a clear sky." The witness insisted Mrs. Szabo's kidneys did not cause her death.

The effect of an undertaker's frame toward producing conditions of the throat such as those found in Mrs. Szabo's case was taken up. This is an instrument that fits under the head to hold the chin up. Dr. King said the same thought occurred to him and he experimented. His experiments proved that with a frame one could get the effect of pressure backward, as had been exerted in this case, but not the downward pressure. He explained that with a frame he could get half the conditions found in Mrs. Szabo's case. Dr. O'Reilly inquired whether Dr. King had not told him he would testify differently.

"I told you," the witness replied sharply, "that if as a result of an examination or research I would make, I found other conditions, there would be nothing else for me to do but so to report."

"Would there be any traces of drowning?" asked the Justice.

"I should not like to answer that absolutely," the doctor replied.

On re-direct examination, Dr. King testified no undertaker's brace was used in the case of Mrs. Szabo. In reply to a question by Dr. O'Reilly, the witness said pressure on the pneumogastric nerve would cause death instantaneously and without heavy marks of violence and would produce the symptoms found in this case. Answering Justice Tompkins, he said the time it would take to cause death by pressure on that nerve would depend on the skill and strength of the strangler. The straightening of the head by the undertaker could not have produced the conditions found, he added. How the doctors arrived at the weight of the body was explained by Dr. King.

"Who's the best guesser here?" one asked. Then Dr. Schultze guessed from 170 to 175 pounds. Dr. King thought about 150. They felt the body and agreed to split the difference.

Photographs of the organs of Mrs. Szabo's throat were shown. Gibson and his wife betray the same eagerness to see them as at the preliminary hearing. Pictures of the body also were shown.

Dr. Schultze will take the stand to-morrow.

HICKEY IS INDICTED AS SLAYER OF BOY

Police Fear Violence When Prisoner Is Brought from New Jersey to Buffalo Jail.

ACCUSED MAN WILL NOT TALK

Postal Cards Denying Joseph Murder Tell of Killing of Another Missing Boy in Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, Nov. 20.—J. Frank Hickey, under arrest in Toms River, N. J., was indicted to-day and formally charged with the murder of Joseph Joseph, the 7-year-old Syrian boy, whose body was recovered in Lackawanna City last Saturday. J. Craig Roberts, an Assistant District Attorney, left to-day for New York, where he will meet Gov. Dix and have the extradition papers approved.

Hickey, on advice of counsel, has refused to talk since his arrest further than to declare his innocence. He has, it is said in the District Attorney's office, admitted having been in Boston on the dates two postal cards bearing on the murder were mailed to Buffalo, but denies that he wrote those or any other cards.

Commissioners of Police of Lackawanna City to-day asked that when Hickey is brought from New Jersey he be locked up in the Erie County Penitentiary in Buffalo, instead of the city prison at Lackawanna City. The Commissioners say that the people of Lackawanna are much wrought up, and that since the arrest of Hickey frequent threats of violence have been heard.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., Nov. 20.—District Attorney Wesley Dudley and Chief of Police Ray Gilson of Lackawanna, N. Y., reached here this morning. They looked over J. Frank Hickey, who was arrested at Whitings yesterday on their information, and confirmed the Sheriff in the arrest. They say he is the man wanted.

As soon as they had identified Hickey, who spent a quiet night in the county jail, they went to a long-distance telephone and began calling up Lackawanna and Buffalo. As a result of their messages it is expected that some other officer will start for New Jersey to-day by way of Albany, where he will obtain the signature of the Governor to extradition papers directed to the Governor of New Jersey. When these arrive Mr. Dudley will at once apply to Gov. Wilson for his signature.

H. Howard Jeffery, who has been retained by Hickey as counsel, will not oppose the taking of the prisoner to New York.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Three postal cards mailed in different parts of the city this morning came to Police Headquarters during the afternoon purporting to be from the murder of the Joseph boy at Buffalo. One of the cards made this declaration:

"Hickey did not kill the Joseph boy. I did it. If you want to find the body of Joseph O'Connor, the Roxbury boy missing, send men out to the Chestnut Hill woods, where I buried him."

The writing was evidently that of a foreigner, and had the earmarks of a Black Hand letter, being unsigned and adorned with skull and cross-bones.

The Chestnut Hill woods, where it was said the body of the O'Connor boy would be found, is in Brookline, and covers an area of several miles. Police were sent to make a thorough search.

The O'Connor boy has been missing since Nov. 8, and although the police have conducted a search for him no trace has yet been found.

To the People of the United States:

MONTICELLO was the home of Thomas Jefferson.

Monticello is to-day his tomb.

But it is private property, and suffers the desecration of sometimes being lived in.

It is subject to the uncertainties and transfers of individual fortune and the various casualties attendant upon all private property.

The venerated remains there are subject to the uncertainties of private fortune.

The dwelling there is exposed to the dangers and risks incident to private occupation.

Reverence and veneration lead all citizens passing within its reach to visit the grave and dwelling of Thomas Jefferson, but, it being in the hands of a private proprietor, public curiosity and interest are, of necessity, very imperfectly gratified.

Even access to Jefferson's grave is subject to the fancy of private individuals, who thus control the right of American pilgrimage to a shrine which should be as SACRED as it should be FREE.

Monticello should be preserved in the same way as Washington's Mount Vernon, as Jackson's Hermitage, as Lee's Arlington, as Grant's Tomb, as Lincoln's humble Kentucky cabin.

It should be honored and set up on high in the midst of the affections of the people.

More than half a century has elapsed since Jefferson's death—half a century of neglect and ingratitude to his memory.

The remains of the Author of our Independence have lain unhonored, and, by the irony of fate, left to private property and accessible to the processions of thousands of people, who visit there yearly, only through the forbearance of its owner.

Now the day has come when the people of the United States wish to have forever and at all times, for themselves and their children, a LEGAL and INDISPUTABLE RIGHT to visit the grounds, home and grave of Thomas Jefferson.

The day has come when there is a National purpose of causing Monticello to become the property of the Nation in perpetuity, of making it a spot consecrated to patriotism, of establishing it as an enduring remembrance of Thomas Jefferson, and of suitably developing it, that those who go on pilgrimages there may no longer be shocked by the ghastly traces of a Nation's neglect for its glorious dead.

The United States Senate, a Republican body, has passed unanimously a resolution favoring an inquiry into the purchase of Monticello.

The same resolution is ordered, by vote of the Rules Committee, to come up in the House of Representatives the first week of December, 1912.

We believe it is more desirable to acquire Monticello by VOLUNTARY GRANT than by CONDEMNATION.

And we feel with the fullest confidence that the present proprietor of Monticello COULD NOT or WOULD NOT resist the overtures of the people to make Monticello a shrine any more than John Augustine Washington could resist the overtures of the people to make Mount Vernon a shrine.

Surely, we believe there is no man who would deprive Jefferson of the distinction that rightfully belongs to him of having his tomb occupy the position of honor in the Nation due it—alongside Washington's, Jackson's, Lincoln's, and Lee's.

Surely, we believe that the present proprietor of Monticello will not fail to recognize the propriety of public ownership of such a sacred spot—where more than fifty thousand people go every year to pay homage to Thomas Jefferson.

We believe he will not be hostile to the Nation's effort to preserve and suitably honor Jefferson's home and grave, but will listen to the call of the people to honor this Jeffersonian shrine.

We believe that the present proprietor of Monticello will patriotically accede to the wishes of the people to sacredly hold Monticello as the common property of the whole Nation through all time to come, if SUFFICIENT OVERTURES are made to him by the people.

Therefore, believing and hoping this, we call urgently upon the country to do quickly what it has decided must be done, that it may in future have no occasion to mourn over fatal delay or hear the reproach of posterity for want of zeal in transmitting to them, well preserved, so precious a patrimony.

Let there be a call of patriotism throughout the whole land!

Let us redeem the home and grave of Jefferson, and surround it with a preservative guard and maintain it with sacred care!

Let all who enjoy the efforts wrought by Jefferson unite to restore Jefferson to the people, where he belongs, and to place under the guardianship of the whole Nation his unpretentious resting place!

Let the voice of the people speak—and may it not fall upon deaf ears! A word would set all right—but that word has not yet been spoken!

However, we would not be discouraged nor baffled in our work of preserving for all future generations the home and grave of Jefferson, but would triumph!

If the plea of patriotism, made for patriotism, to a man whose position should make him a patriot, remains unanswered; if the wish of the whole country to honor a man who honored the whole country is denied by a man who can honor the whole country; if personal pride in proprietorship and individual love of the ownership of that which can NEVER BE INDIVIDUAL will defeat the purpose and disappoint the hope of the whole Nation, even then do not be discouraged! For in the bosom of this Nation there is a sovereignty—as old as the Nation itself, vindicated by its highest courts, sustained by its ablest jurists, and known of all its public men—which will enable us to turn our wishes into demands, our pleas into legal appeals, and, in the name and for the good of the spirit of patriotism, we shall take, by right of eminent domain, for the use of the Nation to-day, to-morrow, and forever, this place which holds the name of the Nation's Builder and marks the scene of the work that he did in its building.

I do not propose that the Nation take the home of the proprietor of Monticello. His home is in New York, where he was born, where he was educated, where he lives, where he votes, and from where he is elected to Congress.

But I propose that, if necessary, the Nation take the HOME of THOMAS JEFFERSON—the home which he built, which he inhabited, and which he surrounded with history and tradition; a home which speaks of him only, and which was open to the people of this country day and night as long as he lived; a home in which no other man can have identity; a home which is NOW NO HOME. Its doors are shut, its windows are dark, and there is no life in the place.

Thousands of pilgrims who go there from all over the world must turn away without crossing its threshold or seeing the rooms in which Jefferson lived and died. It is a home of no use to any one. It was the home of Jefferson in life, and it is now his home in death. It must never be put to the ignominious service of giving distinction and satisfaction to any one who simply happens to hold title to it, but it must be used for the beautiful purpose of inspiring us to serve out country as Jefferson did.

Therefore, the taking of it would be the mere taking of the TITLE of Mr. Levy—but the HOME of Thomas Jefferson.

Let us all work together to honor the memory of Thomas Jefferson.

Mrs. MARTIN W. LITTLETON.
Managing Director of The Jefferson Monticello Memorial Association of America.

HARPER & BROTHERS

BECKER INFORMERS NOW READY TO FLIT

Schepps West for Vaudeville, Webber to Europe, Rose and Vallon Won't Tell.

ROSE HAS A BOOK READY

Gunmen to be Sentenced Tuesday—Becker's Lawyer Serves Notice of Appeal.

Sam Schepps, "Bridgey" Webber, Jack Rose, and Harry Vallon, whose stories convicted Charles Becker and the four gunmen of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, will be released from the West Side Prison to-day. All four plan to leave New York at once, although they all assert that their lives would be perfectly safe here, since the spirit of the gangsters has been broken by the death of "Big Jack" Zelig and the conviction of the four members of his gang.

Jack Rose, the central figure of the two murder trials, has nearly finished a book on which he has been engaged most of the time since he was arrested last July. He calls it "Twenty Years in the Underworld." While the book is chiefly autobiographical, Rose has informed his present counsel, Bernard Sandler, that a number of policemen and police officials will appear in the volume under assumed names, and that his reminiscences will make disagreeable reading for many who had dealings with the bald gambler before he became the personal collector and stool pigeon for the leader of the Strong-Arm Squad. Rose has refused to make known his destination when he leaves New York. He said that he would not return until the ill-feeling which the publication of his book will arouse has had time to subside.

"Bridgey" Webber has told his friends that he will leave for three months of travel abroad shortly after his release from prison. Webber has been suffering severely from sciatic rheumatism and may have to remain here a few days for treatment. Webber, however, will return to New York. According to his council, Max Steuer, Webber has a deep affection for this city in which he has accumulated a fortune estimated at $100,000 by running poker tables, and he believes he would be unhappy if he should take up residence elsewhere. Webber may have to curtail his trip if the District Attorney desires his testimony at the John Doe inquiry. All four of the prisoners are pledged, personally and through their counsel, to come at once to this city if he sends for them. Harry Vallon's plans are more indefinite, but he has told his counsel that he will not spend the Winter in this city.

No $200 a Week for Schepps.

Sam Schepps will go into vaudeville after spending a few weeks at Hot Springs. He received a telegram yesterday afternoon from a Western vaudeville circuit offering him $200 a week. Schepps considered this so low a bid for services such as his that he instructed the messenger to wire the reply: "There is no answer." According to Bernard Sandler, counsel for Schepps, three better offers than $200 a week have been received from Western vaudeville companies. Schepps does not expect to have an engagement to appear in this city. His number will be a monologue.

All four men are fairly well supplied with money. When he was arrested, Rose had a good sum of money which he had saved out of graft collected from gambling houses, and since he has been in jail he has made money by marketing his writings. Schepps has wealthy relatives to help him out Webber is fairly rich in his own right, and Vallon came into $2,000 a few days ago which he had furnished as bail money for "Jack" Zelig.

Sam Schepps, the only one of the four who will be tried, will be in court to-day. He has been held on a technical charge of vagrancy. He will be taken this morning before Magistrate Murphy of the West Side Court and dismissed by consent of the District Attorney. The others will be freed at the West Side Prison. In their cases the order for release will come from Coroner Feinberg, by whom they were held as material witnesses.

Rose, Vallon, and Webber will probably be released in the afternoon. The four informers dread facing the mob which is expected to gather to-morrow to receive them back. They were anxious to be allowed to depart from prison at some unexpected hour, so that they could escape being stared at and trailed. Bernard Sandler, their counsel, said yesterday that District Attorney Whitman had promised to place no obstacle in their way if they could smuggle themselves secretly out of the prison. The rumor was started that the gates of the West Side Prison would be swung open for them some time last night. District Attorney Whitman, however, positively denied that the informers would be let out before daybreak, and said that Rose, Vallon, and Webber would probably be freed in the afternoon.

The gunmen's counsel will apply early this morning to Commissioner Waldo for a guard of policemen both in uniform and plain clothes. As soon as they are at liberty the informers will get into automobiles. They have so far made it a secret where they are going.

Interviewers were barred from the West Side Prison yesterday. Mrs. Rose and Mrs. Webber, however, were permitted to call on their husbands. Both were indignant that their husbands were not released yesterday. Rose was allowed to see other callers. One of these was a man who carried a bulky bundle. The guard asked him what was in the bundle, and he said: "Bottled goods for Mr. Rose." He was admitted without argument.

William Shapiro, driver of the murder car, whose testimony sealed the fate of the gunmen, will probably be released to-morrow. He is under indictment for murder and will have to appear before Justice Goff before the order of dismissal is granted. Shapiro also intends to leave the city, taking with him his mother, who induced him to tell the truth, instead of shielding the murderers of Rosenthal. Shapiro has no money. District Attorney Whitman has personally interested himself in Shapiro and will help him to get a new start in life. It was learned yesterday that, in taking the stand to testify for the prosecution, Shapiro had not only braved threats of death, but had turned his back on the offer of $2,500 and a new automobile.

The Gunmen's Sentence.

The four gunmen who were convicted of murder Tuesday were taken into court at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning and remanded by Justice Goff for sentence next Tuesday. Charles G. F. Wahle, their counsel, moved that Wednesday be set as the date for sentence. Justice Goff objected that Wednesday would be Thanksgiving Eve, and Tuesday was decided upon at the suggestion of Attorney Wahle.

The four defendants in court yesterday were self-contained, though unusually pale and subdued.

Attorney Wahle said yesterday that he would move on Tuesday that the verdict of the jury be set aside on the ground that the thirty minutes they took for deliberation was insufficient and showed that they had failed to consider the evidence. The gunmen will be taken to the death house at Sing Sing. Sheriff Julius Harburger announced yesterday that a guard of four Deputy Sheriffs would accompany them.

Joseph A. Shay, counsel for Charles Becker, filed notice of appeal yesterday on the District Attorney. This acts automatically as a stay of execution. Mr. Shay said yesterday that the appeal would not be prepared for at least three months. Within the next two or three weeks, however, he will submit affidavits purporting to contain new evidence throwing light on the Becker case, and will move before the Supreme Court to have a new trial granted on the strength of it. The affidavits will be directed chiefly to establish that Schepps was an accomplice in the murder of Rosenthal.

PEACE IN MONEY INQUIRY.

Untermyer Convinces Committee He Is Acting Impartially as Counsel.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Samuel Untermyer of New York convinced the "Money Trust" investigating committee to-day that their suspicions that he was utilizing his position as counsel for the committee for his own purposes were not well founded. Mr. Untermyer will remain as counsel and will take the principal part in the examination of witnesses yet to be called.

Some members of the House Committee on Banking and Currency had an idea that Mr. Untermyer might have been responsible for certain newspaper publications purporting to give the result of some special work done by accountants under Mr. Untermyer's direction for the use of the committee. It was known also that other members of the committee felt that Mr. Untermyer in the enthusiasm of his work for the Pujo sub-committee contemplated broadening the inquiry to permit of recommendations for banking reform legislation. This would have involved a conflict of jurisdiction between the Pujo sub-committee, which was assigned only to uncover the activities of the so-called Money Trust, and the Glass sub-committee, instructed to consider banking and currency. The line of demarcation between the work of these two sub-committees is to be definitely preserved.

Another source of displeasure, existing as late as last night, was a belief that important prerogatives of the sub-committee were being passed over to counsel. Some members thought that in future hearings the sub-committee should participate more actively in the interrogation of witnesses, and upon this issue there is also a complete understanding and harmony.

No quorum was present at to-day's conference of the sub-committee. Mr. Untermyer left for New York this afternoon.

REUNITED AFTER 44 YEARS.

Suit Over Savings Brings Together Heirs of Man Who Died in 1868.

Frederick Cullmann, a laborer who came to this country from Germany soon after the civil war, died in New York in 1868 and left a strip of land, two savings bank accounts worth then less than $2,000, and four children, who were placed in the House of Refuge on Randall's Island.

The children were adopted by various benevolent persons in 1870 and 1871; the executor of the estate of the father, Andrew Mueller, left New York in 1884, and not until two years ago did the four heirs at law know that they had brothers and a sister alive and that comfortable sums of money had been drawing interest to their advantage for almost half a century.

Frank Cullmann became Assistant Treasurer of the Metropolitan Opera House. He kept track of his sister, but the two other brothers passed out of their lives and out of each other's lives, also.

Until a few years ago, when the Bowery Savings Bank published an announcement of dormant accounts older than twenty-five years, no word passed between the children of Frederick Cullmann, and, with the exception of the two who had been adopted by Miss Fenn, none had knowledge of the existence of the others.

It was found that the pittance left by Frederick Cullmann in the Bowery Savings Bank had increased to the sum of $3,200. Lawyers and detectives with an eye to the long chance determined to seek out the missing heirs.

The result was a reunion. The happy family took the $3,200, gave half of it to the lawyers, and were about to return to their respective houses when the news came that the Metropolitan Savings Bank had another windfall for the heirs of the thrifty old German immigrant who died in 1868.

But this money which the Metropolitan Savings Bank held was not so easily extracted. In 1868 the deposits amounted to $868; to-day $2,939.29 stands to the credit of Andrew Mueller, trustee under the estate of Frederick Cullmann, deceased. The bank when approached refused to give up the sum until Mueller was accounted for and legal evidence of the status of the four Cullmanns was presented. It was to settle this dispute that a case came up for trial yesterday morning before Justice Platzek in the special term of the Supreme Court.

It is expected that Mueller, who has been missing twenty-eight years, will be adjudged legally dead, and that the money will help swell the fortunes of the four reunited Cullmanns.

ATTACKS FEDERAL SUGAR.

Government Begins Action to Recover $119,080 for Undervaluations.

The United States officials began proceedings yesterday to recover from the Federal Sugar Refining Company, a New York corporation, $119,080.98, which it claims on the undervaluation of sugars imported from Java and other places from the time its refinery was opened at Yonkers in 1902 to some time in 1909, some months after William Loeb, Jr., was made Collector of this port. Marshal Henkel served the summons and complaint yesterday on Claus Spreckels, as President of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, at the office of the company, 138 Front Street.

The complaint, though signed by District Attorney Wise, was drawn by Winfred T. Dennison, Assistant United States Attorney General, and H. Cleveland Runyon, special assistant to Attorney General Wickersham, who was associated with ex-District Attorney Stimson in the prosecutions of 1909 and 1910, growing out of the frauds discovered at the piers of the American Sugar Refining Company.

Mr. Runyon gave out a statement yesterday, in which he said that the American, Arbuckle's, and the National had all settled similar claims, and that it appeared that from the opening of the refinery at Yonkers in 1912 down to a time in the year 1909 the weights used by the Federal company as a basis for the purchase price were uniformly and continuously higher than the weights of the same sugars returned by the United States customs weighers.

$25 FOR FEARING NEW YORK.

Judge Foster Thinks Fine Enough for Cornwall Pistol Toter.

Judge Foster in General Sessions yesterday fined Giuseppe Rospelli, a shoemaker of Cornwall, N. Y., $25 for carrying a revolver.

"You are a 'country jay' according to your own statement," said Judge Foster. "When you came to visit this city you thought it necessary to put a pistol in your pocket. I am not surprised at this, when what the Mayor calls our 'Yellow journals' have been giving so much space to gunmen and gunmen's doings. It is no wonder country people carry their pistols when visiting our city. I shall inflict a small fine of $25 and I hope you will return to your town and warn other people who desire to carry a pistol. I also hope you will pay us the compliment of assuming that we are a decent, law-abiding community."

Divorce Decree for Mrs. Siebrecht.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Mrs. Julia W. A. Siebrecht of New Rochelle obtained a final decree of divorce from Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., of Siebrecht & Son, florists of New Rochelle, from Supreme Court Justice Morschauser this morning. Mrs. Siebrecht was awarded $100 a month alimony and the custody of two children, Louise and Arthur. The father obtained the custody of two other children, Henry and Gertrude Siebrecht, providing they were not allowed to associate with Mrs. Frankie Minor of New Rochelle, the co-respondent named in the action.

POLICE KEPT GUNS FOR THIEVES, HE SAYS

Crisuolo, Who Helped Rob Miss Nichols, Tells Curran Committee Sleuths Shielded Gangsters.

KNEW THEY WERE POLICEMEN

Gamberdela and Cava Did Not Conceal Their Calling and Planned Robberies for Profit, Witnesses Say.

Rafael Crisuolo, a member of the gang of thieves with which it was alleged Policemen Gamberdela and Cava were associated, testified before the Curran Investigating Committee yesterday. The other witnesses were Joseph Swee and Charles Jones, also named as associates of the gangsters. Crisuolo's testimony corroborated that of the witnesses who had declared that the two policemen did not conceal the fact that they were policemen from the criminals with whom it was charged they associated. The witness also declared that Deputy Commissioner Dougherty was dissatisfied with the work of the two policemen while they were attached to the Detective Bureau.

This testimony was introduced to show that Gamberdela and Cava had a double motive in planning robberies—one to profit by the proceeds of the crimes and the other to capture criminals, so as to strengthen their position in the department. Crisuolo was a willing witness. Neither he nor the other witnesses of the day were asked to waive immunity, because Mr. Buckner, the counsel for the committee, was willing that they should profit by testifying. After Crisuolo and Swee had testified, a man who knew them said:

"I have advised those young men and all of their kind who have helped this investigation to have every pocket in their clothing big enough to hold a gun sewed up tight. If they don't they will find themselves framed up by the police and sent to prison. There has been so much of this story telling by crooks in the courts and before committees that the police are desperate, and they will try to teach the criminals a lesson by sending some of them to prison for long terms.

Tells of Plot to Rob Girl.

Crisuolo said he was 24 years old and that he lived at 150 Mott Street. He was one of the men concerned in the robbery of Miss Nichols in front of the Germania Bank a few months ago. Gamberdela and Cava were accused of planning that crime to catch the criminals and so get credit at Headquarters. Crisuolo escaped, but he was arrested the next day and was identified in the West Side Prison by a masked man who Crisuolo said was Gamberdela. He was tried and acquitted. Crisuolo was known among his kind as "Pish." He told of the plot to rob Miss Nichols and of the robbery of Mrs. Annie Sugar, proprietor of a cider saloon in Sixth Street.

In the course of Crisuolo's testimony it was shown that Gamberdela, the older policeman of the two, did most of the planning. He let Cava appear at places where crimes were to be committed, and he did this, it was said, to make sure that the thieves should not escape with their loot without dividing up with the police. Swee usually acted as lookout. The danger points in a crime were divided between the other members of the gang. Crisuolo, in his testimony, referred to other crimes which he said the policemen had arranged to have the gang commit, of which the committee had not heard before.

One night, while members of the gang were in Charley Jones's cigar store in Fourteenth Street with the two policemen, he said, the talk ran, as usual, on the topic of successful burglaries and robberies where costly loot was obtained and where all of the criminals escaped. Gamberdela, according to Crisuolo, told of a resort in West Fifty-sixth Street where much money could be made without any danger at all. It was pointed out that robbing lawless places was safe enough because those robbed did not dare to appeal to the police. The gang decided to rob the resort and the members arranged a night on which they were to meet to commit the crime.

"Were you all armed?" Mr. Buckner asked.

"Yes; we all had guns," the witness replied.

"Were you not afraid to carry them in the streets?"

"No; because at the first sign of danger we gave the guns to Leo," (the name under which the thieves knew Gamberdela,) "for he had a right to carry a gun, being a policeman."

Crisuolo said that when they arrived at the house they intended to rob, Gamberdela and Cava stood on the other side of the street, Swee was "lookout," and he and two others went in. He said there was nothing in the place worth the risk of taking, so they came out and reported to Gamberdela. Then, according to the witness, Gamberdela displayed much dissatisfaction, and said to them:

"What are you afraid of? Go back."

But Crisuolo said he refused, and that Gamberdela was angry. Then in order to clinch the proof that the gang knew that Gamberdela and Cava were policemen, Mr. Buckner asked:

"Did you ever hear Gamberdela say anything about his police work?"

"Oh, yes," replied Crisuolo. "One day he took off his shield in Jones's cigar store and threw it on the floor and said the job was no good. He said he got no money, that he had no clothes, and that he was in debt and had a wife to support and could not do it on the pay he got."

Crisuolo told about a conversation which he said took place between Gamberdela and Cava. He said they were talking of finding some place to rob, and some one suggested Mrs. Sugar's saloon. Then the witness told about being arrested for the Germania Bank robbery. He said that when he was taken to Police Headquarters Deputy Commissioner Dougherty struck him repeatedly because he said he did not know criminals whom Mr. Dougherty had asked him about. When Crisuolo learned that the only way he coul avoid being beaten was to admit knowing the men he took this course, and when thereafter Mr. Dougherty asked him if he knew any men he eagerly replied that he did.

"I learned quick," said the witness.

Took Police Beating as a Joke.

Crisuolo said that "Pete the Burglar," otherwise known as Peter Ramaglio, laughed at him when he came out of the room.

"Then Pete was taken before Mr. Dougherty and treated in the same way," the witness said.

"So when 'Pete' came out," he declared, "I had a good laugh at him."

Joseph Swee, the next witness, was the lookout in the Germania Bank robbery. He escaped and the police reported that they could not find him. Mr. Buckner displayed a good deal of interest in Swee because it was said the police intended to let all but two of the gang escape. Parisi and De Blase, the convicts whose affidavits gave the first evidence of the policemen's connection with the thieves, were captured and sent to prison for long terms. Mr. Dougherty said he had tried to catch Swee, and Cava also told the committee that he had endeavored, but without success, to arrest him. Swee told the committee yesterday that he had gone to Harlem after the bank affair and had stayed there a short time, when he returned to his old haunts.

"I have known Gamberdela for ten years," said Swee, "and when I was with him on the street and other detectives came near Gamberdela would take my gun and carry it for me, so that I should be in no danger of arrest. We used to keep our guns in Jones's cigar store in Fourteenth Street. The policemen knew we kept our guns there."

Swee told again the story of the Germania Bank robbery and declared that Gamberdela and Cava knew all about it before it was committed.

Capt. John J. Ormsby, who was in command of the Fifth Street Police Station when Mrs. Sugar was robbed, then testified that he had tried to find the policeman who was on fixed post in the neighborhood at the time who was accused of letting the robbers escape, but had not succeeded.

Then Charles Jones, proprietor of the cigar store where the policemen and thieves met, was called as a witness. He is a short, thick-set man. He said his real name was Charles Rizo and that his parents were Italians. He was asked about the revolvers that Crisuolo said he had kept in his store for the members of the gang. "Jones" said he did keep a revolver in his store. He explained it in this way:

"I once had a quarrel with Jack Zelig and I expected that he and his gang would come around some night and shoot up my store, and maybe kill me. When Zelig was killed I still kept the gun because I thought some of his gang would do for me anyway."

Harold S. Deming, one of Mr. Buckner's assistants, asked the cigar dealer if he kept revolvers in his store for the use of members of the gang. Jones said that he did not. He only kept his own gun there, he said. In the course of the hearing it was testified that Policemen Gamberdela and Cava had tried to persuade members of the gang to rob a stuss game in Ninth Street in a room behind a restaurant. Several members of the gang looked the place over, it was said, and reported that the game was not running and that there was no bankroll in sight. Gamberdela and Cava, it was said, expressed much discontent with this statement.

The hearing will be resumed to-day.

FINES POLICE CAPT. SHAW.

Officer Charged with Failing to Maintain Discipline.

A fine of twenty days' pay was imposed yesterday upon Capt. William Shaw of the Parkville Station in Brooklyn because of a visit paid to his precinct recently by Chief Inspector Schmittberger, who found six patrolmen off post. The Captain was charged with failure to maintain proper discipline.

Commissioner Waldo announced yesterday the dismissal from the force of Patrolman Miller of the Liberty Avenue Station, in Brooklyn, found guilty of having been absent without leave for five consecutive days, and of Patrolman Sanguinetto of the Adams Street Station, in the same borough, who was found guilty of boisterous behavior in a liquor store.

TURNS DOWN PIER REQUESTS.

Tomkins Has No More Room—State for Uptown Piers.

Dock Commissioner Tomkins gave out yesterday copies of letters he had received from representatives of steamship lines abroad asking for dock facilities in the city, but which he had had to decline for lack of pier space. The Commissioner put the blame up to the Board of Estimate, saying that that body refused to appropriate money enough to build more piers.

One letter came from the A. H. Bull Steamship Company, which wanted to use the quartermaster's Pier No. 12, North River. Commissioner Tomkins replied that this pier was necessary for the transaction of Government business and that there was little possibility of the Government vacating it.

P. P. Benham & Boyesen, agents for the Norwegian-American Line, also wrote asking for docking facilities at Thirty-third Street Brooklyn, and stating that the line was building two steamers, the first of which was expected to reach New York next April. Commissioner Tomkins wrote that the Dock Department had a large number of prior applications on file, including one from the Hamburg-American Line, and that aside from this pier the department had no other available pier facilities at this port.

A member of the commission to investigate port conditions in New York Harbor said yesterday that the commission had made a preliminary report to Gov. Dix, which included a recommendation that the city immediately move to develop the territory from Forty-second Street north on the west side of Manhattan, where piers of sufficient length to accommodate the big boats for many years to come may be constructed in the shortest time.

The Board of Estimate will hold a hearing at 11 o'clock this morning to discuss the merits of the proposed improvements.

IMPROBABLE PROMISES

The obligations we assume as to time of completion on many buildings often arouse a great deal of skepticism.

Yet the progress we make on a building, once we get under way, is such that this skepticism is usually routed long before the actual contract date for completion is reached.

We make this point to emphasize the fact that, in our anxiety for business, we have never committed the folly of making promises which we were not competent to fulfil.

HURRICANE WORKS HAVOC IN JAMAICA

Forty-two Persons Killed at Montego Bay—Enormous Damage to Property.

TWO TOWNS ARE WIPED OUT

Savanna la Mar and Lucea Destroyed by a Tidal Wave—Governor Goes to the Scene of Disaster.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Nov. 20.—The western end of this island has been devastated by a hurricane which lasted for five days.

A great tidal wave swept over both the north and south coasts, practically wiping out the towns of Savanna la Mar and Lucea, both of considerable importance.

According to a report brought in by steamer to Port Antonio forty-two persons were killed at Montego Bay, where the entire wharf frontage was wrecked.

All the coast roads have been wrecked along the southwestern coast, and incalculable damage has been done. It is not likely that telegraphic communication between Kingston and the scene of destruction will be resumed for a week.

The latest reports indicate that the tidal wave swept over Savanna la Mar and adjacent villages for a quarter of a mile inland. The effects of the hurricane extended along the coast eastward to Black River, about twenty-five miles from Savanna la Mar, where the residential quarter was wrecked.

The Governor of Jamaica left here on a special train to-day, accompanied by a detachment of artillerymen, who took with them 300 tents and foodstuffs, as in certain sections the people are homeless and destitute.

The gale began on Nov. 15 and continued in increasing fury for five days. Vessels arriving here report that the wind was blowing over 100 miles an hour.

The observer at the meteorological station in the western part of the island sent the following report to-day: "The full force of the hurricane struck here on Monday. The observatory was partly wrecked."

Lucea is a town of 2,000 inhabitants on an inlet on the northwest coast, while Savanna la Mar is a seaport with the same number of inhabitants on the southwest coast.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Loss of life in Jamaica was reported in a cablegram received by the United Fruit Company from Port Antonio to-day. The message said that the steamer Admiral Dewey had arrived at Port Antonio from the northwest coast. No mention of the number killed or the value of the property destroyed was made.

The company received word on Monday from Jamaica that the banana plantations had not then been seriously damaged. Most of the losses on the island were then reported as due to torrential rains.

FRENCH-AMERICAN LECTURES

Series Inaugurated in Paris in Presence of Brilliant Audience.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The United States section of the Franco-American Committee to-day brilliantly inaugurated a series of ten public lectures, some in French and some in English, the general subject of which is the historical, artistic, and social relations between the United States and France.

French and American society persons filled the Michel Theatre this afternoon to hear the opening lecture, by Emile Boutreux of the French Academy, on "American Thought and French Thought."

The succeeding lectures, to be given at intervals of a week, will be delivered by Leonce Benedite, Curator of the Luxembourg Museum; Dr. David Jayne Hill, ex-United States Ambassador to Germany; James H. Hyde, Louis Gillet, the well-known writer and art critic; Paul W. Bartlett, the artist; Judge Walter Berry, Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, Morton Fullerton, and Prof. James M. Baldwin of Baltimore.

CHINA PROTESTS TO RUSSIA.

Republic Demands Control of the Foreign Affairs of Mongolia.

PEKING, Nov. 20.—The Chinese Government has opened negotiations with the Russian Legation in respect to Russia's recent recognition of the autonomy of Mongolia, which has created anti-Russian agitation throughout the province.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs to-day visited the Legation and voiced China's claim to the control of Mongolia's foreign relations. He suggested that no foreign power should send troops to Mongolia and that China's representatives should have the same status there as in Tibet.

Recent dispatches indicated that many of the Mongolian Princes were strongly opposed to the convention between Russia and Mongolia by which Russia recognized and guaranteed the independence of Mongolia. They urged President Yuan Shi-Kai to afford military protection to those Mongolians who were ready to join the Chinese Republic.

Chinese troops to the number of 45,000, attached to the Northern Army, are already under orders to proceed to the Mongolian frontier if necessary.

MARCONI COMING HERE.

To be in New York in January—Still Being Attended by an Oculist.

VENICE, Nov. 20.—William Marconi has decided to leave here for London in a few days on the way to New York, where he expects to arrive at the beginning of January.

Mr. Marconi is still under the care of an oculist, who is engaged in perfecting the matching of his artificial eye.

Secretary Stimson at Panama.

PANAMA, Nov. 20.—Secretary of War Stimson and his party, which includes Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the President, arrived here to-day. Mr. Stimson had a conference with the Congressional Committee, which left here to-night.

FEARS FRENCH WIRELESS.

British Postal Official Warns Commons Against Further Delay.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—An important statement as to the necessity of avoiding delay in arranging for a wireless plan for the British Empire was made to-day by Sir Alexander Bing, Secretary to the Post Office, to a select committee of the House of Commons which is considering a proposed contract between the British Post Office and the Marconi Company. He explained that the reason for hurry was the great danger of being forestalled.

"If you get a long distance station," he said, "it is impossible to put up another one anywhere near for the long-distance wave length. I have in view some information regarding a French scheme which I hope shortly to place before the committee."

Asked by the Chairman of the committee if it was a French Government scheme, Bing replied in the affirmative.

SILENT ON SHIPPING MERGER.

Officials of Big British Companies Refuse to Discuss Rumors.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—There is general disinclination in shipping circles to talk about the reported combination involving the British India Steam Navigation, Cunard, Furness, Withy Peninsular and Oriental, and Royal Mail Steam Packet Companies.

For some months various rumors have been current, one effect of which has been activity on the Stock Exchange in various shipping shares. It is for this reason that those who know the facts refuse to talk about them.

At the offices of the Royal Mail Company to-day Sir Owen Philips, who is generally credited with being the prime mover in the projected combination, refused to say anything, while the Secretary of the company said:

"Owing to the use made on the Stock Exchange of anything we might say on the subject it behooves us not to be silent. If we deny a report the bears make use of it, and anything we might say in the other direction would be greatly exaggerated by the bulls, so we have decided to say nothing."

KAHN SEES GOOD PROSPECTS

Thinks Balkan War a Blessing—No Fear of Hurried Tariff Revision.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—In an interview on the financial situation, Otto H. Kahn said to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the Balkan war had been a blessing in disguise. "For," he said, "once they get it settled, it removes a cloud which has been threatening the world for years. If the Serbs and Austrians can arrange their differences—and I see no reason why they cannot, for the world doesn't want any more war—prospects seem extremely good.

"Of course, the tariff question is a retarding but not a disturbing factor. Business can shape itself to any conditions, but it must know what these conditions are. Of one thing I am certain: Nothing will be done in regard to tariff revision in a hurry or in slapdash fashion, but only after deliberate and careful consideration."

PRAISE ITALY'S CAVALRY.

Members of the American Military Mission Are Much Impressed.

MILAN, Nov. 20.—Brig. Gen. McClernand and the other officers of the American military mission have been here for several days studying the Italian cavalry organization.

They expressed to-day to the Count of Turin, the General in command of the cavalry, their very high appreciation of what they had seen, especially of the wonderful training given at the riding school at Rome and of the extraordinary exercises performed there. They also spoke with admiration of the cavalry manoeuvres carried out by the cavalry at Milan in combination with aerial scouts.

CAN'T BUILD HOSPITAL NEAR WATER SUPPLY

Westchester Forbidden by Dr. Porter to Erect a Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Croton.

POLLUTION RISK TOO GREAT

Health Commissioner Sees Special Danger in Sewage Plant Contaminating the City's Water.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 20.—Because of the danger of pollution to the water supply of New York City Commissioner Eugene H. Porter of the State Health Department denied to-day the application of the Board of Supervisors of Westchester County for permission to establish a tuberculosis hospital on Yorktown Heights. Under Section 319 of the public health law the Commissioner of Health must pass on all sites for hospitals outside of cities. Dr. Porter found that the site was three-quarters of a mile from Croton reservoir and that through the property flowed two brooks which entered the reservoir. It was intended to locate a sewage disposal plant about 850 feet from the brook on the west. This would be 3,800 feet from the reservoir and from the mouth of the brook to the aqueduct gatehouse about 850 feet.

"I do not believe that the objection urged as to the damage to property values is sufficient to warrant a rejection of the site on that ground," says Dr. Porter. "The most serious objection urged to the proposed location is the alleged danger of pollution of the water supply of the City of New York, which is drawn from the Croton reservoir. It is proposed to locate this hospital on a farm of 277 acres through which flow two brooks emptying into Croton reservoir. According to the testimony of the engineer for the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity of the City of New York the water from the aqueduct now being constructed by the city from the Catskill region will first be introduced into Croton reservoir. When it is realized that the great population of New York City is dependent upon this supply for potable water, the responsibility involved in passing upon this application appears to be of the utmost importance.

"It also appears that by an act of the Legislature this water supply may be made available for the thriving cities and villages of Westchester County with their rapidly increasing population.

"There can be no positive assurance that a sewage disposal plant, such as it is contemplated erecting here, would always be operated at a maximum of efficiency, and if this is the case a danger of contamination of the water supply would result. Every protection against water-borne diseases that the law can give or science afford should be available to the city to safeguard its water supply.

"It should also be borne in mind that the City of New York has power under the law to protect its watershed from contamination, and that the establishment of this institution at a point where it threatened the water supply might result in proceedings against it by the city, which would be exceedingly expensive to the county.

"In view of the possibilities of danger we must proceed with great caution, and in face of the serious protests of those charged with the protection of the water supply of the City of New York from contamination I cannot accept the responsibility of granting my approval of this site."

O'RYAN FILES PETITION.

Counsel Says Order Disbanding Divisional Organization Was Illegal.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 20.—A supplemental petition was filed with Attorney General Carmody to-day by counsel for Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan of New York, requesting that an action be begun on behalf of the State to test the legality of the recent order of Gov. Dix retiring Gen. O'Ryan from active duty. The petition sets forth various reasons why such an action should be maintained.

Former Supreme Court Justice Gildersleeve, of counsel for Gen. O'Ryan, says that "from a careful study of the provisions of the Constitution and our statutes, it seems clear that the Legislature, by its various enactments, intended that the Major General should be an integral part of the militia division constituting the National Guard of the State, and a permanent officer therein, subject to suspension from active service or removal only as provided by Sections 32, 83, and 132 of the military law."

Justice Gildersleeve contends that the power to organize the militia of the State is legislative and not executive; that the Governor was without authority to create the office of Chief of Staff, to which Adjt. Gen. Verbeck was appointed; that such power is invested only in the Legislature; that the Governor's order assuming to disband the divisional organization of the National Guard was illegal and of no effect; that the Governor did not have the power to retire Gen. O'Ryan, and that such action cannot be supported as a disciplinary measure.

Attorney General Carmody will decide at an early date whether he will grant the application.

SAY PRINCE FIRED BOMB.

Man Indicted for Causing Theatre Explosion is an Italian Nobleman.

Prince Muzio Spodfara of Palermo, 19 years old, who came to this country eighteen months ago, was indicted by the Grand Jury yesterday on a charge of having exploded a bomb in a moving picture theatre at 178 First Avenue on Nov. 9. The maximum sentence for such an offense is twenty years.

The fact that Spodfara was a Prince was established before the Grand Jury by letters in his possession, the testimony of several Italians in this country, and some checks.

The Prince was ejected from the moving picture theatre, and his adieu, so the manager testified, was to declare:

"I am a member of the Camorra, and will thank you for this with a bomb."

Three days later Frank Marrano, a helper at the theatre, noticed Prince Spodfara at an exit of the theatre in Eleventh Street. Prince Spodfara, he said, lighted a match and ran away. The next moment there was a loud report, the door was forced in, and several of the patrons of the show were injured. Prince Spodfara was arrested in a billiard parlor a few hours later by Detective Carrao, who had obtained a description of him from Marrano.

Among the evidence against the accused man presented to the Grand Jury was a half-burned match of a peculiar pink color which was found near the wreckage of the door and corresponded with those in a box found in Spodfara's pocket.

OLD WOODEN HOUSES GOING.

Landmarks in Lafayette Street Giving Way to Business.

Two of the oldest houses in Lafayette Street, landmarks which date back to 1830, are now being torn down for a business structure. The houses occupy a plot on the southeast corner of Fourth Street and what was formerly Lafayette Place. This thoroughfare, which for years was the fashionable residential street of the city, was opened about 1826, and soon afterward the two wooden houses on the Fourth Street corner were built by Mary Waldron, widow of William Waldron, for her two daughters, Maria, the wife of William F. Higgins, and Cornelia. The houses were exactly alike and were set well back from the street, having a wide garden in front. Of late years this front area has been occupied by a carpenter shop, but with its recent demolition some idea of the old residences, now much the worse for wear, can be obtaineed. The property was originally a part of the Elbert Herring farm, of which a portion later came into the possession of Samuel Jones, the eminent jurist, a century ago, and who has left his name upon the map of the city in Little Jones Street.

The Constant Evolution of Style at the House of Fashions Is Responsible for This Disposal of About 500 Imported & Domestic Coats —At Savings of 25 to 40 Per Cent.

Although 500 Coats and Wraps are a mere drop in the bucket we do not wish to choke our stock with a broken size and miscellany until the very end of the season, so we have lowered prices to such a degree that they will virtually be wings to carry the coats away in a hurry.

Every Coat and Wrap, whether imported or domestic, was made for us this season.

The charm and the beauty of the styles are quite proved by the fact that sizes are broken. In the instance of the imported models, we have lessened prices because the variety is dwindling.

As there may be only one or a few Coats of a model, we have grouped them thus:

GROUP A—

Paquin model, $225, was $395—Green plush and moleskin.

Callot model, $175, was $275—White brocade, with white fox collar.

Merchants' Association Campaigners for Members Break One Day's Record Again.

EXPECT TO PASS 1,000 MARK

Chairman Breed Says That the Result of the Present "Walk" Will Be That Citizens Will "Run" Later.

Another record for a day was made by the Merchants' Association yesterday in its campaign to obtain additional members. The new names enrolled carried the total of the new list well toward the 1,000 mark, which it was predicted would be passed to-day. At the afternoon meeting and luncheon in downtown Delmonico's the flying battalions of the association's membership brigade reported that 275 new names had been added to the roll as the result of the morning's work, making the total 780 for the campaign of three days.

This campaign has developed poetry in business along with some other surprises. A firm in Maiden Lane made its application for membership in rhyme, and the author stands by his poetical effort. Alfred G. Belden of A. G. Belden & Co., oil manufacturers, importers, and exporters at 145 Maiden Lane, wrote:

To the gallant quartet who called at my store,
Their message grows with me more and more.
I am for New York; I am for the Nation;
I will gladly join the Merchants' Association.

This application was turned in by Clifford T. Hunt, cashier of the Bank of New York, Chairman of Sub-Committee Sixteen.

The campaign was extended to Brooklyn yesterday. Irving T. Bush of the Bush Terminal Company started the campaign across the river with two new members. Others in Manhattan and Brooklyn who were not able to volunteer for team and committee work announced their intention to assist by individual work wherever possible. An officer of the association said last night:

"The interest aroused by the activity of the Merchants' Association in seeking to enlarge its membership and its income for the promotion and protection of the city's commercial welfare is already having an excellent effect upon business. The feeling of co-operation and of team work which such campaigns engender has never failed to have a stimulating effect upon business."

Not a Pleasure Tour.

A report that the merchants were touring the city in automobiles reached W. C. Breed of Breed, Abbott & Morgan, Chairman of the Membership Committee, yesday, and he said:

"I wish to call attention to the fact that this is no 'auto party.' The merchants of New York are on the 'walk,' and they expect soon to have the citizens of this town on the 'run.' The association has a Committee on Streets. Every citizen is interested in clean streets, and when this campaign is over there will be some knowledge on this subject and probably some communication to the Department of Street Cleaning."

FINDS NEW YORK INDIFFERENT

Chief Reason, Maritime Exchange Hears, for Loss of Commerce.

Speaking at the Maritime Exchange yesterday of the loss of commerce to this port, former Congressman Benjamin L. Fairchild said that in the past New York's greatest drawback had been the indifference of her own people to conditions of vital importance to the city.

Mr. Fairchild said that in handling the immense local traffic both the steamship and the railroad companies showed a pronounced indifference to the through competitive traffic which constitutes New York's commercial life.

"I sometimes think," he went on to say, "that there would be virtue in a boycott where the citizens and merchants of New York would say to that all-powerful culprit, the Pennsylvania Railroad:

"'Until you stop discriminating against us and agree to place New York upon an equal footing with the other Atlantic ports in competitive traffic, we will not ride in your cars, nor ship our immense quantities of local non-competitive freight over your railroad.'"

LOOKS FOR WISE MEN'S RULE.

Dr. Van Hise of Wisconsin Says Professors Will Dominate Country.

President Charles R. Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin submitted to be heckled at Cooper Union last night after delivering an address on "Carrying Education to the People" in the Board of Education free lecture course.

One man wanted to know if President-elect Wilson was not merely an "intellectual highbrow." Dr. Van Hise answered promptly that Mr. Wilson was neither a dreamer nor a "highbrow."

"I have the greatest respect for Gov. Wilson," declared Dr. Van Hise. "Both as a man and as an executive he has shown remarkable capacity and his stand upon the great questions confronting us gives all good citizens cause for hope. I could not say more than that without becoming political in my utterances, and so I must refrain."

Dr. Van Hise said he looked for a future condition in government in this country in which professors from the universities should play the commanding part. These professors would dominate the country, he insisted, not with a politician's viewpoint, but with the viewpoint of scholars intent upon giving the very best returns for their salaries.

CARNEGIE TRUSTEES IGNORE MILLER NOTE

Demand for Explanation of Refusal to Give Wilson a Pension Not Considered.

NOT ELIGIBLE, OFFICER SAYS

Secretary Declares President-Elect Was an Administrator, Not a Teacher.

The Trustees of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching held their seventh annual meeting yesterday morning at the Foundation's offices at 576 Fifth Avenue. Keen interest had been aroused as to the proceedings at this meeting, owing to the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday of Prof. Dickinson S. Miller's letter calling for an explanation from the Carnegie Foundation of what he termed "its strangely irregular action in the case of Woodrow Wilson's application for a pension." In his letter Prof. Miller demanded an explanation on the ground that it was due the teaching profession.

Andrew Carnegie and the twenty-three Trustees present at the meeting yesterday did not discuss Prof. Miller's letter. On their behalf it was said that the Trustees considered Gov. Wilson's application for a pension a closed incident.

The Trustees, with President Peterson of McGill University as Chairman and President Thwing of the Western Reserve University as Secretary, approved the reports of the President, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett; of the Treasurer, Robert A. Franks, and of the Executive Committee.

The Trustees announced that an important bulletin on medical education in Europe had been issued by the Foundation in the year, that the report of the President for 1912, containing a general discussion of educational problems, was in press, and that forty-eight retiring allowances and pensions had been granted in the year, making a total of 398 now in force, at an annual cost of $570,000. The endowment now amounts to $14,000,000, Mr. Carnegie having paid in $2,000,000 since the last meeting of the Trustees. These were the only matters considered.

All the Trustees were present, except David Starr Jordan, Jacob Gould Schurman, and Frank A. Vanderlip. After the meeting the Trustees gave a luncheon at Delmonico's to Mr. Carnegie. As the Trustees departed from the dining room they were asked for a statement in the Wilson controversy which Prof. Miller revived in his letter to THE TIMES.

"Mr. Miller is entirely wrong as to the facts," said President Hadley of Yale. "The Wilson matter was settled a year ago."

"Yes," put in another Trustee, "Mr. Miller was entirely in error."

"Mr. Miller's letter was based on an absolute misapprehension; he read the rules wrong," President Hadley said, with a laugh.

"In what way; won't you explain his misapprehension?" he was asked.

"The printed report of the Foundation speaks for itself; I believe we are not called on to say anything further. Any one is welcome to read the rules who wants to," President Hadley answered. "The late Thomas C. Platt used to say: 'I never bother to deny anything because if I do people will think it is true.' Denials are always dangerous."

Earlier in the day, at the offices of the Carnegie Foundation, Secretary Clyde Furst made public copies of the sixth annual report of the Foundation. He also gave this explanation of the Wilson incident.

"At the annual meeting in November, 1909, which was before the Wilson application was received, the Trustees passed a resolution changing the service pension to disability pension, but instructing the executive committee to safeguard, among other classes, the interests of those whose twenty-five years of service included service as a college President. The committee did not have to pass an application under this resolution automatically, as Mr. Miller says in his letter. On the contrary, the phraseology, 'to safeguard the interests,' left the committee ample discretionary power.

"At the meeting in 1910, the Trustees modified the phraseology of the regulations permitting retiring allowances to be granted in special cases, so as to read, 'The Trustees may also grant a retiring allowance to those whose twenty-five years of service include noteworthy presidential or other administrative work,' the only change being the insertion of the word, 'noteworthy.'

"Mr. Wilson's application, which was received some time between these two meetings, came up for discussion together with many other similar cases. As a result of the discussion it soon became evident that there were great difficulties in the way of carrying out this rule. Every college President might well consider his case an exception, and all of his friends might consider the record of his services noteworthy. This rule could not be administered satisfactorily, and it would be entirely too expensive in operation.

"It seemed best to the committee to make no distinction between Presidents and Professors, but to have only one class covered by the rules for pensions, and at the meeting of the Trustees, in 1911, the action which empowered the executive committee to make exceptions in the case of those whose twenty-five years of service had included 'noteworthy presidential or other administrative work' was rescinded. No person was ever retired under that authority, and Mr. Wilson's was purely a typical case. The matter was permanently settled at that time.

"No personal or political animus was shown, or intended to Mr. Wilson in refusing the application at that time. It was no reflection on him whatever. Why, Mr. Wilson himself had sat on the committee until he resigned the presidency of Princeton, and the men on the committee were his friends. If he were to return to teaching, and should become 65 years old, he would be eligible, and would automatically receive the pension were he to make application."

HALED COL. HARDY TO COURT

Mrs. Krug Said He Pushed Her from His House.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 20.—All Plainfield was interested when Col. oJhn H. Hardy of Park Avenue, that city, was haled before Judge Daly here to-day to answer to the accusation of Mrs. William B. Krug, wife of a New York broker, that he pushed her downstairs and out of his house one day last June, after she had gone there in response to an invitation from Mrs. Hardy.

Col. Hardy admitted that he put her out, but insisted that he had just provocation. Mrs. Krug declared that Col. Hardy tried to set fire to her automobile, and he declared he threatened such a course, by way of speeding an unwelcome guest.

Mrs. Krug had known the Hardy family for years, but Col. Hardy said he found her visits had a bad effect on Mrs. Hardy, often leaving her in a state of mind where she would not speak to him for days afterward. So he served oral and written notice on Mrs. King to keep away. He said that she stabbed him with her hatpin in departing from his house. Besides the criminal action, Mrs. Krug has sued Col. Hardy for $20,000.

Comedian Bequeathed All His Property to His Wife.

Charles A. Bigelow, the comedian, who died on March 12, left an estate of $4,161. He had some $8,902 when he died, but debts reduced this sum. His possessions included bonds of the Lambs Club worth $2,113, a mortgage bond of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club worth $510, and bank deposits of $219.04. All his property was left to his widow, Mrs. Valeria Bigelow.

Mr. Bigelow had appeared with Anna Held in "Alma, Where do You Live?" and in many comic operas. He was a member of the Lambs, Green Room, Larchmont Yacht, and Manhasset Yacht Clubs, the Elks, and the Masons.

B. R. T. HAS $40,000,000 WAITING ON SUBWAYS

Borrowed It at 6 Per Cent. to be Ready, and Is Only Getting 3 While Its Contract Isn't Let.

ALL DISPUTES ARE SETTLED

Service Commission Expects to Advertise the Contracts Any Day Now, Which Will Stop the Loss.

Advertising for bids for the new subways will be more than welcome to the Interborough and the B. R. T., the two companies which alone are expected to act on the advertisements. The B. R. T., it was learned yesterday, is in a particularly hard position. It has already borrowed on notes at 6 per cent., $40,000,000, and has it deposited in banks drawing 3 per cent. interest, and it sees itself losing at the rate of $1,200,000 a year until the actual work on the subway is begun.

The Interborough is in better place. It arranged for the raising of its funds without having to borrow large sums before they absolutely would be needed. It can call on its bankers for the cash as the work progresses. On the other hand, it arranged for the sale of its bonds at 93½, while the B. R. T. will be able to dispose of its securities at 97, so that against the heavy interest which the B. R. T. has to pay at the present moment must be considered the much better terms it will get for its bonds.

It is, however, believed at the offices of the Public Service Commission that the long process of reducing the operating contracts to shape is now almost completed. Chairman Willcox is confident that the advertisements of the public hearings, which must be held before the actual bids are received, can be issued in a very few days, perhaps before Thanksgiven.

It is at last believed that every possible point of controversy with the Interborough has been settled, and that only one or two minor points remain for adjustment with the B. R. T. The lawyers of the Public Service Commission are now engaged in a final survey of the contracts, and unless something untoward crops up in the next few days the contracts will be advertised almost immediately for a public hearing, and the Public Service Commission will be willing to entertain proposals regarding them.

MRS. HETTY GREEN IS 77.

Army of Callers Find Her Hard at Work and Too Busy to See Them.

Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in the United States, is 77 to-day, and is receiving the congratulations of her friends. Mrs. Green spent the eve of her birthday hard at work in the offices of the Westminster Company, 111 Broadway. She refused to see a small army of callers, sending her visitors word that she was too busy to see them. With her was her son, Col. Edward H. R. Green, and her private secretary. Col. Green will probably take his mother for an automobile ride to-day.

Mrs. Green was born in New Bedford, Mass., on Nov. 21, 1835. Her father, Edward M. Robinson, died in 1865, leaving her a large fortune. She married Edward H. Green of New York in 1867. He died ten years ago. Since then Mrs. Green has personally managed her large property.

Fair for Jewish Farmers.

The Federation of Jewish Farmers of America, now in annual convention at the Educational Alliance at East Broadway and Jefferson Street, voted yesterday to hold an indoor country fair in connection with their convention next November, and authorized a committee to obtain a suitable building where the farm and dairy products of the members might be exhibited and sold. Some of them believed that this would be the first step toward a permanent New York City market for the federation.

A. G. VANDERBILT WINS THE NALA CUP

President of Horse Show Association Obtains Permanent Possession of Trophy.

U. S. A. WINS ANOTHER CUP

Broad Water Jumping Contest Captured by Lieut. H. R. Adair of Tenth Cavalry, Riding Fico.

Another notable triumph for United States Army officers and horses in the most spectacular event on the programme of the National Horse Show—the broad water jump—and the competition for the Nala Challenge Cup, the big challenge trophy event of the week, featured the fourth day of the show at Madison Square Garden yesterday. The United States carried off both the blue and the yellow ribbons in the highly spectacular but dangerous jump, the red going to Holland and the white to Belgium. Alfred G. Vanderbilt won the Nala Cup for the third time in succession and thereby gains permanent possession of the trophy.

The crowd which turned out for last night's exhibitions was by far the largest and most brilliant of the week. It was almost a capacity crowd for the Garden, the boxes and galleries being completely filled, while the row of on-lookers around the judging ring was five and six deep. The gowns and the jewels outshone previous efforts of display by as wide a margin as the attendance figures bettered the marks of previous evenings, and for the first time since the show opened there were no defections in the ranks until the bugle sounded taps. The broad-water jump simply held the crowd spellbound as the twenty-eight riders and horses, representing five different countries made the thrilling leap. For once the horse got all the attention, and society, showing at its best, ran a poor second.

The preliminary trial in the water jump called for a jump over a low hedge and fifteen feet of water, the gap being widened one foot after each horse had had had three tries on each trial. The gate was used often in reducing the ranks until finally only four horses survived, when the gap was widened to eighteen feet. Lieut. H. R. Adair of the Tenth United States Cavalry, on his bay gelding Fico, carried off the blue after his horse had performed brilliantly at the various distances. A spill now and then added to the excitement, and plenty of comedy was furnished in the futile efforts of some of the horses to escape the water. But there were no accidents.

The award of the judges in the Nala Cup competition did not please the crowd, and the same feeling existed among some of the prominent drivers, also William P. Kearney, the young Montreal attorney, whose brown trotting bred stallion Triumph got the reserve. The latter showed so well in the ring that it seemed as if Mr. Vanderbilt would have to wait another year to gain permanent possession of the trophy, but the competition was decidedly close. When the award was finally made the spectators made a demonstration in Mr. Kearney's favor such as was made on Wednesday when the Moore entry drew the blue over a team from the Harriman stable, driven by Jack Donnelly. Mr. Kearney circled the ring three times after Mr. Vanderbilt left the inclosure, and he was roundly greeted all the way.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, President of the National Horse Show Association, made his first appearance as a competitor in the contest for the Nala Cup for gig horses, the most coveted prize of the entire show. One of the conditions of this competition is that the bona fide owner of the horse must drive his entry, and Mr. Vanderbilt was behind his chestnut gelding Sir James, which won two legs on this cup in the last two shows. Three victories were necessary before the cup became the personal property of the winner, and by his victory last night secures permanent possession of the trophy.

Competition for this special trophy dates back to 1899, since which time all other prizes of the show have held a secondary place. In that year a cup was donated by the management of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, to become the personal property of a three-time winner, the competition being limited to horses suitable to gigs. This cup was won by Judge William H. Moore with his imported hackney stallion Forest King, and the winner thereupon offered the Forest King Cup for a contest on similar lines. J. W. Harriman gained permanent possession of this cup with his bay stallion Nala, and followed by offering the Nala Cup, which was won last night by Mr. Vanderbilt. The latter announced immediately after his victory that he would offer a cup to be known as the Sir James Cup for future competition, but added that the conditions governing the event would be revised. What changes he has in view Mr. Vanderbilt did not mention.

The first of the two important cups to be contested for was the Biltmore Cup, in which a field of nineteen saddle horses competed for the high honors. The contest finally settled down to a dual battle between Merry Countess, the bay mare entered by Miss Margaret B. Rouss and known formerly as Maid Marian, and Miss H. D. Atterbury's gray gelding Nickel Plate. The former was the winner in this class a year ago, and the latter has been showing wonderful form in the present show. The horses were judged on their conformation, quality, and suitability for park riding.

What was perhaps the most popular victory that the show has yet produced was that of Miss Maud Preece, a young English girl, who seems almost too small to ride a horse. But riding comes natural to the Preece family, and this youngster bids fair to keep the family name to the front. She competed in a class of ten yesterday afternoon on Miss Mona Dunn's brown mare Merrylegs, a namesake of the great horse brought over here years ago from England by Barclay H. Warburton for breeding polo ponies. It proved defective in this respect, and as a show horse won many blue ribbons for six years at the Garden. Little Miss Preece, looking as stern as might be expected from a person many years her senior, handled Merrylegs like a veteran, and after receiving the blue she was greeted with a great demonstration.

But her cup of joy was not entirely filled, even though she got first honors in a field in which many competitors were much older than herself. She explained after the event that three weeks ago she ordered and fitted out a suit to be worn during the present show. This was at a London outfitters, at whose shop her relatives do all their trading of this kind. The suit arrived in New York on the Majestic last Friday, but through delays in the customs office it did not arrive at the Garden until an hour after Miss Preece had received her ovation for riding Merrylegs to victory. Winning a blue in an old suit was far from being as pleasant as a victory in the new one.

The individual race for the greatest number of blue ribbons continued yesterday, and Judge William H. Moore still holds first place by a comfortable margin. But his lead is one less than at the close of the judging on Tuesday night. Mr. Moore got only one blue ribbon yesterday, that being in the appointment class for mares or geldings to be shown to ladies' phaetons, ladies to drive. His sterling Lady Seaton, a most consistent winner during the show, showed the way in this class, being admirably handled by Mrs. C. Blaisdell. While Mr. Moore was annexing his lone blue ribbon his entries were beaten three times. He drew one red ribbon and one yellow, getting outside the awards in the Nala Challenge Cup class for horses suitable to gigs.

Meanwhile Miss H. D. Atterbury, who had been his closest competitor for first honors since the opening of the show, was a double winner, and she now has six blues, to nine for Judge Moore. Her pair of saddle horses, Patricia and Kildare, got the blue in the class for the Sherry Cup, and she scored a second noteworthy triumph with the gray gelding Nickel Plate, winner of two other blue ribbons, in the class for saddle horses for the Biltmore Challenge Cup. Other prominent winners of the previous days who increased their score yesterday were J. Campbell Thompson and Charles E. Bunn, each of whom have now won four blue ribbons.

AWARDING THE RIBBONS.

Miss Dunn, English Exhibitor, Wins Her First Prize in Pony Class.

Two-year-old Clydesdale stallions were carded for the judges to open the morning session and this class furnished the first break in the show. Three had been entered by Graham Brothers of Claremont, Ont., but all were detained in Canada by sickness, and the class was void. Other entries by the same firm in classes for Clydesdales of more advanced age have been scratched for the same reason.

With the Clydesdale class canceled, the remainder of the morning was devoted to the judging of breeding classes of polo ponies and of horses suitable to become hunters. Irvington Model, several times a winner at Garden shows in the class of pony stallions three years or over, was supplanted in this class yesterday by Lynhurst Phosphorus, a 13.2 hand bantam brought over from England especially for this show, and entered by M. F. Goodbody of England.

Allan Pinkerton's small thoroughbred, Booger Red, duplicated his 1911 victory among the stallions suitable for getting polo ponies. There were only two other competitors in this class—August Belmont's Factor and Thomas J. Regan's Stalwart Model, and they followed the winner in the order named. In a new class, that for pony mares suitable for getting polo ponies, the blue went to John S. Phipps's black mare, Moonlight, an English importation. August Belmont got another red in this class with his bay mare Be Good.

F. Ambrose Clark's bay gelding Supplement gained the blue over a field of nine competitors in the class for horses suitable to become middleweight hunters. In a similar class for horses suitable to become lightweight hunters first honors went to Bob Bryan, a chestnut gelding entered by S. Bryce Wing. This gelding, a four-year-old, stands 16.1 hands and is a wonder for its age in development.

The morning session closed with a preliminary test for jumpers and this furnished the usual number of thrills. The test was over jumps of five feet and three of the hunters—Miss Nancy Gumming's Luzon, August Belmont's Mad Harry and Calvin Reynolds's Tully Tillie, threw their riders hard, but none was injured. Two horses, Hon. Adam Beck's Sir Edward and Shamrock, entered by the Aylward Riding Academy, alone made the two rounds without a fault.

J. Campbell Thompson annexed his fourth blue ribbon of the show in the first afternoon class, for novice harness horses over 15.3 hands. One of the features was the return to the ring of Dr. W. E. Woodend, a noted exhibitor of a few years ago. He was behind his chestnut mare Lady Howard and got the white ribbon.

After repeated failures to win a blue ribbon in the earlier saddle classes, Miss Mona Dunn, the English exhibitor, succeeded in Class 101, for ponies under saddle between 12 and 13.1 hands. Her entry, Merrylegs, was admirably handled by little Miss Maud Preece, an eight-year-old English girl. There were ten saddle horses in this class, but the victory was a most popular one.

In the class for single roadsters E. T. Stotesbury's Ruby, the 1911 champion, again won the blue. This was one of the Stotesbury pair which was gated yesterday because her mate, Norcata, had a bad tendon and a bog spavin.

Miss H. D. Atterbury's chestnut mare, Patricia, which had previously accounted for two blue ribbons, including one over Miss Mona Dunn's bay mare Sceptre, was beaten by the latter in a class for saddle horses ridden by women. Sceptre was up to her real form yesterday and was vastly improved in both coat and manners as compared with her showing Monday night.

William H. Moore added his ninth blue of the show in the class for women to drive in phaetons, Mrs. H. Blaisdell being on the reins of his Lady Seaton, a prominent winner in the earlier days of the show. The awards:

HOTEL HOLDINGS WORTHLESS

Bonds of the United States at Saratoga so Classified by Executors—Zborowski and Hoffman Reports.

Accountings in the estates of Frank Work, Countess Margaret Louisa Zborowski, and Eugene Augustus Hoffman were filed yesterday in the Surrogates' Court. According to an appraisal of Mr. Work's personal property made on Aug. 13 for the benefit of his executors, Peter Cooper Hewitt, Frank K. Sturkis, and William H. Truesdale, it totaled $14,465,887. Mr. Work died on March 16, 1911. His largest single stock holding consisted of 45,273 shares of Chicago & Northwestern at 144½, valued at $6,541,948.50. He also held 11,500 shares of Lackawanna, valued at $3,018,750, and 14,459 shares of the Morris & Essex Railroad, valued at $1,265,762.50.

The departed glories of Saratoga were reflected in the statement that 500 bonds and 52 shares of the United States Hotel Company of that resort held by the estate were classed as worthless.

Mr. Work's realty in this city at 13 East Twenty-sixth Street, running through to 8 East Twenty-seventh Street, was valued at $245,000. His Bellevue Avenue property at Newport, R. I., was valued at $83,600, and his Newport farm at $58,000. The estate paid $29,295.20 inheritance tax in Illinois and $500,142.97 inheritance tax in this State. The disbursements by the executors include $10,938 to the Mooney & Boland Detective Agency.

Henry Lewis Morris, as temporary administrator of the estate of Countess Margaret Louisa Zborowski, reported that assets of $1,503,871 had come into his hands and that an income of $83,015.95 and profits from sales of properties had raised the amount chargeable to him to $1,595,925.74. He had turned over $1,501,055.07 of this, he reported, to the executors named in her will. The property consisted mostly of bond and stock holdings, in only one case of more than $40,000 a lot, and of mortgages, the largest of which was for $25,000.

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company and William H. Harris reported that out of the total value of the estate of Eugene Augustus Hoffman, $3,530,918.84, $465,051.84 had been distributed to heirs and legatees. They had transferred $471,000 in mortgages belonging to the estate to the Eugene A. Hoffman Estate, Incorporated. This left them with $2,313,132.49 in hand. In balancing their accounts, they credited sales of 10,500 shares and 1,050 bonds of the incorporated estate as bringing in $2,100,000.

GOVERNMENT MAKES COUNTRY-WIDE RAIDS

Druggists and Doctors Arrested for Selling Goods Under Ban of the Law.

A SIX-MONTHS INVESTIGATION

Postmaster General Directed Crusade and Arrests Were Made in Sixty-nine Cities and Towns.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Raids by the United States Government in an effort to stop violations of the postal laws and regulations were made to-day in sixty-nine cities and towns in twenty-nine States. Almost two hundred men and women were arrested. The raids were directed against persons suspected of being engaged in the sale or administration of medicines and devices intended for criminal purposes.

Postmaster General Hitchcock, who directed the raids, found authority for his action in a law enacted by Congress in 1902. Under that law, known as Section 211 of the Penal Code of the United States, it is made a penitentiary offense to circulate through the mails any matter suggesting or proposing criminal practices, or any package containing any substance or drug to be used for unlawful purposes.

Some of the persons arrested to-day are doctors who are accused of having used the mails to arrange for illegal practice. Most of them are manufacturers of medicine. About 150 arrests were of persons whose nostrums were found upon analysis by Givernment chemists to contain poisonous substances. These will be prosecuted under a section of the Federal Penal Code which forbids sending dangerous poisons through the mails.

Chief Post Office Inspector Sharp said this afternoon that his Inspectors had been at work getting evidence for the past six months. A good many of those arrested, he said, had been indicted by Federal Grand Juries, in one case as long ago as last July, but the indictments had not been handed down because they might interfere with the plans of the Post Office Department to make all the arrests on the same day.

Much of the evidence was obtained through correspondence, and the department has information that it claims will place prominent physicians in a very bad light.

The places where raids were made were: Mobile and Birmingham, Ala.; Los Angeles, San José, Alameda, Sacramento, Fresno, Glendale, San Francisco and Oakland, Cal.; Denver, Colo.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Atlanta, Ga.; Chicago and Peoria, Ill.; Indianapolis, Fort Wayne and Terre Haute, Ind.; Council Bluffs, Iowa; Topeka and Wichita, Kas.; New Orleans, La.; Cumberland, Md.; Lynn, Mass.; Kalamazoo and Iron River, Mich.; St. Paul, Duluth, Minneapolis, and Winona, Minn.; St. Louis, Kansas City and Holden, Mo.; Omaha, Neb.; East Orange, N. J.; New York, Brooklyn, Albany, Buffalo, Ithaca and Elmira, N. Y.; Springfield, Mt. Vernon, Dayton and Convoy, Ohio; Oklahoma City and Muskogee, Okla.; Portland, Ore.; Pittsburgh, Lancaster, and Pine Bank, Green County, Penn.; Charleston and Columbia, S. C.; Memphis and Knoxville, Tenn.; Fort Worth, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston, Texas; Salt Lake City, Utah; Seattle, Spokane, Bellingham, Crescent and Tacoma, Wash., and Milwaukee, Wis.

William I. Morris and Edwin H. Miller, composing the Morris Drug Company of Albany, N. Y., who were arrested there to-day, were indicted by the Federal Grand Jury last July, but no information about the indictments became public until to-day.

The results of the crusade are still being receivedto-night by the Post Office Department in the form of dozens of telegrams from various divisional headquarters. In isolated instances it was found, for various reasons, to be impracticable to effect the arrests, but the suspected persons against whom warrants have been issued are under surveillance.

"The work of the Inspectors to-day is the culmination of the crusade instituted more than two years ago against the fraudulent and unlawful use of the mails," said Mr. Hitchcock. "In that comparatively brief time we have wiped out of existence concerns which have mulcted the people of this country out of more than $100,000,000 by frauds perpetrated through the use of the mails, and the courts have sent many of the promoters of the fraudulent schemes to the penitentiary, where they now are serving time."

William C. Halleck of 7 West Fourteenth Street was arrested yesterday by Post Office Inspector William A. Kenyon on the charge of violating the postal laws. He was held in $500 bail for the Federal Grand Jury. He is a physician and the head of the Hygiene Kalology Company. He was arrested in 1899 on the complaint of Anthony Comstock, but was not convicted.

Dr. Curtis Gray of 256 Tompkins Avenue, Brooklyn, was also arrested on the same charge. He was arraigned before Judge Chatfield in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, and pleaded not guilty. He was held in $1,000 bail for trial.

Dr. George A. Soden of 462 Central Avenue, East Orange, was arrested by United States Marshal Louis G. Beekman and Post Office Inspectors Francis A. Butler and Clinton Larabee. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Richard Stockton in Newark, and held in $2,000 bail.

STARVE, NOT SWAT, THE FLY.

Cleanliness the Watchword of the Extermination Committee.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 20.—In presenting the report of the Fly-Fighting Committee of the American Civic Association, Chairman Edward Hatch, Jr., expressed the hope that there might be no more fly-killing contests.

This sentiment took the assembled fly-fighters by suprise, which was dissipated, however, when Mr. Hatch said:

"We cannot insist too much or too often upon cleanliness as the beginning, middle, and end of the fly-fighting campaign. 'Swat the fly!' as a slogan must give way to 'Starve the fly!' The latter is more euphonious, and infinitely more practical."

Mr. Hatch said that the committee was able to report the most successful year's work since the inauguration, in 1908, of the popular movement looking to the extermination of the house-fly. He summarized a series of reports coming from cities and towns in all parts of the country and said that, in cities in which substantial cash prizes had ben awarded, in no case did the number of flies killed in the whole of a campaign exceed the quantity which could easily have been reared from an average-sized pile of stable refuse in the course of a few weeks. "While the educational value of such fly-killing campaigns cannot be overestimated," the report said, "it would seem that greater results might be obtained by conducting campaigns against dirty stables and back yards, garbage heaps and dumps and all places that produce flies and supply them with infection."

Lecture for League for Animals.

Dr. Joseph Kossuth Dixon will deliver his lecture on "Wild Animal Life of the Plains" this afternoon for the New York Women's League for Animals. Rodman Wanamaker has donated the lecture, which will be given at the Wanamaker Auditorium, the proceeds to go to the hospital building fund. Mrs. James Speyer, President of the league, is confident a substantial sum will be raised to help in starting the hospital for the treatment of the pets and bread-winners of the poor.

SOUGHT DYNAMITE LETTERS.

John J. McNamara Forced Miss Dye's Door and Searched Baggage.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 20.—Miss Mary C. Dye, a stenographer, who witnesses had said was marked for murder by James B. McNamara, The Los Angeles Times dynamiter, because she worked for the Ironworkers' Union and "knew too much," testified at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial to-day. She asserted that she had been followed by detectives, and that on one occasion one of the McNamara brothers had forced an entrance to her room at a hotel to search for papers which he desired to destroy.

Miss Dye identified hundreds of letters introduced by the Government to sustain its contention that Frank M. Ryan, President of the union, and the forty-four other defendants conspired to transport explosives illegally in furtherance of dynamite plots against non-union firms. The letters were written by John J. McNamara, Secretary of the union.

The witness testified she had quitted the employ of the union before the Los Angeles explosion, but that she had written many letters which the Government charges were in furtherance of earlier explosions.

"Soon after I left, a boy at the door of my room in a hotel at midnight called out that he had a telegram," said Miss Dye, "but when I opened the door John J. McNamara, much excited, forced himself in. He demanded certain papers of which I knew nothing. Then he searched my baggage and departed. In going over letters at the office I had seen a letter in which it was stated that somebody was going to 'snitch' or give away information unless money was forthcoming."

The Government contends that the informant referred to was Herbert S. Hockin, who is now on trial, and that Hockin already had told of the hiding of nitro-glycerine at Rochester, Penn., and at Muncie, Ind.

On his flight back from Los Angeles after causing the explosion there James B. planned to have Miss Dye put to death, and asked Frank Eckhoff of Cincinnati to do it, according to Eckhoff's testimony. Eckhoff, who testified that he had been sent to help the dynamiter escape, said he refused to carry out the plot, but he followed Miss Dye to Pittsburgh, where she went to live.

As typical of the way in which explosions were brought about, the Government introduced the testimony of Albert Von Spreckelsen, a contractor who employed non-union men. Von Spreckelsen said that shortly before he suffered a loss of $17,000 in explosions, Ernest G. W. Basey, John J. McNamara, and Spurgeon P. Meadows of the Carpenters' Union, also a defendant, called on him and said, "We'll get you," after he had refused to employ only union men. On Oct. 25, 1909, he said, the Central Union Exchange, the public library building, a planing mill and his barn, in different parts of Indianapolis, were dynamited, all at about the same hour.

Eleven officials of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers were accused by Patrick J. Dugan of having been present when the blowing up of non-union jobs was discussed.

Dugan, former Treasurer of a local union, testified that shortly after a building in Detroit was dynamited in June, 1907, the union officials held a caucus over the election of officers. At that time, the witness said, Herbert S. Hockin announced that he had lost his position on account of his having induced Ortie E. McManigal to blow up the Detroit job.

"Hockin said that because of this he ought to be given a place on the Executive Board," said Dugan. "He said he was going to make his campaign for office on the strength of the Detroit job."

Dugan said that President Frank M. Ryan and ten other officers were present.

Mrs. Mary E. Carroll testified that while J. J. McNamara was in jail in Los Angeles and before he pleaded guilty an effort was made by ironworkers in Indianapolis to buy certain papers. Mrs. Carroll said that Fred Sherman, an ironworkers' business agent, offered her $100 to procure a receipt in the possession of Dugan. Dugan had said the receipt was $25, paid for destroying a non-union job. Mrs. Carroll said that on the promise of getting $100 for the paper she went to Dugan's home and attempted to induce Mrs. Dugan to give it up, but Mrs. Dugan refused.

20 DAYS FOR ANNOYER.

Magistrate Sends to Workhouse Boston Youth Who Insulted Woman.

Magistrate Freschi in the Tombs Police Court sentenced Harry Duame of Boston, Mass., to twenty days in the Workhouse yesterday for annoying a woman.

Mrs. Rose Miller of 247 Avenue A testified that she was waiting for her husband in front of his place of business in Catharine Street yesterday morning when Duame took hold of her arm and attempted to lead her up the street.

Mrs. Miller said she struck the defendant in the eye with her silver mesh bag and called to her husband. Mr. Miller, she declared, held Duame until a policeman arrived. In sentencing Duame Magistrate Freschi said:

"It is just such men as you that make the streets of this city dangerous for women. You come here from out of town and carry on as you wish. This woman has done the right thing in bringing you to court, and other women who follow her lead will help rid us of your kind."

THREE MORE MAY DIE OF 'FAGIN'S' BULLETS

Detective Fay's Condition Hopeless, Luisi's Critical, and Mondschein's Serious.

TRACING THE VOGELS' CAREER

Suicide Letter Found Near Them Woman's Ruse to Keep Probation Officer Off Their Trail.

Central Office Detective Martin Fay, who was struck by the first bullet fired in the battle between detectives and Henry Vogel and his wife, Lottie, in their room at the Elsmere Hotel, in Courtlandt Avenue, the Bronx, on Monday night, continued in an unconscious condition at the Lebanon Hospital throughout yesterday. Fay's friends in the Police Department, taking note of his temperate habits and strong physique, talked of a slight hope for his recovery, but at the hospital the surgeons shook their heads and said he was very low and would live only a few hours at the outside.

Louis Mondschein, proprietor of the Elsmere, whose desire to witness the arrest of the Vogels took him into the line of fire, where he got a bullet in the stomach, yesterday developed a high temperature, which caused the surgeons to lose hope of his recovery. The case of Private Detective Gerard Luisi is also regarded as extremely critical.

The only one of the wounded whose condition is regarded hopefully by the hospital surgeons is William Butler, the Elsmere waiter. Butler is practically out of danger, it was anounced at the hospital last night.

The body of Mrs. Lottie Vogel was identified at the Fordham Hospital Morgue yesterday by Mrs. Louis Stern of 1,864 Seventh Avenue as that of a woman who obtained a position as cook in her home on Aug. 27 last. Mrs. Stern said the woman was of prepossessing manners, and an accomplished servant. She gained the family's confidence almost at once, and in a few days was trusted so fully that no precautions were taken to safeguard the family silver in the absence of Mrs. Stern and her husband. But there was a sudden awakening. Mrs. Stern came home from a shopping tour one day and found her servant gone. Gone also was the family jewelry, valued at $3,000, some United States Steel Corporation, Western Union Telegraph Company, and Suburban Home Investing Company bonds, and some shares of the Consolidated Gas Company, of a total value of $8,500.

The visit of Mrs. Stern to the Morgue was followed by a visit to the Coroner's office in the Bronx, where she was able to identify several pieces of wearing apparel and three articles of jewelry taken from the trunks found in the room where the Vogels met their death in the revolver duel with detectives on Monday night.

To-day all of the loot so far recovered from the Vogels will be spread out at Police Headquarters, and people who have complained to the police about the operations of the Vogels will be asked to look it over and see if they can identify any of it.

Capt. Price, in charge of the detectives engaged on the Vogel case, has four men at work trying to find the safety deposit boxes for which five keys were found on Vogel's body.

Capt. Price concluded that the suicide note picked up on the floor of the room occupied by the Vogels in the Elsmere Hotel was a plain fake, written for the purpose of throwing the officials of the Prison Association off their guard. It was addressed to "Dear Mr. Kimball," Mr. Kimball being the probation officer of the Prison Association. Capt. Price heard from Mr. Kimball yesterday the full story of the manner in which Vogel and his wife had tricked him into the belief that Vogel was leading a respectable life.

After hearing this story Capt. Price arrived at the conclusion that the suicide note was just the final example of Mrs. Vogel's skill as a crook. It was Mrs. Vogel, the police learned, who sent a woman and four children to court some years ago to pose as Vogel's distressed family, and to weep for him when he was called up to be sentenced for grand larceny. It was Mrs. Vogel, also, who threw the detectives off their guard when they went to the Vogel flat a short time ago to arrest Sophie Beckendorf (whose name was at first said to be Brinckerhoff) for robbing the apartment of a recent employer. On that occasion Mrs. Vogel successfully played the part of an employer who was greatly shocked to learn that her cook would steal. The detectives who made the arrest went away without suspecting the alliance that existed between Sophie Beckendorf and the Vogels. She fooled the police as completely as she had Probation Officer Kimball, and when finally they began to trail the Vogels it was only to obtain their presence in the office of District Attorney Whitman. Assistant District Attorney Embree was trying to force a confession from Sophie Beckendorf, and it was only because of her persistence in holding back the confession until she could talk with Mrs. Vogel that the trail of the Vogels was taken up.

The game the Vogels had played upon Probation Officer Kimball made it necessary for them to cover their retreat. They knew Kimball immediately would become suspicious if they dropped out of sight without telling him of their whereabouts, as this would cause him to conclude that Vogel had returned to evil ways. They feared, Capt. Price believes, that Kimball would set the machinery of the Prison Association to work on their case unless he was satisfied in his own mind about them. They knew the police wanted them, and decided to go into hiding. And so the suicide note was devised as the best way out of the situation. It was in the handwriting of Mrs. Vogel.

The police hope to have their identification of Vogel confirmed to-day by the policemen and detectives who arrested him under various aliases on charges of grand larceny.

Sophie Beckendorf was indicted on four charges of grand larceny yesterday. The indictments charge her with robbing the homes of Ruth Gans of 251 West Ninety-eighth Street, Blanche A. Rosenblum of 214 West Ninety-second Street, Mrs. Stella Emanuel, 562 West 113th Street, and R. L. Steinert, 310 West Eightieth Street. She will be arraigned to-day to plead to the indictments.

AN OPERATIC DOUBLE BILL.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" Heard Together at Metropolitan.

"CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA."

Santuzza	Emmy Destinn
Lola	Maria Duchene
Turiddu	Riccardo Martin
Alfio	Dinh Gilly
Lucia	Jeanne Maubourg

"PAGLIACCI."

Nedda	Lucrezia Bori
Canio	Enrico Caruso
Tonio	Pasquale Amato
Beppe	Angelo Bada
Silvio	Dinh Gilly
Conductor	Giorgio Polacco

The double bill of "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" has proved a potent attraction at the opera house ever since those two short Italian operas first made their appearance. Last night Mr. Gatti-Casazza brought the combination forward again at the Metropolitan, and the results were what they have been in past years—a crowded house and great enthusiasm.

The enthusiasm first expressed itself over Emmy Destinn's impersonation of Santuzza. The Bohemian soprano was in fine voice, and both vocally and dramatically she made a deep impression.

Mr. Amato's singing of the prologue was the signal for another demonstration of unusual warmth and effusiveness, which may have had some significance beyond the special occasion that brought it forth; and Mr. Caruso's singing of "Vesti lo giubba" awakened another storm of applause. Both of these artists gave of their best.

Miss Bori on this occasion made her second appearance at this theatre, this time as Nedda. She repeated the favorable impression she had made on the opening night of the opera season in "Manon Lescaut."

The other rôles were in familiar hands, although Mme. Duchêne was perhaps new to the part of Lola, in which she proved quite adequate.

Mr. Gilly, who made his first appearance here this season, was in excellent voice, as was Mr. Martin, who put more fervor than is his wont into the rôle of Turiddu. Mr. Polacco conducted both operas.

ALWIN SCHROEDER'S RECITAL

The Distinguished 'Cellist and His Daughter Play in Aeolian Hall.

That New York lovers of chamber music hold in high esteem and affectionate remembrance Alwin Schroeder was made evident by the large audience and its demonstrations of pleasure at his recital in Aeolian Hall last evening. The admirable violoncellist, so long a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, of the Kneisel Quartet, and then of the Hess Quartet, is now unattached. His concert last evening was given with his daughter, Miss Hedwig Schroeder, pianist. She played a group of four pieces by Chopin and Debussy; otherwise the programme was devoted to music for the violoncello, with piano and alone—music that there is seldom an opportunity to hear, and still more seldom to hear played with so near an approach to perfection.

The programme began with Rubinstein's sonata for piano and 'cello, a work rich in melodious ideas not always wisely controlled, but offering much that is grateful for both players. But there was nothing heard more delightful than the four movements from Bach's solo sonatas for the violoncello that Mr. Schroeder played with the power of a master, with beautiful tone, exquisite phrasing, and a richly musical quality. There was nothing in their difficulties that disturbed the purity of his intonation. The only piece requiring an approach to the display of agility that so rarely becomes the violoncello was Cossmann's "Tarentelle"; but Mr. Schroeder's artistic style and easy command of its passage work gave it grace and delicacy. A minuet by Handel he had to repeat; after the Bach numbers he added another from the same set of pieces.

Miss Schroeder's playing was fitly consorted with her father's. It is delicate, finished, with a variety of color within its limits. A little nervousness in Rubinstein's sonata caused no serious damage to the performance. Her playing of a nocturne and the "Fantaisie Impromptu" of Chopin and the two pieces by Debussy betokened a sincere artistic feeling joined to ability in expressing it. Debussy's "Jardins sans la Pluie" pleased especially in her performance.

MR. THOMPSON'S RECITAL.

Mr. John Thompson is not at present a great pianist, but even if he never becomes one, he is headed in a direction that will make him a charming and interesting artist. There was already, indeed, much of charm and interest in the piano recital that he gave yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. He is a young American who has studied in this country and with Scharwenka in Germany. He made has first appearance here yesterday. He has an excellent grounding in technique, and likewise fine and wholesome musical feeling, a musical tone upon the instrument, though not much variety in it. His playing is restrained and continent; he does not seek for emotional effects that he does not feel, and it is agreeable to hear a player who is not inclined to force the note in this respect. There is an opportunity for growth in his art, for an increase in power of all sorts; and if he multiplies the talent that has been given him, he will be an artist to be reckoned with.

In the meantime there was pleasure to be derived from his playing of a programme chosen differently from the virtuoso's programmes: Liszt's Fantasie and fugue on the name "Bach," Brahms's Rhapsodie Op. 79, No. 1, pieces by Schumann, Henselt, and Mendelssohn—the E minor Scherzo, delightfully played—a group of pieces by Chopin, and some modern bits, ending with Liszt's transcription of Saint-Saens's "Danse Macabre" for orchestra.

A Timely Warning.

The Christmas Edition of The New York Times containing four full-page Christmas pictures, specially painted for The Times by famous artists, will be limited to the regular readers of The New York Times. After the edition is exhausted it will not be possible to secure further copies of this remarkable series of paintings. So this timely warning is given in order that those who wish to make sure of getting the Christmas Number may do so by placing orders with their newsdealers to have The New York Times served to them regularly.

A month before the Easter Number of The New York Times was issued containing the Abbey Holy Grail pictures this same warning was given. Yet many thousands of people neglected to take the precaution to become regular readers and failed to get copies.

It is to prevent a repetition of this, in so far as it is possible, that this notice is given.

The Christmas Number of The New York Times, issued December 8th, will be a worthy rival of the Holy Grail Easter Edition.

Four beautiful Christmas pictures, painted by famous American artists specially for The New York Times, will be reproduced by the same process as that used in the Holy Grail pictures. They will be printed on super-calendered paper in all the beautiful colors of the original, using one side of the paper only, so they will be suitable for framing. If they could be bought in the art stores, each of these superb reproductions would cost many times the price of a copy of The Sunday Times.

The subjects and the artists painting them are:

"Illumination," painted by Sergeant Kendall, N. A.
"His First Christmas," painted by Albert Sterner, A. N. A.
"My Ain Fireside," painted by Henry McCarter, Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts.
"Christmas Shopping," by W. W. Gilchrist, Jr., Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts.

LITTLE COAL IN STORAGE.

Mines Must Work at Full Capacity to Meet Demand, Report Says.

The special committee of the Merchants' Association, which has investigated the anthracite coal situation, reported last night that the mines would be forced to operate continuously from now until March, at their full capacity, to meet the ordinary demand, as there was little coal in storage.

The committee's figures were based on the average yearly consumption since 1907. To meet ordinary needs the mines would have to produce 6,614,855 tons a month, the report said. In October this amount was exceeded by the output by more than 50,000 tons, but it was the only month in the history of the anthracite fields when the production went above 6,600,000 tons.

The committee made the investigation first-hand in the antharcite regions and reached these conclusions:

"If the present maximum production is maintained during the Winter months the supply of coal will meet all normal needs. The present shortage has been exaggerated, the shortage being only about one-sixth of the quantity usually in storage in October. The quantities of coal actually delivered month by month are sufficient to meet the current demands of each month, if distributed with reasonable uniformity with regard to immediate consumption.

"The quantities which will be available in the future are not sufficiently great to warrant delivery by retailers of considerable quantities in bulk for future use of consumers. No conditions have yet arisen which warrant the demand by retailers of a price materially in excess of that based upon the regular prices in the circular issued by the railroad companies."

The report was presented by Henry Dalley, Edward D. Page, Abram I. Elkus, William Fellowes Morgan and F. B. De Berard.

LABOR RADICALS LOSE.

Federation by 2 to 1 Vote Defeats Plan for Industrial Unionism.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 20.—After a debate that lasted all day, members of the radical wing of the American Federation of Labor were defeated by a vote of nearly two to one in their attempt to have the federation adopt the principle of industrial unionism in place of its policy of trade autonomy. Two hundred and forty-nine delegates voted against the minority report of the committee on education, which favored the principle of industrial unionism, and 142 voted in its favor.

The voting strength of the convention, based upon membership in represented bodies, went 10,983 against the minority report, and 5,929 for it. After the minority report had been defeated the majority report in favor of the continuance of trade autonomy was adopted by acclamation.

The vote was the first test of strength between the radical and conservative wings, and the number of votes polled by the radicals was slightly under their advance estimates. The vote of the United Mine Workers (2,670), and the Western Federation of Miners (506), was cast solidly for the minority report. Other groups that lined up solidly with the radical wing were the bakers and confectioners, iron, steel and tin workers, printing pressmen, railway carmen, and journeymen tailors.

As a result of the adoption of the majority report, the federation will continue, for a year at least, to recognize the autonomy of international and National unions affiliated with it, and wherever its policy of trade autonomy seems unsuited to the industry, it will introduce the principle of industrial unionism.

MAYOR FOR CLEAN STREETS.

Tells Police Captains to Get Out and See That Law Is Obeyed.

Mayor Gaynor wrote to Police Commissioner Waldo yesterday suggesting that he stir up the captains and patrolmen who permitted merchants to sweep paper and refuse into the streets. This is the Mayor's letter:

> Office of the Mayor,
> Nov. 20, 1912.
> Sir—I receive many complaints concerning merchants who sweep their waste paper and refuse into the street. I also see instances thereof as I go about. In going through the east side the other night I saw one street littered with paper. This morning I saw one block of Myrtle Avenue, Brooklyn, on one side of the street, littered in the same way. It is now time to make the captains and patrolmen understand definitely that this thing will not be permitted any longer. If they do not stop it they must be put on trial. It is the business of the captains to go about through their precincts and see what is going on. They ought to see everything themselves. They do not fulfill their whole duty by lolling in the station house or sitting at the desk there. They must go about and see what their men are doing, and show them what to do. And the patrolmen must watch the storekeepers and warn them not to do this thing. If they do it hereafter let them be summoned to court. It is difficult to understand how a storekeeper can be so nasty as to sweep his refuse into the street. He must be a barbarian to do it.
>
> Very truly yours,
> W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

Commissioner Waldo will co-operate with Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards in an effort to abate the nuisance.

HABEAS CORPUS FOR M'KENNA

Creation of New Bronx County Figures in Murder Case.

A writ of habeas corpus was issued yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Seabury ordering the production in court on Friday of Joseph J. McKenna, the convicted murderer of Sigrid Eckstrom, whose body was found hidden in a flat at 1,077 Ogden Avenue, the Bronx, on June 6. McKenna is in the death house at Sing Sing.

The basis upon which Emmanuel Klein, attorney for McKenna, obtained his writ was the act of the State Legislature known as the Bronx County Act, which decrees there should be a separate county known as the Bronx provided the residents of that borough so elected. McKenna was convicted of murder on Oct. 5 and sentenced to die on Dec. 9. His attorney declares that the Court of General Sessions was without jurisdiction.

WOMAN'S SLAYER KNOWN.

Prominent Cincinnati Man Suspected as Murderer of Mrs. Kraft.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20.—That Mrs. Emma Kraft of this city was the woman who was killed in a Chicago hotel last Thursday; that the police know the name of a man who was formerly engaged to marry her and who is known to have borrowed $800 from her, and whom they suspect of having killed her; and that every policeman and detective in this city has been ordered to watch for this man, were to-day's developments in the mystery that for six days has puzzled the police of Chicago.

Mrs. Kraft, who was 60 years old, was known to have recently sold property in this city amounting to $4,870, and the police are convinced that she had a large part of this sum in her possession just previous to her death.

The man whom the police suspect is prominent in this city and was seen here on Election Day. His name and description have been sent to the police of Chicago, and the hunt has been taken up there.

Recognition of Mrs. Kraft's umbrella led to the positive identification of her clothes by a niece and the latter's daughter.

"THE CAR WITH A CONSCIENCE"

Our Engineering Creed

THE OAKLAND Engineering Creed is the business religion of our engineers and designers. It is years old. Here it is:

"We believe when a good engineer designs a car, the basic principles, aside from simplicity and accessibility, are to eliminate friction, guard against distortion, reduce wear to the minimum, and deliver the maximum horse-power to the driving wheels."

The ideal car is mirrored in this creed. And it is an ideal actually used in Oakland construction, and not spoken of here because it is a lofty expression. We want you to see these ideal cars.

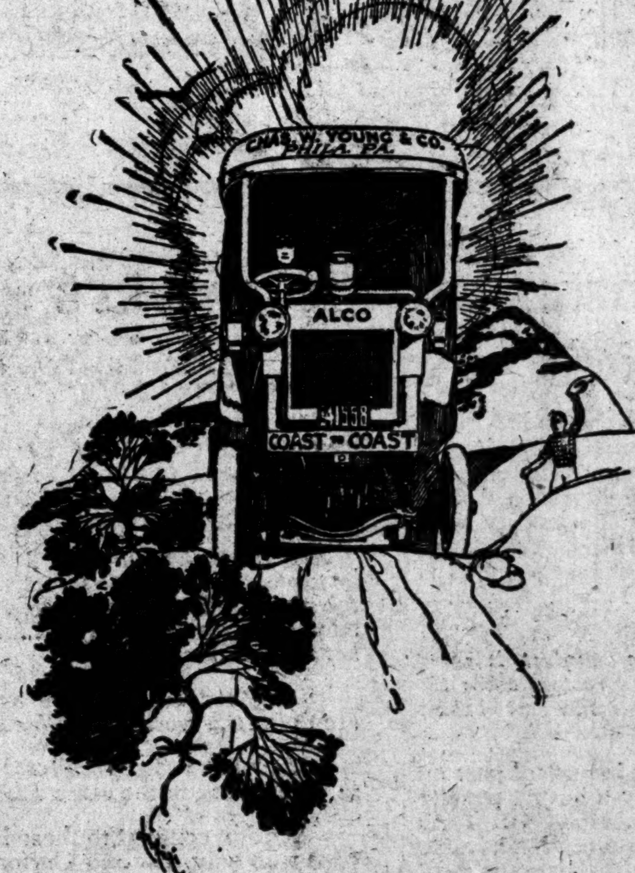
And it Delivered the Goods

4145 Miles



Over boulevarded highways in the East it sped; through sand two feet deep in Ohio; across trackless prairies in Illinois, with the heat of a sizzling sun beating down. It crashed through weak bridges in Iowa and conquered roads of gumbo. The alkali mud of Colorado was no barrier; its progress was not checked by cloudbursts in Wyoming, by steep-sided gullies, by deep ruts, by roads submerged.

It cut a new roadway over the broad expause in Utah; it crossed the Great Salt Lake Desert, often 150 miles from habitation; battled with hailstorms, rainstorms, and snowstorms in Nevada; climbed the tall peaks of the Sierras that seemed to mount to the skies.

At last into California!

It pressed onward to San Francisco; then 35 miles to the north. And the first load of goods ever delivered across the continent by motor truck had reached its destination.

It completed the journey of 4,145 miles in 412 hours of actual running time.

Across 15 states it hauled a 3-ton load of Parrot Brand Olive Silk Soap, the product of its owners, Charles W. Young & Company, from Philadelphia to a customer in Petaluma, Cal. It faced the most terrific conditions ever forced upon a motor truck; received the most gruelling tests yet supplied in business service. But it delivered the goods!

THE MAYOR CHILLS FIFTH AVENUE FEAST

It's About Time for Another Street to Relieve It, He Tells Association Members.

FEW APPLAUD SUGGESTION

"Oh, You Short-Sighted Generation of Fifth Avenue!" He Cries When He Finds Diners Disapprove Plan.

Mayor Gaynor was the guest of the Fifth Avenue Association last night at the association's third annual dinner at the Waldrof-Astoria. He had been asked to talk about Fifth Avenue, and the 200 other guests expected to hear tributes to that thoroughfare. Instead, the Mayor, in his characteristic way, told them it was about time to build another Fifth Avenue which should rival the existing avenue and add to the glory of the city.

The Fifth Avenue property owners listened to the Mayor's proposal to build a rival shopping street in silence, and when he resumed his seat there was little applause.

"Do you think another Fifth Avenue between Sixth Avenue and the present Fifth Avenue and south of Fifty-ninth Street would hurt you?" asked the Mayor. "Oh, you short-sighted generation of Fifth Avenue!"

It was the Mayor's third annual speech before the Fifth Avenue Association, but it was the first time that he had gone counter to the interests of his hosts. Robert Grier Cooke, President of the association, was toastmaster, and introduced the Mayor as the first speaker.

The Mayor in his speech complimented John Purroy Mitchel, President of the Aldermen, with whom the Mayor was not on good terms at one time, for his "real good work." He complimented all his department heads, and called them "honest and efficient men," declaring that it was an outrage to have such men criticised by degraded newspapers. He said he soon hoped to have the tracks of the New York Central on Eleventh Avenue put where they belonged. He discussed taxation, and told his hearers just what property he owned in Brooklyn, how much it was mortgaged for, and how the rate of taxation had decreased since Brooklyn had become a part of the city. He expressed sympathy for President Taft, but declared that he was much pleased with the election of Gov. Wilson as the next President. Referring to the proposed new avenue, the Mayor said:

"Your secretary when he wrote to me said you particularly wanted me to say something about Fifth Avenue. Just think of that. Fifth Avenue is only one of my children, and I love them all just as much as I love Fifth Avenue. You don't like that, do you? I don't know how I could say much about Fifth Avenue. I don't want to say anything to annoy you, but I really believe there ought to be another Fifth Avenue up through this territory here. Some of you applaud it, but some of you remain quite silent. Still, I must touch on it with the tips of my fingers at least. Where is McAneny? He shakes his head, I think. As the Mussulman turns to the east when he thinks he wants to say his prayers, so I always turn to McAneny when I want to say anything about Fifth Avenue.

"But whether he agrees or disagrees—and he is Borough President, you know, and it is outside my jurisdiction—I have a strong notion that we ought to have another avenue from Fifty-ninth Street down. Some people think it would hurt Fifth Avenue. Oh, ye short-sighted generation of Fifth Avenue! In place of hurting you it would help you. It would make Fifth Avenue greater than it is to-day. Now and then—and that now and then is pretty often I am sorry to say—I have to hurry up through Fifth Avenue with my motor car at certain hours of the day, and with the aid of the police even, and that right of way which the people seem desirous of conceding to their Mayor, I have great difficulty in getting through your Fifth Avenue. It is the most crowded thoroughfare in the world, so far as I know, at certain hours of the day. It is altogether inconvenient. As I go by between two rows on either side, to get up to the Lenox Lyceum or some place, I almost pity those who are trying to go up or down on either side of me.

"I have a strong notion which I expressed the first year that I was Mayor, that there ought to be another avenue between here and Sixth Avenue. The actual length of the block from here to Sixth Avenue, all the way up from Twenty-third Street, is 920 feet, whereas the blocks here normally are only 200 feet, so that you could put two avenues between here and Sixth Avenue, and it would be to the benefit of this beautiful Fifth Avenue to do so, because it would concentrate the city in the space between Fifth Avenue and Sixth Avenue. It is true that Broadway transverses it: the apex of it, I think, being about Twenty-eighth Street, but that carries rather away from Fifth Avenue than toward it. The trend of Broadway is in the other direction."

"Why don't you people take this subject up?" he asked, "and give 'Leftie' Lewis a rest for about a week. Of course it might hurt your imaginations, but it wouldn't hurt your pocketbooks."

The account of the Mayor's real estate holdings seemed to interest his hearers. Mayor Gaynor said that his home in Prospect Park has been valued at $17,000 and that it had been taxed $486 before Brooklyn and New York consolidated. Now, he said, it was assessed at $24,000 and was taxed $421. His other property in Myrtle Avenue, he said, had been valued at $50,000 and had been taxed $1,430 before the consolidation. It was now assessed at $64,000, he said, and was taxed $1,123.

"But don't get the idea that I am rich," he added. "My house, I want you to know, is mortgaged for $12,000 and my other property for $40,000. No, I am not a rich man, you see."

DIES TO ESCAPE HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Kaufmann, Rather Than Ask Free Treatment, Kills Self and Child.

Despondent because of illness and her husband's financial reverses, Mrs. Frieda Kaufmann of 680 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, committed suicide yesterday by inhaling illuminating gas. The escaping gas also killed her five-year-old daughter Frieda. Mother and daughter, clad only in their night clothes, were found by Herman Kaufmann, the dead woman's husband, lying side by side in the mother's bed.

Kaufmann is a baker employed by a Brooklyn firm. He departed from his home at 5 o'clock yesterday morning for work. At noon he returned for lunch. When he arrived at his apartment, which was on the top floor of a two-family house, he found the door locked. Not having his keys with him, he went to the house next door and climbed out on the window ledge. From there he stepped across to the ledge of the window of his wife's room, and opened the window. The rush of gas from the room almost overpowered him, and he was compelled to cling to the window until the fumes passed away.

After he entered the room, he opened the door of the apartment and called Policeman Dawson of the Gates Avenue Station, who summoned an ambulance from St. John's Hospital. The surgeon said that mother and daughter had been dead for several hours. Kaufmann was overcome with grief at the fate of his wife and child. He said:

"My wife had been ill for two months. She suffered from an internal ailment, and we talked about her going to a hospital for treament. Her case required an operation, and we did not have enough money to have it performed by a private physician. I told her that she could go to a hospital where she would not have to pay any money, but she objected. I told her that many persons went to charity hospitals, but she worried and said she did not like the idea of being treated for nothing. I am sure that her aversion to being sent to a free hospital caused her to make up her mind to kill herself. Her love for her baby Frieda and her desire not to be parted from her probably caused her to kill the child."

Kaufmann and his wife had been married for eight years, and the dead girl was their only child. Before 1907, Kaufmann was in business for himself, but in that year he was compelled to close his shop and to take work with another firm. He said that his wife often spoke of the days when they were in more comfortable circumstances. The dead woman made an unsuccessful attempt upon her life on Tuesday. On that day Kaufmann returned from work and found her lying on a couch, unconscious, with gas pouring from a jet in the room. He thought at that time his wife had turned the gas on accidentally. He shut it off and in a few minutes she revived.

FIND MOTHER AND SON DEAD.

Mrs. Kerling Was Despondent Because of Boy's Illness.

Mrs. Katharine Kerling and her six-year-old son Edgar were found dead from illuminating gas in the parlor of their home at 169 Irving Avenue, Brooklyn, by Mrs. Kerling's other two children yesterday afternoon. Since the boy's illness from diphtheria last Spring he had been in poor health and the mother was despondent because of it, friends said.

When Minnie and Charles Kerling, 10 and 8 years old, returned to their home from school they entered the house through a rear door. Calling for their mother, they got no response. They opened the parlor door and the odor of gas frightened them so that they ran to the street calling for help. When the police arrived they found mother and son lying on a sofa with the three gas jets turned on. The windows were closed and the keyhole was stuffed with paper.

Charles Kerling, an ironworker, husband of Mrs. Kerling, departed from home for work early in the morning. His wife seemed discouraged, he said, over the continued ill-health of her child, but said nothing of an intention to end her life.

MRS. J. B. BAKER WEDS AGAIN.

Her Marriage to W. H. T. McCoy Follows Divorce Obtained at Reno.

Mrs. Julia Freeman Baker of Lakewood and New York and W. H. T. McCoy of Norristown were married on Nov. 7 at Mrs. Baker's town house, and are now living at Auduben, one of the Norristown suburbs. Mr. McCoy is connected with the city government of Philadelphia.

Mrs. McCoy's two daughters, Mrs. Benjamin F. Fairchild and Miss Louise Freeman, were present at the wedding, to which none but the family was asked.

Mrs. McCoy was formerly Mrs. Frank M. Freeman. Several years after Mr. Freeman's death she married John Blake Baker, a well known clubman, whose first wife was also a widow, Mrs. Kip, the mother of Henry Spies Kip and William Rudloff Kip. The marriage, however, did not result happily, and Mrs. Baker last Winter went to Reno, where she later obtained a divorce.

Garford TRUCKS

Chosen for the world's biggest contracting job

THE Catskill Aqueduct is the largest undertaking of its kind in the world. In a great many respects it is larger and more important than the Panama Canal. This aqueduct is to furnish New York City with water. It will supply greater New York with 600,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours—which is 100 gallons a day for 6,000,000 people. It will cost over $200,000,000. It is over 85 miles long.

Practically every big contractor on the aqueduct is using Garford trucks. And each one of these contractors chose the Garford after testing and investigating all the best known products.

The time element has played a most important part on this big job. In fact all contracts carry a strong penalty clause covering and guaranteeing time of completion. Time here is valued in the millions. Therefore every conceivable manner and means of quick construction became the most essential part of the chief engineer's work. Every practical modern time saving device was employed.

In trucks, the Garford was selected. Prominent among the innumerable modern methods of rapid twentieth century construction you will find scores of these big splendid time and money savers working night and day.

The use and the important part taken by Garford trucks in the greatest municipal water supply system in the world demonstrates how it can aid and help you to economically develop, strengthen and broaden your business—no matter what it might be. For if you haul things you can use Garford trucks to a great advantage.

One big contractor writes:

"We made some very interesting experiments. For instance, over a given territory one Garford truck made twenty-one trips a day carrying four tons per trip. A team operating over the same haul made but nine trips and carried but two tons per trip."

Another large concern writes that eight Garford trucks are doing the work of fifty horses.

Another writes each truck can do two hundred per cent. as much work in the same time as a single team.

And in contrast to these big operators are the smaller ones who only use one Garford truck. In every instance it has been found that one Garford truck will replace five or six teams. Can you beat that for actual economy? Can you obtain better efficiency than this? Who is there to-day that will say the horse is not a part of the inefficient past?

A line to us will bring you complete information regarding the installation of one or more Garford trucks. We have the facts and figures that will convince you. We can advise you as to style, number, size, costs and everything else that might occur to you.

All information gratis.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 19.—With twenty minutes' scrimmaging this afternoon Yale's active practice before the Harvard game ended.

"If any scrimmaging is ordered to-morrow it will be very light, and I doubt that there will be any," said Head Coach Arthur Howe this evening of the coaches' plans.

Chief Howe to-night reiterated his statement made Monday that he believed that the Yale team would start the Harvard match exactly as it faced the Tigers last Saturday. "The coaches have no expectation of making changes," said he to-night, "but, of course, we don't care to say that under no circumstances shall we make any."

Howe and the other coaches do not believe that the team can be strengthened any by shifts in the line-up. Neither can they effect a revolution in the attack in the week between the two big games.

To-day every player who started in the Princeton game was in uniform and in the short scrimmaging, although Flynn and Philbin were detained on the campus by recitations, and did not report until just before it closed.

Johnny Castles, who was stunned yesterday by a rough tackle, left the infirmary this evening, and will rejoin the squad to-morrow.

To-day was selected for the formal ovation to the eleven by the undergraduates, and they marched 1,500 strong behind a brass band to the field, awaiting the conclusion of secret practice. After the gates had been opened they spent an hour singing and cheering the players, and rehearsing the stunts they have invented for the Harvard game.

Coaches who were on the field included "Pa" Corbin, Walter Camp, Burr Chamberlin, Foster Sanford, Ray Bigelow, George Adee, Phil Leavenworth, Ray Townsend, Sam Hammond, Bob Loree, "Buster" Brown, Sherman, and Ted Coy, Arthur Brides, Fred Daly, De Witt Cochrane, Carl Flanders, and Phil Smith.

The team went to the college infirmary to-night for rest, and will sleep there till after the Harvard match. The players will visit the field to-morrow and Friday afternoon for signal work. To-morrow they will delay their practice an hour to allow the Harvard backs to work there in secret. The Crimson practice will begin at 1:15 o'clock and will last an hour. Some of the Harvard squad are also expected here Friday afternoon for practice. To protect the gridiron it will be covered with straw, which is removed for the daily work.

During the present gathering of the coaches a radical revision of the Yale football coaching system is being discussed and generally favored. The scheme mentioned calls for a permanent resident coach as head. The system is already under practical operation at Harvard, where Percy Haughton has developed it efficiently. At Yale the custom has continued of appointing as head coach each successive year the Captain of the previous eleven. This annually gives over the system to an inexperienced leader instead of a veteran coach. The Yale system lacks continuity, and fails to develop talent like the Harvard system. Coaches who are now at Yale believe that the system will be adopted before another season, and such former Yale players, who have been successful as coaches, as Al. Sharpe, Fred. Daly, Foster Sanford, Frank Hinkey, or Howard Jones, are discussed as possible holders of the position.

Although none of the coaches will talk for publication directly upon the subject, close followers of the eleven feel that Harvard is the logical favorite for the game here Saturday. Yale's attack has not developed, and the new rules are believed sufficient to afford the Crimson eleven methods for scoring. Yale is regarded at home as likely to score by the drop or place goal method, but hardly by touchdown. It is thought here that the score will be the largest of a Yale-Harvard game in eight years, and a total of 12 to 6 is a favorite guess. Yale's team is not in rugged condition, and it is likely that fully two elevens will be thrown into the play before the final period closes.

Giant Williams Joins Fordham Team.

Tuesday Fordham's prospects for victories in the remaining two games on the schedule were most unpromising. The Faculty of the university had declared six members of the football team ineligible to represent the university in any sport because of deficiencies in studies. The students thought the eleven would be forced to disband for the season, but they did not know of the promising material which Coaches Tom Thorpe and Jim McCarthy had developed for just such emergencies. Yesterday the gloom which hung over the Maroon contingent was lifted and confidence came back when big Al Williams appeared on Fordham Field in football togs. Williams is a senior in the college and played on the famous Fordham eleven of 1909. Parental objection and sickness prevented him from reporting sooner. After a conference Coach Thorpe put the young giant at full back. Fred Taylor was placed at quarter back and Riley at right half back to replace the losses in the back field, and Simonetti was shifted from guard to centre to take Mulvey's place. Three men were tried at the guard position, Glacken, O'Toole, and Hopkins. In the scrimmage with the scrubs and later with the Commerce eleven Williams exceeded the expectations of the coaches and brought joy to every Fordham student present by battering the opposing line for continued gains. Tackler after tackler was shaken off and he frequently kept going with four men on his back. Line plunging will surely be the Maroon's strong point in Saturday's game with Rensselaer at Troy. The defense is being built up. Bill Kelleher, now on the University of Pennsylvania eleven and right tackle at Fordham two years ago, helped drill the linemen yesterday. The back field was increased by another candidate in Dunn, a former Seton Hall College star. To-day the last scrimmage of the week will take place, as on Friday the eleven leaves for Troy.

Indians in Last Home Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 20.—Seldom has the practice scrimmage on the Carlisle Indian football field been so intense as the one played here this afternoon between the 'Varsity and scrub elevens. Coach Warner worked his braves from 4 o'clock until darkness set in. Fundamentals were thoroughly covered, and the signal practice was marked by two sound spankings administered to Calso and Goeshack by their teammates for inattention to the signals. The Indians had a great deal of fun at the expense of the men caught napping. The Indian players are becoming most critical judges of errors on the part of their fellow-players, and do not leave the slightest inattention to duty to escape unpunished. Coach Warner will probably give Pratt, a strong scrub tackle, a place on the first team. The redskin elevens showed no mercy for each other this afternoon. The 'Varsity line was impregnable, and punting on both sides was a feature. To-day's scrimmage was the last home line-up Carlisle will have this season in all probability.

Cornell Begins Practice Again.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Having enjoyed a long and helpful rest since the game with Michigan last Saturday, the Cornell 'Varsity went out to Percy Field this afternoon for the first practice of the week, and it was apparent from the spirit with which the men entered into the drill that Coach Sharpe's decision to give them a thorough rest was sound. Practically the entire squad appeared to be in good physical condition and all except three were permitted to take part in the scrimmage against the scrubs. These three were White at centre, O'Connor at left half back, and Bennett at right half back. Champaign, who was injured in the Michigan game, showed up without a mark and got into the thick of the work in a hurry.

Hall Is Hobart Football Captain.

GENEVA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Harry H. Hall of Fort Edwards, N. Y., a member of junior class, was to-day elected Captain of the Hobart College football team. He has played end on the 'Varsity for two years. Hall is also President of the junior class.

HARVARD CHEERS ITS TEAM.

Undergraduates Parade to Soldiers' Field to See Final Football Drill.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 20.—To-night on Soldiers' Field the football gates were closed for 1912. The 'Varsity held its final practice before the Yale game and the undergraduates made their annual march down to the field. There is great confidence in the Cambridge camp, but no confidence that justifies any such odds as 10 to 7 on the Crimson. This is not the measure of Harvard's feeling regarding the strength of this year's team, which, however, is being backed strong at even money.

In the practice to-day the 'Varsity and substitutes worked behind closed gates for more than an hour. There was no real scrimmage, but the 'Varsity put on all its plays and spent a lot of time getting some new forward passes running smoothly. The team had some drill on defense, but to make the attack fast and cohesive was the aim of the coaches in this last drill. While there was no attempt made to score by rushing, Brickley had his usual chances to make field goals, and succeeded in both of his drop-kick trials from the twenty-five yard line.

There is no doubt that Harvard figures that Brickley will be the central figure of Saturday's match. He has won Harvard's last two games from Princeton and Dartmouth with his field goals, and the Crimson believes this is the year for lightning striking three times in the same place.

H. Hardwick was back in the line-up at left half back this afternoon. He still is bothered by the heavy cold which he has had since the Dartmouth game, but he will surely be in the game Saturday when the whistle blows. Hardwick was replaced by Bradlee late in the signal drill, but not because he failed to play his usual fast game. That Trumbull was at right guard again indicates that the coaches have decided to start him against Yale.

To-night it was said that the cold weather had been a great boon to Trumbull and that his physical condition warrants his being in the opening line-up at New Haven. He is many pounds lighter than Driscoll, but is faster. Harvard has had Trumbull on the rush line in most of its games this Fall, and the coaches feel that the team will be faster at the beginning of the game with him at right guard than with the more powerful Driscoll. Harvard, which has relied on its speed this Fall rather than on its weight, figures that Trumbull will help the style of the game that is being planned. Harvard believes that its chances to beat Yale lie in making the most of its speed early in the game. Driscoll, however, is almost sure to be used in the second period.

Harry Gardner was at quarter back for most of the drill, Bradlee getting in for a few plays. Gardner's work has been highly satisfactory this Fall, but in the Dartmouth game he showed an early season tendency to hesitate with his signals and to make the team slow down after it had once got up steam. He is, however, by far the best quarter back Harvard has.

After the secret practice was over today the entire undergraduate body of the university romped down to Soldiers' Field to cheer the team. Coach Haughton waited until the boys had trooped into the stadium and then had the regulars and the substitutes go up and down the field several times with some simple plays. While this dress parade was taking place the students made the air ring with their songs and cheers, the latter including ovations for players and coaches alike.

To-night there was a monster mass meeting at the Harvard Union. Several of the coaches, including Haughton and Leary, spoke, and Capt. Wendell told the undergraduates that this year's team has a splendid chance to beat Yale. Percy Haughton said that he expected a close, hard game, and felt that Harvard had slightly the edge. "But, boys," he said, "don't let any one tell you that the odds are 10 to 7 in Harvard's favor; it is not so."

The 'Varsity backs will go to New Haven to-morrow at 10 A. M., returning at night to New London, where the other men will arrive Friday.

Navy's Line-Up Still Unsettled.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 20.—Shielded from the public gaze, the Naval Academy football squad continued its practice this afternoon. Although some special plays were attempted, most of the work was on straight football, as it is realized that the team needs to be driven hard before it is in shape to oppose the Army team. There are also several positions in the line which are still doubtful, and several candidates are being urged to fight hard for the places. Centre is still in doubt between Walker and Perry, but the latter, who is heavier and who has been coming along fast during the past two weeks, now appears to have the call. Hall and Ralston have the best chance for the tackle positions, but Redman, Vaughn, and Latimore are still possibilities. Behind the line the coaches have tentatively decided upon Capt. Rodes at quarter back, McReavy and Leonard at the halves, and H. Harrison at full back, but efforts are being made to develop plenty of substitutes. Nicholls and Miles are being used at quarter back, and Failing, Bates, Cook, Collins and Alexander for the other backs.

N. Y. U. Improving Rapidly.

With the vastly improved showing of the New York eleven in mind, the coaches have taken up the work of preparing the team for the Navy game on Saturday with new zest and are driving the squad at full speed. Quarter Back Huntley was still out of the line-up and Head Coach Olcott filled that position himself. He ran the team in signal practice and then led it in a scrimmage against the scrubs. Carrying the ball and being tackled ruined a good suit, for he did not wear football togs, but he evidently considered the results worth while. The Violet hopes to win the final game with the Navy in view of the rather poor showing which the latter has made to date. Last year Dalton of the Middies dropped over a field goal in the last quarter which defeated the locals. The defense is working splendidly, however, and the Navy back field will find it hard to pierce.

Lehigh's Practice Discouraging.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 20.—There was little satisfaction obtained from this afternoon's football practice at Lehigh. According to Coach Keady it proved the worst afternoon's work of the season. The last scrimmage for the season took place to-day. It proved a fierce affair in which the 'Varsity was able to score only a touchdown. The redeeming features, however, were the pretty placement goals which were executed by Capt. Pazzetti. The two ends, two tackles, and one half back position which have been open were practically settled to-day. Resident Coach Keady pitted McCaffrey and Sawtelle, ends, against Vela and Greene; Tate and Houser, tackles, against Bailey and Scruggs, and told them their work would determine the selection for the 'Varsity team.

Four Riders Follow Hounds.

Special to The New York Times.

HICKSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The drag hunt starting at Hicksville at 10 o'clock this morning, had, owing to Horse Show week, but a small attendance. The hounds were put down at the Willetts place, ran across the S. J. Underhill farm and Bell estate, checking at the Syosset Cross Roads. Again they were put down at the Underhill farm, running across the Lewis and MacDonald farms and finishing at Syosset schoolhouse. Among the riders following were W. G. Park, J. S. Von Stade, J. Beall, and J. E. Davis, M. F. H.

Two Swimming Meets To-night.

There will be two dual swimming meets of the public high schools this evening. The Boys' High School will oppose Erasmus Hall at the Brooklyn Public Baths, Fourth Avenue and President Street, Brooklyn. C. J. Dalton will referee. Townsend Harris Hall and Stuyvesant High School will compete at the C. C. N. Y. Natatorium, starting at 8 o'clock. Arthur McAleeman will officiate as referee.

HOPPE AGAIN WINS 18.2 BILLIARD TITLE

Champion Defeats Ora Morningstar, 500 to 276, in Deciding Game of Tournament.

FINAL STANDING OF THE PLAYERS.

	W.	L.	High Average.	High Run.
Hoppe	6	1	29 7-17	122
Slosson	5	2	26 6-19	166
Yamada	4	3	25	138
Morningstar	4	3	21 7-23	167
Demarest	3	4	23 17-21	132
Cline	3	4	16 20-30	85
Sutton	2	5	20 20-24	140
Taylor	1	6	16 1-31	117

Willie Hoppe again won the 18.2 balk line billiard championship of the world last night in the ballroom at the Hotel Astor when he defeated Ora Morningstar of Pittsburgh and took first place in the tournament which has been in progress for the past two weeks. Hoppe's victory came easy last night by a score of 500 to 276, and his average was a fraction over 22. His supremacy among the players who gathered here to play for the title has been unquestioned from the start. He has won six games and lost one, Yamada, the young Japanese player, being the only one to defeat him.

Hoppe's grand average for the tournament was 18 131-186. He had a total of 3,479 points in 186 innings.

Hoppe's victory gives him the first leg on the new trophy, a huge silver cup, and also about $2,400 in cash. George Slosson gets about $1,800 for second place. Yamada and Morningstar are tied for third money, and this position will be decided at the Astor to-night. Third place will be worth about $1,200 and fourth place $600.

While Hoppe was at no time extended, last night he displayed his remarkable playing at various times. This was especially true in the fifteenth inning, when he made a short run of 25, but in making it he made several daring shots. One was a long bank shot, his contact with the end cushion coming with the balls almost in the centre of the table. He made the carrom without disturbing the position of the ball. Another daring shot was a long follow in which he had to anticipate a kiss-off of half a dozen inches.

Hoppe continued this brillinat playing in the next inning in making a collection of 74. He found Morningstar's "leave" bad, with the balls widely scattered. He played open billiards for some time, carrying the ball all the way around the table. On the thirty-ninth carrom he got the balls assembled along the lower rail, and played a nursing game along the lines, his driving for position and control being unusually skillful.

The champion had the balls lined up again at his seventieth carrom, but he solved it with a massé over which he pondered for many seconds. He missed his seventy-fifth shot in this inning on a long three-cushion attempt.

Hoppe was apparently on the way to run out his string in the eighteenth inning when, after a difficult massé, he bunched in the upper corner of the table. Hoppe on his next shot failed to get the balls out of balk and the run ended. He tried an unusually daring shot in the next inning, a three-cushion bank, which missed by a hair.

At this stage of the match Hoppe had 469 points and Morningstar 250. Apparently, Morningstar thought he had a chance, for he changed his cue and went to the table with the remark, "Oh, there is plenty of time to win this game yet." But the Pittsburgh player was mistaken. He never had a chance. He was complaining that he couldn't get started. His trouble was not in getting started; it was keeping up the run after he got going. Morningstar's best run was 42, in the seventeenth inning, and his misses were on easy attempts.

Compared with Hoppe all his opponents in this tournament looked slow. The champion plays with such speed and ease that even the best work of a slow deliberate player like Morningstar does not come in for favorable comparison. Morningstar got very strong in the twenty-first inning and hit Hoppe's ball with such a violent stroke that he knocked it off the table. That upset him and he missed on the next shot.

Hoppe's first productive endeavor came in the third inning, when he clicked off a run of 77, during which he displayed all the billiard skill of which he is master. Morningstar apparently got a start in the same inning, but he missed a simple carrom and left the balls in an excellent position for his opponent.

Hoppe took advantage of the set-up by reeling off 51 points. This run terminated when Hoppe found the balls line up and played a follow shot, depending on a kiss for the second contact, which failed. Morningstar began his fourth inning with a difficult massé shot and ran 33, and it ended with an unsolved line-up.

Morningstar made the first miss of the game in the sixth inning on a one-cushion shot the length of the table. The score:

Hoppe—5 8 77 51 36 15 19 1 10 1 13 15 4 1 25 74 86 26 2 3 13 15—500. Average—22 16-22. High runs—86, 77, 74.

Morningstar—19 1 14 33 25 0 0 5 3 11 0 0 27 12 0 32 42 8 18 1 25—276. Average—13 3-21. High runs—42, 33, 32.

Referee—A. G. Cutler.

Winners with the Cue.

The Chicago team of the National Inter-City Three-Cushion Carrom Billiard League finished their metropolitan trip, which marked the opening of the league in the East, last night at Keeney's Academy in Brooklyn, when James Shea defeated Dave Louderbach of Brooklyn in the final game of the three-game series by the score of 50 to 40. The New York team defeated them in three straight games last week and their victory last night over Brooklyn gives them two games won and four lost.

Last night marked the beginning of the second round in the amateur Class C 18.2 balk line billiard tournament at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue. In the two games decided William Mason and T. F. Donahue were the winners. The former defeated Charles Abrams by the score of 50 to 33 in thirty-six minutes. In the second game Donahue defeated E. Conway by the score of 50 to 36 in twenty-six innings.

INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY.

Yale Team Out of Championship Race for the Coming Year.

At a meeting in the Princeton Club of the hockey representatives of Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth, Cornell, and Columbia, it was decided that the Yale team would not be a factor in the intercollegiate series for the championship as the Elis declared themselves out.

The reason given was that the blue are now in possession of a rink of their own, and because they desire to play when they want to and whoever they can make matches with. The journey to New York and Boston in pursuit of matches, as has been the case in years gone by, has proved to be a stumbling block to the Elis, and they did not want to go through that hardship this year.

Each of the managers of the other four teams represented will make up their own schedule as in previous years, and it is expected that play will begin shortly after the first of the year.

COULON BEATS GOLDMAN.

Bantamweight Champion Finds Easy Mark in Brooklyn Boy.

Johnny Coulon, the bantamweight champion, found a somewhat easy mark in Charlie Goldman last night at the Royale Athletic Club in Brooklyn, and beat him from end to end in a workmanlike manner. Both boys were on their feet and battling hard at the final bell, but the final session's "comeback" by the Brooklyn lad was only a flash and he was a badly outpointed boxer at the end.

The boys weighed in at 113½ and 113 pounds, respectively, with Goldman giving the half pound. The champion showed considerable improvement over his bout with Kid Williams recently, but continued to give evidence of poor judgment in the matter of distance.

With but several flashes by Goldman, Coulon was the aggressor throughout, being after his man continually and seldom giving him a moment's let-up. He worked his job to perfection, but there was a seeming lack of steam behind his right arm punches, which Goldman weathered without much trouble. On the whole it was a somewhat easy win, with the champion still in need of a lot of work to fit him for more serious competition.

Mike Farrell and Bull Anderson waded through ten rounds of the slam-bang style of fighting that the crowd liked. In the fourth round Anderson keeled his man over with a right to the chin which made Farrell take the count of nine. In the eighth the latter returned the compliment with a similar punch which floored Anderson, who, however, was up in a jiffy. At the end of the ten rounds honors were even. In the tenth round preliminary, Bobby Collins beat Jimmy Carter. A big crowd witnessed the bouts.

BOXING COMMISSION DOINGS.

Connecticut Asks for Copy of Law Which New York Boxers Work Under.

That the State of Connecticut anticipates putting on the books of the laws of the Commonwealth boxing rules which will conform to those now in use in this State became evident yesterday, when the New York State Athletic Commission, in response to a communication from J. H. McMurray of Bridgeport, sent him a copy of the Frawley law, which was desired in order to have it as the precedent to go by in regard to a similar enactment in the Nutmeg State, which will be presented to the Legislature Jan. 13 next.

At yesterday's session of the commission a representative of the Athletic Exhibition Company of Albany asked for the transfer of the license issued to that organization to a new club, to be known as the Albany Athletic Club. After the matter of bond, &c., has been adjusted the commission announced that it would in all likelihood permit the transfer, with action to take place next week.

It having come to the attention of the commission that a club in Buffalo was acting in regard to the bouts of that territory on a winning and losing basis, with announcements to be made in certain Buffalo papers, the commission immediately got in touch with the organization and warned it that a continuance of the work would result in a forfeiture of its license, as the commission has ruled against the giving of decisions.

Members of the commission are at work arranging a new code of rules. Each of the Commissioners will finish his labors in that direction next week, when their suggestions will be gone over and the good points of each selected as the standard for future use for the game in this State.

FRENCH BANTAM WINS.

Charles Ledoux Strong but Not Clever in Defeating Battling Reddy.

Charles Ledoux of France, bantamweight champion of Europe, made his American debut last night in a ten-round bout at the Fairmont A. C., in which he clearly outpointed Battling Reddy, a second rate bantamweight of Harlem. The Frenchman is a muscular dwarf, built along the lines of Johnny Coulon, with powerful shoulders and frail limbs, and relies entirely on his strength to win his battles. The foreigner before the contest was heralded as a whirlwind of speed and strength, but his showing last night, although he won easily, did not impress many that he was of the calibre of either Coulon or Kid Williams, the sensational little bantam of Baltimore.

His style of work is very open, and from the very outset he displayed a continued wildness, which many times caused him to miss by wide margins. He began at the first clang of the bell and chased after the local boy, who appeared somewhat scared at the fact that he was facing the best of the class developed in Europe. Reddy managed to stay until the end of the scheduled ten rounds, and although showing marks of a terrific body beating, had few marks on his face, but left the ring in bad shape.

Gibbons Outpointed by McCarron.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Jack McCarron of Allentown, Penn., outfought Mike Gibbons of St. Paul in a six-round bout to-night at the National Athletic Club. Gibbons showed more science, but appeared overcautious, while McCarron, by forcing the fighting throughout the bout, earned the decision. He missed many swings, but occasionally landed hard.

Dundee Knocks Out Conley.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—Johnny Dundee, the New York featherweight, completely outclassed Frankie Conley of Kenosha, Wis., last night at the Vernon arena. After using the Wisconsin lad as a human punching bag for eighteen rounds, Dundee shot in a terrific left to the jaw at the beginning of the nineteenth that virtually put Conley out. Referee Eyton stopped the bout and gave Dundee the decision.

NO POLITICS FOR A. A. U.

Ruling Athletic Body Appoints Committee to Attend Conference.

That the members of the Amateur Athletic Union intend not to be mixed up in the politics which appear to have become an important point in the international situation as far as some nations on the Continent are concerned is evidenced in the resolutions framed and passed upon by the A. A. U., which read as follows:

Whereas, The Amateur Athletic Union recognizes the splendid service rendered the cause of international track and field sport by the International Olympic Committee; and,

Whereas, The Amateur Athletic Union recognizes further the necessity for a definite and permanent schedule of Olympic events and the necessity for the adoption of athletic rules for international competition, especially in the Olympiads conducted under the auspices of the International Olympic Committee; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the President appoint not more than five representatives from the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, of which the President shall be one, to attend a conference to be held in the Summer of 1913 at a place to be hereafter selected for the purpose of forming an International Athletic Congress or Federation for such purposes, the expenses of such representatives to be paid by the Amateur Athletic Union; and, furthermore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States that any action of such congress or federation, so far as it pertains to participation in Olympiads, should be subject to the approval of the International Olympic Committee.

AUTO DEALERS PLAN TO HOLD RACE MEETS

$2,100 Subscribed for Stock in Proposed Organization to Promote Industry.

Formal steps toward the formation of an association for the advancement of interest in the motor car industry in this city were taken at a meeting at George Rector's yesterday. More than a score of automobile and accessory dealers were present, and a committee of seven was selected to draft the constitution of the proposed association and report at a meeting to be held at the same place next Monday afternoon at 3:30. The meeting was at the call of the Motor Dealers Exhibit Company, which successfully conducted two race meets at Brighton Beach recently.

The local automobilists were enthusiastic over the proposition of forming the association, and before the meeting adjourned $2,100 was subscribed for stock. John C. Wetmore acted as Chairman, and he emphasized the fact that the proposed organization was not intended to cater to any particular branch of sport, but was to create interest in automobiling by the conduct of all kinds of contests and affairs. Many of those present were called upon to express their views as to the need of the proposed association, and they all declared that there was a field for it in this city.

George H. Robertson, the retired racing driver, who is now in the accessory business, told of the interest created in local automobile circles by the Vanderbilt Cup race when it was held on Long Island, and the incidental boom to the New York automobile trade.

Robertson suggested that the proposed organization should make a bid for the conduct of the Vanderbilt Cup race next year, as New York is the most logical place for the running of that classic.

Several speakers declared that they did not favor the conduct of races on mile dirt tracks because of the dangers attending such meets, though it was admitted that such events attract more attention than others. I. M. Uppercue suggested that the proposed association build a special automobile track, not necessarily more than a mile in circumference, on which to conduct contests of this sort. Several suggestions were made, among them being the holding of an annual outdoor automobile show in the Spring at one of the baseball parks in the city. Other suggestions included the holding of a non-stop run from New York to Chicago, the cars being piloted by a different crew each day and night, and a tour of new models through the territory controlled by local dealers.

William Schimpf, Chairman of the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association, sent word to the meeting that he was in sympathy with the plans of the proposed organization. Chairman Wetmore selected the following seven members to act as a committee to draft the constitution and select a name for the association: W. C. Poertner, Edward McShane, George H. Robertson, J. C. Nichols, E. Lascaris, I. M. Uppercue, and Burton Brown.

OUTLAW LEAGUE IN WEST.

Chicago Only Major League City to be Invaded by Proposed Organization.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Rumors that certain clubs in the American Association and Western League are planning to become "baseball outlaws" and form a new league were confirmed here to-night.

President "Tip" O'Neill of the Western League admitted that discussion of the prposed league had been going on for weeks and that the subject took form at a meeting of the league held in Milwaukee last Week.

Certain club owners in the Western League asserted their cities properly belonged to a circuit with Milwaukee, Kansas City, and Minneapolis. It was contended also that President O'Neill was too close to major league influences, and the Directors, therefore, ordered the league's headquarters moved from Chicago.

The invasion of Chicago and the establishment of rival clubs in American Association cities are said to be included in the plan of the proposed league. The American Association is supposed to have an option on a fvorable piece of ground on Chicago's north side, and for several years has threatened to place a club here.

Plans of the proposed league, it is said, included possible clubs in Chicago, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Joseph, and an eighth city yet to be named.

"Nothing has been said to me officially regarding the proposed league," said President O'Neill. "But the proposition has reached me from other sources.

"I want it to be understood that I am in no way connected with the project. I am opposed to 'outlaw' leagues. For years I have been identified with organized baseball, and I'm going to stick with it."

PENNINGTON, N. J., Nov. 20.—Since the erection of the new gymnasium at the Pennington School a new branch of athletics will be introduced this Winter, that of swimming. Coach Seikel of the athletic department has issued a call for candidates, and about forty men reported for try-outs. There was nothing done from a workout point, as only a few of the men were allowed to show their skill in the pool, but to-morrow everything will be in full force.

ATLANTIC Y. C. ELECTION.

Annual Meeting to be Held Dec. 9 at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The annual meeting of the Atlantic Yacht Club will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria, Dec. 9, at 8:30 P. M. The annual election, which takes place at the meeting, will have no opposition ticket, the following nominations having been reported to the Secretary by the Nominating Committee: Commodore, J. Stuart Blackton; Vice Commodore, Willard N. Taylor; Rear Commodore, Arthur W. Teele; Trustees, James F. Allen, Edwin Palmer, Peter W. Rouss, and Albert E. Smith; Secretary, Edward I. Graff; Treasurer, P. H. Hart, and Membership Committee, Kenneth Lord, Thomas T. Hopper, and W. D. Gash.

The Regatta Committee announces an invitation extended by the German-American Race Committee of the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club, Kiel, and the Eastern Yacht Club, Boston, to participate in the trial races for the selection of three yachts to represent America in the September races. These races are for yachts whose measurement (length on the water line plus extreme beam plus extreme draught) does not exceed thirty-two feet or 9.75 meters. Trial races will be held about Aug. 16, 1913, off Marblehead, entries for which close Saturday, July 19, 1913, at noon.

The Regatta Committee has determined the winners of all prizes, excepting the Commodore's Cup, for the past yacht and motor boat racing season. The winner of the Commodore's Cup will be determined as soon as the protests lodged with other clubs and bearing on the points in question have been decided. Notices to prize winners have been duly sent out. It is proposed to present the prizes at the annual dinner in December instead of sending them beforehand to their respective owners, as heretofore announced.

German-American Yacht Races.

Carlos De Zafra, Alvan Nickerson, and J. Lewis Luckenbach, the Regatta Committee of the Atlantic Yacht Club, have notified the members that the German-American Race Committee of the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club of Kiel and the Eastern Yacht Club have invited yacht owners to participate in the trial races for the selection of three yachts to represent America in the September races. These contests are for yachts whose length on the water line plus the extreme beam, plus the extreme draught, does not exceed 32 feet, or 9.75 meters. The trial races will be held about Aug. 16, 1913, off Marblehead, entries for which close Saturday, July 19, at noon.

The Regatta Committee also announces that the prizes won in this year's yacht and motor boat races will be presented at the annual dinner which follows the annual election on the evening of Dec. 9 at the Waldorf-Astoria. Following are the nominations for officers for 1913: Commodore, J. Stuart Blackton; Vice Commodore, Willard U. Taylor; Rear Commodore, Arthur W. Teele; Trustees, James F. Allen, Edwin Palmer, Peter W. Rouss, and Albert E. Smith; Treasurer, P. H. Hart; Secretary, Edward I. Graff; Membership Committee, Kenneth Lord, Thomas T. Hopper, and W. D. Gash; Nominating Committee, F. M. Wilson, Theodore L. Bailey, W. Hunt Hall, I. E. Burdick, Max Grundner, and Walter H. Sykes, Jr.

Le Sauvage Re-elected Commodore.

George R. Le Sauvage was re-elected Commodore of the Bensonhurst Yacht Club at a meeting of the organization at Westlawn last night. It was the first annual meeting that the organization has held in its new home, and was attended by more than 150 Lower Bay Corinthians. The gathering was an enthusiastic one, and from the various reports read it was learned that the club is on a good financial footing, regardless of the fact that the taking over of Westlawn has been an expensive undertaking. The full ticket chosen is as follows: Commodore, George R. Le Sauvage, sloop Joy; Vice Commodore, Richard W. Hummell, sloop Dixie; Rear Commodore, Harris A. Robbins, yawl Wahkan; Secretary, W. W. W. Roberts; Treasurer, C. H. Clayton; Board of Directors, George L. Beston, Charles H. Bassler, Charles M. Wells, Bruce Stickle, Carl L. Dingens, John W. Cherrie; Nominating Committee, yacht owners: Robert E. Dingham, Charles H. MacKrell, R. W. Rummell, Jr.; non-yacht owners: E. S. Golding, William T. Davis, William E. Wilson.

Soccer Football Cup Ties.

The second round of the American Amateur Association soccer cup ties will be played Sunday. The game between St. George and New York Celtic promises to be the feature of the contests scheduled. In the New York State League competition both teams have secured the same number of points and have the same goal record, 12 for and 7 against. The game will be played at Marquette Oval at 12:15 P. M. The early start is made in order to give the followers of the other teams a chance to see the game.

SULLIVAN TO BE HONORED.

Amateur Athletic Union Veteran to Supervise Panama-Pacific Sports.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—That James E. Sullivan of New York will be tendered the Director Generalship of the athletic end of the Panama-Pacific Exposition became known here to-day. George James of this city, one of the delegates to the Amateur Athletic Union session, held in New York last Monday, has wired to the athletic authorities here that the Union has granted to the Panama-Pacific Exposition the boxing and wrestling and the track and field championships for 1915.

F. J. V. Skiff, for the Directors of the Exposition, will announce Mr. Sullivan's appointment about Dec. 1, with the understanding that he will have absolute authority over all sports over which the Amateur Athletic Union claims jurisdiction.

It is planned to have the sports take place in Golden Gate Park, where it is said a cement stadium encircling the one-mile ellipse will be erected. Within this enclosure will be held all the sports of the Exposition, including the horseback riding and many events of similar nature to those which were decided at the recent Olympic games in Stockholm.

Mr. Sullivan is to have sole charge of the conduct of the games, with the naming of the dates, etc.

Croppers in Watchung Hunt.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 20.—There were numerous croppers in the chase of the Watchung Hunt Club to-day and while many started only a few finished the 14-mile run. Among the croppers were Miss Marjorie Dana, Miss Margaret Montgomery of New York, and F. D. French. While J. Schuyler Casey, riding Foxey Foot, had a bad fall and was unconscious for twenty-minutes, his injuries were not so serious and he returned to New York later. Jesse Metcalf of New York, also went off and lost his horse. The hounds were thrown in on the Tietz farm at Watchung Hills and after crossing numerous farms made a check on the Lambert farm. The second check was at Fanwood. The following riders finished: R. C. Finch, M. F. H., Mrs. Brown Rolston, Miss Gertrude Noe, Jack Oday, W. P. Smith, Jr., H. L. Finch, Mrs. W. S. Brown, F. D. French, and Huntsman Harrison.

CAN THE JOB BE FINISHED?

The atrocious conspiracy which secured the assassination of the gambler Rosenthal has been exposed by due process of law. The conspirators, beginning with the police officer who devised and led it, partly from revenge, partly to save his vile traffic from exposure, and who was expected to shield the actual murderers from detection and punishment, have been convicted and, legal difficulties apart, will be executed.

It is now pertinent to ask what those responsible for the conduct of the Police Department, so far as definite responsibility can be fixed, are doing or trying to do to abolish conditions that have made this terrible crime possible. So far as the public are concerned there is at present no adequate answer to this inevitable query. The Mayor, whose direct and indirect control of the police, while not absolute, is sufficient to enable him to do much, seems inclined to regard the affair as an incident in ordinary police administration, and almost as an accident, over which sensible and practical men should not get greatly excited. His general tone in referring to it is not merely apologetic; it is resentful. His mind dwells on the injustice of holding his Commissioner responsible and of condemning the whole police force for the misbehavior of "one subordinate."

This seems to us an unfortunate, unreasonable, narrow, and dangerous view to take of so shocking an occurrence. The peril to the community is not that the whole force may unfairly be discredited or that some high official shall be unjustly blamed. The real peril is that the conditions to which we have referred as making the crime possible will not be abolished. By fixing public attention on possible unfairness to the force or to the Commissioner, the Mayor tends to distract it from the really important meaning of the situation. However unintentionally, he also tends to divert public attention from his own duty in the premises. He sets up men of straw and gallantly bowls them down. He leaves the public in ignorance as to what he is doing or means to do to root out the causes that have bred corruption and led to assassination in the police force.

It is not credible that the hideous conspiracy and crime that has been brought to light could have been the work of one police officer without preexisting conditions involving many others. A single officer who should undertake it entirely by himself would be sure to encounter detection from below or from above, and, once detected, or reasonably suspected, if the police force were thoroughly sound he would promptly be prevented from carrying it out. This is a fact that is generally plain to the public and is the source of deep anxiety and of mortification. From his public utterances the Mayor does not seem to be much impressed by it. For his own standing and for the safety of the city this is greatly to be regretted.

A PRESSING APPEAL.

Generous contributions to the Red Cross work, while they continue to be a matter of benevolence, are now much more than that. They are a matter of self-preservation. The cholera and typhus which have attacked impartially the contending forces in the marshes about the Tchatalja hills are as dangerous to the world as to the immediate victims, for their infection will spread unless checked on the spot. At best, the resources of the Turkish Administration to deal with the peril are inadequate, and those of the Bulgarians no less so. The former are demoralized by defeat, the latter are hampered by conditions of actual warfare, in which scant attention can be given to any but the men fit to fight.

With the cessation of fighting on the adoption of the armistice there will be opportunity for the splendid organization of the Red Cross to get in its effective work. The demand for all sorts of supplies and for trained men and women to apply them will be very great and very pressing. We, in America, are too far from the field of operations to send nurses or physicians. But we can send money, and we should send it without stint. The Treasurer of the Red Cross is Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, 52 William Street.

PUSHCART MARKETS.

The Corporation Counsel has expressed to Chairman W. D. Smith of the Board of Aldermen's Market Committee his opinion that pushcart markets cannot be provided in the street space under the New York Central's tracks on Park Avenue north of 111th Street and at First Avenue between Third and Fourteenth Streets. But the vacant places underneath the bridges may be used.

Alderman Brush will therefore recommend to the Market Committee that an ordinance be submitted abolishing street peddling in the district below Houston Street and thereabout, designating for the peddlers adequate spaces beneath the Manhattan and Williamsburg Bridges. President McAneny, moreover, has approved the Essex Market Court Building for market purposes.

The designation of these places would relieve the most congested districts of Manhattan, from which street peddlers should be excluded forthwith. This is a long-standing evil. It has become intolerable.

INDIANAPOLIS AND ROCHESTER.

The testimony in the trial of the dynamiting unionists at Indianapolis and the proceedings of the benevolent Federation of Labor at Rochester continue to afford interesting and instructive comparisons. Two of the forty-five defendant dynamiters were surrendered by their bondsmen upon testimony connecting them with the declaration that "there would be — to pay unless union men were employed on that bridge." The same idea was expressed in The Bridgemen's Magazine from which an extract was read into the record to the effect that the dynamitings were designed to convince employers that "union men were cheaper." The testimony shows that the employers were willing to prefer union men and to meet union conditions, but were dynamited upon refusing to employ union men exclusively. That is the meaning of "recognition of the union," and the requirement that goods must bear a union label, or that a union button must be worn by workers. Unions making such stipulations are not simply bettering their own conditions of employment, as is their right. They are seeking to better themselves by making worse the conditions of livelihood of others. They are seeking to monopolize all the jobs there are for the benefit of one-tenth of the workers. It is a monopoly and a tyranny using the language of benevolence, and the iron workers' union was willing to forward its ends by dynamiting the innocent and murdering girl typewriters who know too much. That is the testimony.

The proceedings at Rochester show that in the opinion of the federation these acts are too energetic for official approval, but the policy is the federation's own policy, and was reaffirmed in the proceedings published yesterday. President Gompers was virtuously indignant that anybody should seek to place him in the position of failing to defend boycotters. The right to take jobs from unorganized labor is one to be exercised in the struggle of the human family for betterment. Opposition to the boycott he holds to be an effort to suppress the liberty of the people, to take away their right of association and the right of free speech.

> I was assured when the anti-trust law was enacted that it could not be construed by the courts to do this. Now we know better. Don't for a moment imagine that I am in fear that there is any power great enough to destroy our movement. No one can do that but ourselves. Our greatest danger is from within, not the outside.

Mr. Gompers spoke truly. The greatest danger to the federation is from its President and his self-revelations. So long as the federation associates itself with his views of the boycott, of injunctions, of contempts of court, so long the federation makes it necessary to oppose it in the public interest. Our institutions cannot be worked on the theory that the law as enacted by representatives of the people, and as administered by the courts, is inferior to the edicts of any organization whatever, especially one which cloaks malevolence to nine-tenths of the workers under words of benevolence toward one-tenth. With allowance for the imperfection of human institutions our Government is for all, and yet unionists are declaring that non-unionists have no rights that unionists are bound to respect, and are demanding that unionists shall be exempt from laws designed to protect all. This is so far from being an extravagant statement of the facts that the unionists themselves proposed an amendment of the law, with an explicit and specific exception of unionist procedure. That is not law, but the negation of law. It is the enactment of privilege for labor at a time when the temper of Americans is hostile to any sort of privilege. What labor wants cannot be stated in terms which are not offensive to all but labor. The idea that all would be right if only all would become trades unionists is an absurdity. For, in the first place, there is the right to have a discretion about becoming trades unionists. And, in the second place, there would be no reason for being trades unionists if all were trades unionists, for then there would be no privilege for any which all did not equally enjoy. The upshot is that trades unionism is doomed unless it squares its words with its deeds, and both with the law. If it fails to moderate its excesses they must be moderated. This cannot continue to be a free country for all so long as there is license to dynamiters and to those seeking the same end by means more "refined," as Mr. Gompers says, but not less cruel and malicious. For trades unionism within the law there is the same liberty as there is for all. For the trades unionism which the federation practices, and which Mr. Gompers defended at Rochester, there can be only short shrift, and no quarter from those who understand it, as even many trades unionists do not.

NEWS REPORTS OF MEDICAL MATTERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The New York papers have recently had occasion to give much space to medical news. May I say, through your columns, which are unusually open and accurate in regard to medical matters, that much of what has been published about the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research has been misleading or without any foundation whatever, and that almost all of it has been without authorization or approval? Thus even The Times fell into the error of publishing a statement that a young man who had taken a fatal dose of morphine was sent to the Institute and brought back to life by means of Dr. S. J. Meltzer's apparatus for pharyngeal insufflation. No such case has been treated here. Again, Dr. Peyton Rous has been reported by other papers as making demonstrations on decapitated cats for the recent Congress of Surgeons, although he has never done any such operation. Misleading reports about Dr. Carrel and fictitious interviews with him have lately been too numerous for reference. It should be as unnecessary as it is impracticable to correct all these mistakes. But while such reports are still fresh in the memories of your readers it is perhaps well to remind them that scientific discoveries and demonstrations are very difficult for the ordinary news writer to understand, and are consequently particularly liable to be misrepresented.

HENRY JAMES, Jr.,
New York, Nov. 18, 1912.

Through an oversight, we suppose, Mr. James omitted to add that so far as lay in its power the Rockefeller Institute would gladly furnish, upon request, the correct information with regard to the doings of its staff. Perhaps more than any other institution organized for a serious work, the Rockefeller Institute has felt the necessity of making known the significance of that work to the public. Its management knows that popular misconceptions and erroneous beliefs must be carefully explained and confuted, and the news of its accomplishments in aid of suffering humanity must be published, else the enemies of medical research, who are ever alert and active, will succeed in hamstringing it in this country as it has been hamstrung in Great Britain. For this task of public enlightenment the newspapers are a necessary instrument; we have been assured by persons of high authority that they are invaluable. Of course, and for peculiar reasons, publications of medical news should be made with skill and judgment; therefore men of the highest capacity should be unsparing in their aid and encouragement of the newspapers' efforts to be accurate.

On this score The Times has little reason to complain. The error in one of its reports, which Mr. James points out, was one of a fully qualified informant and, though regrettable, was not of serious consequence. We should have felt more concerned about it if Mr. James had called attention to a vital error in our description of Dr. Meltzer's new method of pumping the breath of life into his patients' lungs. Meanwhile, we beg to offer to Mr. James assurances of our distinguished consideration, and to thank him for his compliment to The Times for its "unusually open and accurate" reports of medical matters, reports which must be made under handicaps of time and occasion of which the scientific worker is happily free.

THE RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS.

We do not hear much of the American Rhodes scholars. Graduates of various American universities and colleges have been enjoying the benefits of Cecil Rhodes's bequest since October, 1904. The appointments in this country are made in some cases by the colleges in rotation, but in most cases they are selected by a committee appointed by the colleges. They are submitted to a qualifying, not a competitive, examination. One of these examinations was held last month, and others will be held next October and in 1915. It is too early yet, the first Rhodes scholars having completed their Oxford course only five years ago, to judge what effect the well-intentioned plan of Mr. Rhodes may have upon our National life or in clarifying and strengthening our international relations. But we never hear of the Rhodes scholars. Few of us ever meet them.

Dr. George R. Parkin, Executive Secretary of the Rhodes trust, has been talking sharply of the quality of a large number of our Rhodes scholars before the National Association of State Universities at Oxford. One-third of them Dr. Parkin calls "high grade scholars," another third he classes as "fair," while of the other third he says it is a mystery to the Oxford Faculty how they got there. It is an open secret that there has been more or less dissatisfaction at Oxford about the character and attainments of the young Americans who have been sent to the university. The qualities demanded by the terms of the bequest, besides literary and scholarly attainments, include love of outdoor sports, courage, generosity, high moral character, and "desire to serve in public affairs." The complaint has been made that too many of the young Americans remain foreign to the Oxford atmosphere, and bear themselves as strangers, saving all they can of their £300 a year to spend in foreign travel in the vacations. Probably the real cause of complaint is that the students in general are not Americans of the type Oxford would like to receive, sons of rich men, amply provided with means, who have already traveled and know something of the world, and have the truly cosmopolitan character of highly developed Americans. Such young men among us do not go in for scholarships of any sort, though a few of them occasionally spend a term or two at foreign universities.

The inevitable provincialism of American Rhodes scholars the Oxford authorities must put up with. If a young man goes there with the repute, duly advertised in the local newspaper of his birthplace, of never having tasted liquor or touched tobacco, and of having always obeyed his parents, and served as Sunday school librarian, he may, nevertheless, meet all the requirements of the bequest. He can stand a little ridicule, and will doubtless be the better for it. Bad scholarship should not be tolerated at Oxford in Americans any more than it is tolerated in Englishmen. We must wait to see the benefits of the Rhodes experiment, and, doubtless, in time all the young men who get the scholarships, Colonials as well as Americans, will be of more sophisticated stuff and better able to make use of the priceless advantages of that university which Dr. Parkin says is still "the centre of the culture of the world."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Headless Cats Explained.

While the visiting surgeons were here last week our reports of what they were doing and seeing included a short account of the demonstration in a local laboratory of the possibility of keeping a decapitated cat alive for several hours. Next day we received a letter asking of what benefit to humanity this could be. The question was disguised as a simple request for information, but it evidently came from an anti-vivisectionist, and as evidently it was propounded on the assumption that such treatment of a cat could have no other object or result than the worse than useless gratification of morbid curiosity.

Knowing from the character of the men who made and watched the experiment that this assumption was false, The Times asked Prof. Lee of Columbia to answer the inquiry about the headless cat, and his reply appears in another column. It is a clear, explicit and accurate presentation of the scientist's mental attitude in searching for knowledge, and of his very different assumption that the acquisition of knowledge—of truth, as it is sometimes called—is in itself desirable, and for its vindication does not require proof of utility, immediate or even remote.

Of course no scientist pushes this principle to the extreme of claiming that any knowledge is worth any price, but none would doubt that it justified the performance of any painless operation on a cat. As it happens, however, so few scientific discoveries have failed sooner or later to be of practical use that as a matter of fact scientists confidently expect them all to be so, in time, and are as far as possible from considering research a waste of time, even from the utilitarian point of view, though its results do not at once give a measurable profit.

In regard to the decapitated cats Prof. Lee is not only able to explain why they were so treated, but also to show that from animals living with only the control and stimulation of the spinal cord the key to many physiological and pathological enigmas has already been found—that medicine has profited much and is sure to profit more from this simplification of its most complex and difficult problem.

It is not to be expected or even hoped that his demonstration will have any effect on the real anti-vivisectionists, their minds being as far beyond the influence of fact as of argument, but no sane and honest person can doubt that he gave an adequate and satisfactory answer to our correspondent's question.

Impossible, But It Happened.

Had any novelist or dramatist ventured to portray such a scene as that described yesterday in our dispatch from Los Angeles about the man who invaded the Central Police Station there with a box of dynamite on his back, that novelist or dramatist would instantly have been accused and condemned as one who had allowed his imagination to carry him into the domain of the impossible. His book or play, unless frankly farcical, would have been dismissed as worthless.

Yet the man with the dynamite did appear, he did command the situation for over an hour, and his warning that any interference with him would cause a dreadful explosion did lead to the hasty vacating of two court rooms where trials were in progress and to the removal of a hundred prisoners from the City Jail. These and other incidents of the strange episode might have figured properly enough in the libretto of a comic opera, but their presentation as a part of human experience would have been safe only in a newspaper and in history.

Mr. Kipling has contended that the reporter who saw two huge sea serpents thrown to the surface by a submarine earthquake would not dare to print the "story," or even to offer it for printing. Mr. Kipling was wrong, but his mistake was due to the fact that, though he was once a journalist, his natural and best product is fiction, and he has the literary artist's instinctive appreciation of the fact that, while he can safely enough tell impossible things, he must never fail to be plausible. The reporter is under no such obligation, and one who saw those blind snakes, so dreadful and pathetic in their blindness, would have "turned in his story at the desk" with full assurance that it would "get in." Nothing that is can be impossible, but anything without precedent in experience, like the Los Angeles affair, lacks the plausibility which the romancer must have under penalty of wearying and disgusting his readers by his offer of what will surely seem to them an obvious absurdity.

The strength of the California dynamiter lay in his insanity. That the policemen to whom he addressed his wild demands and his wilder threats were not cowards is shown by the sensible precautions they took to save others as well as themselves, and by the fact that one of them risked the peril of seizing the maniac and throwing his lighted infernal machine out into the street.

Increasing Library Facilities.

We have pleasant proof that the officials of our Public Library have a sensitive finger on the public pulse. Recently the pulse in question registered a perturbation that had been gathering for some time in consequence of a library schedule which closed the doors of special rooms to evening and Sunday readers. Under a revised schedule which has been put into effect this week the art and archaeology, genealogy, Jewish and Slavonic, economics, science and public documents rooms are open in the evening until 10 and from 1 P. M. to 10 P. M. on Sundays. Although the map, music, and Oriental rooms are not open in the evening, books shelved in any of these rooms may be consulted through the main reading room.

Those who work all day at things mundane or things prescribed, and must needs grab their bit of culture o' nights, will hail with sincere gratitude this action of the library in the matter of open house. Very probably the library would have responded with more alacrity to a demand for evening hours in the special departments had the public announced sooner and more definitely and openly its ideas on the subject, instead of growling ineffectively in private, and trusting to the chance little bird to chirp its complaints in the library's ear. That we confide our irritation to the official at the door when we find books denied us at the only time that we can use them, that we mutter our indignation to the marble corridors with a little crescendo directed at the elevator boy as we descend from our fruitless search for a book that we feel any library should possess in large numbers—all this affords temporary and personal relief, but little else, and is apt to leave the library officials helplessly regarding their good intentions.

No doubt the increased numbers who will make use of the rooms now open in the evenings and on Sundays will be a silent indication of the public's appreciation. But even if few readers should avail themselves of the privilege, there is little reason to close the door to those few and shut out the opportunity of luring the occasional straggler within the portal. The service of such an institution as a great public library is perhaps not so much in furnishing the ready-made student public with material as it is in creating a student public, in educating a more or less indifferent lot of people to the joy of books.

WAGNERIAN SELECTIONS

Should Not Monopolize Boston Symphony Programmes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few words anent Mr. Aldrich's remarks in last Sunday's Times about Wagnerian numbers on concert programmes and particularly the New York programmes of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It would, of course, be absurd to contend that Wagner's preludes and independent orchestral compositions are unsuitable for symphony concert. As one of your correspondents I did not intend to "ban" them. Indeed, I expressly said that an occasional Wagner overture would be welcome. Complaint has not been made, and could not justly be made so far as Boston Symphony concerts in New York are concerned, of a practice that Mr. Aldrich himself very properly and cogently "bans"—that is, the performance of "fragments taken from the dramatic portions of the works, wrested from their context and deprived of the stage setting of action, scenery, and declamation that the composer intended to be an inherent part of them."

My criticism was solely that from any point of view the number of Wagnerian selections has been disproportionately large. The programme for the evening concert of March 21, 1912, originally included the prelude to "Lohengrin" and the overture to "Tannhauser," which were played, and, as the soloist was detained by illness, the prelude to "Meistersinger" was substituted, making three Wagnerian numbers in all. On Saturday, March 23, 1912, there were rendered the Siegfried Idyl, the funeral march from "Goetterdaemmerung," and the prelude and Liebstod from "Tristan and Isolde." These were the last pair of concerts of last season, and when the programmes for the first pair of this season were announced, each containing a Wagnerian selection, it was not unnatural to apprehend that the former policy of superabundance would be continued.

WOMEN NURSES DISCOURAGED.

Unkind Criticism from Doctors Thins Their Ranks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a friend of the nurse, and a lover of justice, I wish to ask why the pupil nurse is taught such loyalty and subjection to the doctor? Why is she expected and commanded, when graduated, whether in private duty or in an institution, to always defend the doctor, even when she knows him guilty of gross mistakes, and possibly worse?

I know from personal observation, having many acquaintances in the medical profession, that doctors seldom spare the nurse. If her mistakes and faults are so glaring, and "none is reliable," as I heard one doctor calmly state, why not strive to uplift them or abolish them altogether? If there are some fine women and capable nurses in the work, is it not a shame that what they stand for should not be loyally protected by the medical men? Nothing ever done by human beings, that is fundamentally a good and noble work, is benefited by unkind criticism.

Is it fair for a doctor to employ a nurse, and after she has done her best, even though her best is pretty bad, according to the opinion of the doctor and possibly the patient, to disparage her to other doctors, and, strange to say, to the laity, as I know they do? How can a doctor expect loyalty from his nurses when he feels no responsibility toward them?

New York, Nov. 18, 1912. F. L. T.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As to "Smoking in Cars," it strikes me that the corrective measure proposed by "Advocate" of equipping conductors with constabulary powers is hardly practicable, because the average street car conductor is not temperamentally fitted for the responsibility, nor is he in position to prosecute his case while serving the public as he should.

Resort to the summons, and depute the business of it to the railroad companies' Inspectors. They are men tried in the service, they would not be so susceptible to the excitement of the moment, and as they can be found at sufficiently frequent intervals, they ought to answer as well as the "minion of the law," whose whereabout when a row is on is well nigh as problematical as a needle in a haystack. Canalejas's Faith.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to take exception to the statement of the Rev. Mr. Gordiano, pastor of the Spanish Evangelical Church, that Premier Canalejas, "although not specifically a member of any Protestant sect, was a Protestant of the highest type in spirit." Senor Canalejas was above all a Catholic who observed every requirement of the Church—as his Chaplain has publicly announced. He maintained a private chapel in his residence, permission for the erection of which was given him by the Holy See, while he was negotiating for a revision of the Concordat. It was because of his Catholicity that many sincere Spaniards supported him in his effort to change the relations of the Church and the State from an economic view. W. J. D.

THE "STRACHAN FUND."

No Teacher Need Contribute to It, Says Mr. Levy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Murray's letter complaining of "graft" in the schools, which he illustrates by the organized attempt being made to raise a fund to present to Miss Strachan, District Superintendent, and your editorial article on the same subject, indicate that the matter deserves the most serious consideration.

I may say to Mr. Murray and all others that no teacher need have any hesitancy about absolutely refusing to contribute to any such fund. Far from being criticised or hampered in her ambitions by such refusal, she will receive the heartiest approval, I believe, of every member of the Board of Education.

No District Superintendent could in the slightest way affect her career, directly or indirectly. In making these remarks it is but fair to state that I do not believe for a moment that Miss Strachan would have the slightest feeling against a teacher who, as a matter of principle, refused to contribute to any such fund. Quite the contrary.

I regret exceedingly the ill-advised policy of raising the so-called "Strachan fund." It will bring no credit upon those that give and those that receive. For my part, I would like to call the attention of every one connected with this movement to how much it is opposed to public policy. While in some cases such a fund might be deserving, still it encourages a dangerous precedent, which may in the future have a very ill-effect upon the conduct of others.

That the law realizes the danger of such funds is shown by the various penal statutes that have been passed from time to time bearing upon this subject. That the Board of Education is alive to the possible dangers from such a situation is shown by Section 45, Subdivision 17, of its by-laws, which reads as follows:

> No teacher or pupil shall be permitted to contribute toward any gift or testimonial to a Principal, teacher, Superintendent, or other school officer, nor shall money or any other thing be in any case collected, taken, or received from a teacher or pupil for the purpose of presenting a gift or testimonial to any Principal, teacher, Superintendent, or other school officer.

The teachers who desire to honor Miss Strachan might ponder over your suggestion that they combine privately and out of school hours to erect some suitable and imperishable memorial in her honor. It would show the high appreciation in which they hold Miss Strachan and relieve the situation from the criticisms that have been made.

THE NIGHT PARADERS

Had Purposes of Their Own Not Mentioned by Mr. Wheeler.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Mr. Everett P. Wheeler's letter regarding the women's night parade he states that "the suffragists are marching in the wrong direction; their intentions are good, but alas! the road to the infernal regions is paved with just that material."

So far as I know there never before was a "night parade" of women in any city to celebrate such a victory, and my knowledge of the infernal regions is limited—up to date.

Mr. Wheeler speaks of the laws of the State of New York as being "fair and just." Were they always fair and just? But, anyhow, New York is not the whole map. He also speaks of "wives and mothers," but, alas! what about us old maids? Referring to his remarks regarding the "legislation of divine origin," I admit that sounds well, but what about the legislation we get from our politicians of to-day? There is a marked difference between the two. Alas! And again, alas!

To quote from his letter once more: "It is to the mothers and sisters that we look primarily for that teaching and training in sound principles which will keep the man from committing these crimes," i. e., "murder, adultery, robbery, etc., etc." True again, Mr. Wheeler. Father has an easy time—he votes for the conditions which keep in power the men who aid and abet these very crimes, while mother must remain within her four walls and try to train her boys to shun these sins which we all know are on every side—and then mother's hands are tied so that she can do nothing to change these conditions in the world into which her son must enter.

Then, too, what about the thousands of girls without homes? Are they not worth saving? Frankly, I do not like to have them entirely overlooked, even by Mr. Wheeler. But perhaps he does not know that there are girls and women in the world who have other things to do besides repair the morals of boys and men, and that to these women the vote would be a weapon in their hands for decent living conditions, proper sanitary conditions, fire escapes, three meals a day—and a few other much needed luxuries in the working woman's world. Fraudulent Advertising.

From The Music Trades.

The most pressing problem faced by the publisher of a daily paper is fraudulent advertising. In this connection it may be said that one of the reasons why The New York Times has won favor with the highest class of advertisers is that it does exercise not only business but editorial supervision over the advertisements submitted to it.

Fraudulent advertising, from which the musical industries suffer greatly, is the bane of the reputable manufacturer and dealer. However, the newspaper which inserts not alone questionable, but fraudulent, advertising must in the end suffer in loss of prestige, while the newspaper which exercises strict censorship will, in the end, beget confidence on the part of the reader, and this will make the paper more valuable to the advertiser.

Militia Plan to be Put Up to Wilson.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 20.—When Gov. Wilson returns from his vacation trip to Bermuda, Adjutant General Wilbur F. Sadler will submit to him for approval the plan of acting Secretary of War Robert Shaw Oliver for the forming of the organized militia of the Nation into twelve tactical divisions. According to the scheme, the eighth division, with headquarters in Washington, would comprise the guardsmen of this State, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and West Virginia.

TAFT.

Is there among us one who would refuse
His meed of praise to William Howard Taft,
A man who so good-humoredly can lose
Despite the bitter cup which he has quaffed?

Although betrayed by one, his quondam friend,
Himself accused of robb'ry and deceit—
With dignity he strove until the end,
And still he smiles in face of his defeat.

Out of his mouth proceeds no bitter word,
Though now he views his party rent and torn;
From him are no recriminations heard,
And sland'rous charges are with patience borne.

He gave his country of his very best,
And time will show its value—never fear;
What if he now steps down at our behest?
His personality we all hold dear.

It is his views alone that we oppose;
The man himself we cannot but admire;
Beyond all praise the temper that he shows;
Lo, here is one can gracefully retire!

So not without regret we see him go,
Though still we think the change is for the best.
To him and Wilson both respect we show—
"Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest!"

HEADLESS CATS ALIVE.

Prof. Lee Tells Why "Spinal Animals" Are Created.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Kindly inform a reader what benefit to humanity results from keeping headless cats alive for even one hour. M. G. H.

New York, Nov. 15, 1912.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question of "M. G. H." is legitimate. It may seem strange to a layman that any good may result from an endeavor to keep alive the organs and tissues of a decapitated animal, yet such an experiment has been a fruitful one for the advance of physiological knowledge.

It is but one instance of a common method of physiological experimentation, the method of analysis. The body of one of the higher animals is so complex an organism, so intricate a machine, that in studying it effectively it has been found necessary to devise means of taking it to pieces and observing the mechanism of its component parts—just as one learning the working of a watch must remove its wheels and its springs and study their individual actions.

It is now possible to isolate more or less completely from the rest of the body any one of such organs as the heart, the lung, the kidney, the liver, the stomach, and the intestine, and maintain them alive and in a state of activity, even though all the rest of the body but the single organ under observation may have died. This is done by surgical methods under anaesthetics, and without pain to the animal. This analytic method has yielded enormous additions to our knowledge of both the normal and the diseased body, and promises to continue to yield equally great if not greater knowledge.

Also in studying the way in which the nervous system acts the analytic method has justified itself. Individual nerves, together with the organs with which they are connected, can be isolated and the control exerted by the nerves over the organs can be demonstrated. When we come to study the central nervous system, consisting of the brain and the spinal cord, we find an inconceivably complex situation, for, besides the fact of the great intrinsic intricacy of both brain and spinal cord and their relation to the bodily organs, the brain exerts in many respects a control over the activities of the cord. Therefore, it simplifies the study of many of the problems of the action of the cord itself and its relation to the bodily organs if the brain can be removed.

This is done most readily, and wholly without pain, by careful decapitation. By such a procedure the animal becomes a "spinal animal," a simplified organism without consciousness, but capable of giving us valuable knowledge of vital mechanisms. A headless cat is a spinal animal. By the study of spinal animals we have obtained much of our knowledge of the laws of reflex actions, those actions of our muscles and other organs which constitute by far the majority of our activities.

Largely by the same method also we have learned what parts of the spinal cord constitute the central stations for the control of many of our activities, and what are the routes within the cord along which are sent upward and downward and from side to side the multifarious nervous impulses that enter into our daily lives. It is largely by this method that Prof. Sherrington of Liverpool, one of England's foremost physiologists, even though hampered constantly by England's needless and unwise laws against animal experimentation, has made most valuable contributions to our knowledge of the action of nervous mechanisms. This knowledge, however, is by no means complete, and requires a continued application of the same method of investigation.

Perhaps "M. G. H." may think that it still remains to be proved that advance in physiological knowledge is of benefit to humanity. Here, then, arises the abstract question: How nearly immediate to man must knowledge be in order to be of benefit to him? Perhaps only the gods can answer, but the man of science likes to believe that human beings can draw no line at which knowledge ceases to be beneficial.

When the Italian physician, Galvani, was trying to find out why frogs' legs twitch, who could have foretold that his experiments would become, as they did, the incentive to the whole modern development of the uses of electricity, with all that they mean to mankind? When the English country clergyman, Stephen Hales, was sufficiently curious to attempt to measure the pressure exerted by the blood in the arteries of the horse, who would have dreamed that a valuable method for the diagnosis of disease, one that is now employed daily at the bedside, would have been the outcome of his work? When the English surgeon, John Hunter, tied the external carotid artery of a stag in Richmond Park, in order to learn the effect of the procedure upon the half-grown horns, who could have predicted that the strange experiment would have led him to the treatment of aneurism in human beings by the simple ligature?

The study of the reflex actions of a portion of the isolated spinal cord in an animal led Goltz to a knowledge of the nervous mechanism of childbirth, which every physician must understand who is competent to care for a woman in pregnancy. In locating tumors within the spinal cord, so that the surgeon can proceed to remove them, one of the most important classes of symptoms to be employed is the reflex actions that are still possible to the diseased body. A careful study of the reflex actions of spinal animals has made the accurate location of such tumors possible.

It was only about twelve years ago that the first spinal tumor was successfully taken out, and already surgeons have succeeded in locating and removing more than three hundred of them. A well-known neurologist of New York has grouped tumors, injuries, paralysis, meningitis, and myelitis as the diseases of the spinal cord in the elucidation of which animal experimentation has either helped or is likely to help. In this work for mankind the spinal animal has already performed and will still perform an honorable part.

But perhaps "M. G. H." wonders why an animal so far removed from man as is the cat should be selected for this kind of experimentation. Similar experiments are performed on other species, such as the monkey, the dog, and the rabbit. None of all these is so far removed from man, either structurally or functionally, as to render the experimental results that are obtained from the lower animal valueless in leading us to a conception of what occurs in the higher one.

That is the habitual way of animal experimentation. Whenever an opportunity offers, whether through accident or disease, by which the experimental results may be legitimately tested on the human being, our conception of human vital processes becomes by so much the more exact and mankind becomes the gainer. Obviously, such opportunities are not very common, and animal experimentation remains, and must ever remain, the one great avenue of progress. It is fortunate that in our country, as the high aims and methods and achievements of animal experimentation become better known, there is no reason to believe that this avenue will ever be seriously obstructed.

ANTIS NOT TO OPPOSE MOVE FOR SUFFRAGE

May Even Support Demand for Constitutional Amendment, So as to Defeat It Later.

EXPECT REAL TEST IN 1915

Question May Then Be Ready for a Referendum Vote and They Hope to Encompass Its Defeat.

The anti-suffragists of New York State wish to meet the question of "Votes for Women" on its merits in 1915 and are announcing that they will not take action in the coming legislative session to oppose the passage of a woman suffrage Constitutional amendment.

This position of the women who do not wish political responsibilities was shown at the Democratic and Republican State Conventions, where the women, finding that neither of the two parties would commit themselves to anything more definite, joined with the suffragists in asking for planks to submit the question to the people.

Yesterday the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage sent out a statement defining its position. This was signed by the President, Mrs. W. A. Putnam; by Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, Chairman of the Executive Committee, First Vice President of the State and President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage; by Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, Chairman of the Legislative Committee, and by the members of the Executive Committee.

"For the past two years," the officers of the State Association say, "the Executive Committee of this association has seriously considered the question of not merely withdrawing its opposition to such an amendment, but of advocating its passage, but for various reasons it has not seemed advisable to adopt such a policy until the present time. Such action, however, was foreshadowed this Autumn, when representatives of the association who spoke before the Committee on Resolutions at both the Republican and Democratic Conventions not only acquiesced in the woman suffrage planks in the two platforms, but were partially responsible for the wording of one of them.

"The Democratic plank, which presumably the Democrats in power will uphold, does not commit the party in favor of woman suffrage, but merely says: 'We declare in favor of submitting to the voters of the State as soon as possible the woman suffrage Constitutional amendment.'

"If such an amendment passes both houses of the Legislature at this session, it cannot be passed a second time until the new Legislature meets in 1915, and if it should again pass that Legislature it would be presented to the voters to be voted upon in the Autumn of 1915. If the voters of Ohio and Wisconsin defeated a woman suffrage amendment to their Constitutions by over 90,000 majority in each State in the radical year of 1912, there is no question but the voters of New York will defeat such a measure by a still larger majority in 1915."

The members of the Executive Committee signing the statement are Mrs. George Douglas Miller, Mrs. George Phillips, Mrs. Nelson H. Henry, Mrs. Francis M. Scott, Mrs. William Forse Scott, Mrs. Everett P. Wheeler, Mrs. Henry A. Stimson, Mrs. Otto Kiliani, Mrs. Fritz Achelis, Mrs. Francis S. Bangs, Mrs. John A. Church, Mrs. Barclay Hazard, Miss Eleanor G. Hewitt, Mrs. Charlton T. Lewis, Mrs. M. E. Loomis, and Mrs. Robert McVickar.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Enthusiastic in the belief that their cause will triumph, and that the privilege of the ballot will be granted to women throughout the United States within the next few years, hundreds of delegates from all parts of the country arrived here to-day to participate in the forty-fourth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which will open its sessions to-morrow.

DOUGLAS SLOANE MARRIES.

Weds Miss Sybil E. Sanderson in All Angels' Church—The Attendants.

The wedding of Miss Sybil E. Sanderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward N. Sanderson of 131 Riverside Drive, to Douglas Sloane, son of the late Douglas Sloane of this city, was celebrated at 8 o'clock last evening at All Angels' Church, West End Avenue and Eighty-first Street, the Rev. Dr. S. Delancey Townsend, rector of the church, officiating.

The bride wore a gown of cream-colored charmeuse, draped with point applique, and a court train, which fell from the shoulders. Gertrude Hoffmann, fleet of foot and lithe of limb, with her transformations from Aubrey Beardsley poster effects, deep-shadowed, Carmen-lipped, and auburn-hued, to a sunlit figure, flesh tinted and flaunting a mass of golden hair—the same Gertrude Hoffmann whose voice takes on the syrupy sweetness of an earlier Ethel Barrymore, then breaks into the queer squeakings of an Eddie Foy. And yet a Gertrude Hoffmann somewhat suppressed as to time and place in a show which is sort of sublimated vaudeville. A Gertrude Hoffmann who is the vibrant, living thing in a Dance Dracula, quite as unintelligible as are most of these modern efforts with which the stage is filled.

Of course, there is a male partner to figure in the groupings, to be wildly pursued, to enjoy a brief hour of triumph, and then sink dying with a knife thrust in his breast. And, presently, a more pleasing dance, with a series of liquid waltz tunes, carefully selected, and nymphs and fauns tripping it merrily in a lovely sylvan glade.

Miss Hoffmann, being the titular deity of the printing, must of necessity command the first attention, but the new entertainment at he Winer Garden—though its name is never clear as one studies it in presence of the happenings on the stage—contains others to win the favor of the public.

Maurice, for instance, having achieved an amazing popularity with the late supper crowd last Winter, returns now to a more general public, and is welcomed like a conquering hero. And Maurice does justify enthusiasm. He danced three times last night, each number inspiring a genuine encore, which, by the way, is a thing rarer than rubies at these Broadway premiers. And he has in Florence Walton a partner worthy of his talents, who, besides adding an element of beauty to the combination, can foot it as lightly and as graciously as the best.

Then, too, Tempest, having withdrawn to other places, the radiant Sunshine, with not a cloud to mar, singing in childish treble, but with the smile and manner to disarm a hostile music lover, and some dancing as neat in its way as is Maurice's.

Miss Louise Dresser is not fortunate in the selection of her one song, but her golden radiance sheds light in the dark places of a book which is best when it is freely transposed material from the burlesque wheel, and is otherwise of a sort to make the judicious grieve, assuming that such are part and parcel of the audience that attends these shows. For the others less particular there is something doing every minute in this glittering, gyrating entertainment, with its "chicken" song and pretty "chicks" by way of decoration, its all-tenor chorus, the only one of its kind ever in captivity, its whirling cyclists, and its more than array of female beauty.

Then, by way of an added attraction, there is Bordoni, now allowed to sing in English rapidly acquired, to coquette her way through a number with the broken-dialect comedian, and to reveal a radiant beauty, somewhat lessened by a wig of brown taking the place of her own rich ebon locks.

Of the comedians in the show—there are several, alleged and otherwise—Sam Mann, recruited from the vaudevilles, is by far the best, and though his specialty is familiar it merits a kindly word on account of its natural restraint and easy humor.

The others, individually, do not count for much, and neither their efforts nor the material provides occasion for rejoicing.

"Broadway to Paris" is, on the whole, just about the sort of show that a lot of people will enjoy, and as such it promises to fill out its allotted time profitably at the Winter Garden.

WEDS AND GOES SWIMMING.

Miss Clare Mersch, Bride of W. J. Bricker, Outwits Her Friends.

Miss Clare Mersch of Los Angeles, Cal., was married yesterday morning in the Town Hall at Stamford, Conn., to William J. Bricker, a livestock contractor of Los Angeles, and in the afternoon she went swimming in Long Island Sound at Roton Point.

Miss Mersch is 27 years old. It was a girlish ambition of hers to be married in "The Little Church Around the Corner." Accordingly, when it came time for her wedding she came East to visit her sister, Miss Mary Mersch, who lives at 324 West Forty-fifth Street. Mr. Bricker arrived three days ago, and plans were made for the fulfillment of Miss Mersch's ambition.

But fate and friends interfered. The friends found out when the couple were to be married and planned to be present. But Miss Mersch didn't want them, so, packing up a few necessities and a bathing suit, she took her prospective husband to Stamford. Even the fact that her friends wanted to be present wouldn't draw them there, and Miss Mersch and Mr. Bricker had the quiet wedding they had planned.

Mr. and Mrs. Bricker will live in Los Angeles after a three weeks' trip through Canada.

YOU'VE MET HER AT SHOWS

Now Her Wardrobe Is to be Limited by a Simple Device That Will Bring Joy to Shopkeepers.

The woman who has fallen into the habit of having an elaborate evening gown sent home from a big store and of wearing it to some function only to return it the next day with the explanation that it had not been worn and that her husband did not care for it will have to mend her ways.

This method of obtaining a wardrobe is one of the simplest known to the world of shops, and the number of women using it has been far larger than the store proprietors contemplate with comfort, for it means a fortune in outright loss every season. They know that not a few of their most steady customers swindle them gracefully and unblushingly every other time they come into the store.

That is why the department store world is greeting with much interest the appearance upon the market of a new device, warranted by its backers to reduce perceptibly the amount of lying done by well dressed women in Manhattan in a given year. This boon is a "security ticket." This ticket is to be fastened on to every garment taken home by the customer who has the privilege of returning the purchase if not entirely satisfactory.

It is to be fastened conspicuously on the sleeve or gown where it can be seen all the way across the theatre and would never, never escape the attention of that cat in the next box. It is to blazon forth the fact that the gown was purchased on approval only, just as plainly as though it were lettered in large type:

"OBTAINED FROM SO-AND-SO AND NOT PAID FOR."

It is to be so fastened that it cannot possibly be removed without being mutilated. If milady wears the gown or hat, she wears the tag, or gives herself away. The people at the store will have "the goods on her." To be exact, they will be able to show that she has had the goods on her.

Of course, the store folk do not need any such device to prove it to them. They know. They know by a sixth sense when a gown has been worn, and all milady's little fibs do not fool them. If they say nothing, and patiently accept the returned garment to be sold again, either reduced in price or restored to its original freshness at considerable expense, it is simply because they have to maintain an unruffled courtesy, a something akin to chivalry, with their erring customers. It is part of the business, part of the game. The customer is always right, always truthful; the store is always wrong, always apologetic.

This diplomatic acceptance of this particular form of swindle has cost the stores a lot of money, and that is why they are interested in the new device. But not they alone will find it welcome if it is as successful as its backers promise. That great army of women who would wear sackcloth before they would stoop to such methods will feel a genuine comfort in the convenience of having things sent home on approval. Many women have hesitated to accept this convenience lest they be open to the suspicion of playing the little game themselves. With the new device installed, they can return for cash refund or credit anything that is not exactly what they want without the slightest embarrassment.

Perhaps a modification of the ticket will be found useful for attachment to other things than garments. The fraudulently returned article is the experience of almost every department in a big store. Often a store has had to grin and bear it when something was brought back damaged that the women had never even bought there.

There is an authenticated story of one woman who won a thermos bottle as a bridge prize, broke it, and then returned it to the store where it was originally purchased and there insisted without a flicker of an eyelash that she had bought it and that it had been broken in delivery. They knew better, but what could they do? Finally they compromised on a credit exchange and she sailed off with a scarf or something of that order. Later she returned the scarf for cash. In all probability she discharged her maid that afternoon for fibbing and that Sunday deposited a little of the money—a very little—in the collection taken up for the conversion of a small, obscure tribe in the interior of Madagascar.

Add Your Profits
To Your Principal

By a judicious purchase of good dividend-paying stocks, this important feature to investors can be accomplished with reasonable certainty—for example:

A certain well-known investment trunk line stock can now be purchased at slightly over par (100), and if held until conditions in this country have returned to normal prosperity, judged by its previous records, will have increased in price 50%. A sale of the same will then have increased your principal 50%. Invest the increase and wait for another opportunity. They are constantly occurring.

Our Letter This Week Is On Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul

Each week we issue a weekly letter dealing with one particular stock, which after careful study we believe a good investment, yielding a good return and also one which should increase in value. This will be sent on request. Remember, we are brokers for the small as well as the large investor. We make a specialty of executing small lots of stock, either to be bought outright, on margin, or on our monthly payment plan.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

London Offers Gold to New York —Plans Laid for New Financing.

A slight advance in sterling exchange led to the abandonment yesterday of at least one arrangement for an importation of gold from London to New York, but with rates hovering close to the gold import level there is still a chance that part of Monday's new gold supply will find its way to this market. The belief that gold had actually been engaged was a factor in bringing about the upturn in the afternoon, which carried demand sterling ten points above Tuesday's close. Some gold available in the London open market yesterday was offered to bankers here on terms which would have permitted its importation if interest on the transaction were counted at 4 per cent. With money at 6 per cent. a further decline of some twenty points would have been necessary to have tempted the taking of the gold on the terms at which it was to be had in London.

The position in which the exchange market finds itself is due to the reassertion of factors whose influence upon the international exchanges was temporarily suspended owing to the recent heavy sales of American securities by Europe. Considerable latitude must be allowed in estimates of the extent of that movement and of the subsequent repurchases by Europe, but recent developments in the exchange market indicate pretty clearly that the whole episode has not left us with any burdensome commitments to the European money markets. Figures which are accepted in banking circles as roughly outlining our recent experience in respect to the selling and buying of our stocks by Europe places the total sales during the market unsettlement, due to the Balkan crisis, at 750,000 shares, of which about 250,000 shares were actually shipped to this side, and 500,000 shares left abroad. Of the latter at least one-half is believed to have been repurchased by England and the Continent. Against the balance sales of securities have been effected by our bankers to a sufficient extent to reduce materially the unliquidated balance of Europe's sales of American stocks. The City of New York has during the last fortnight sold about $2,000,000 of revenue warrants in London, and other transactions with similar influence upon the exchange position have been put through. How decided the movement in our favor has been apart from these operations in securities was again brought into relief yesterday by the monthly statement of the country's foreign commerce for October. New high records were made both in imports and exports, with the latter increasing even more largely than the imports. We had thus a credit trade balance for the month largely in excess of the amount reported in October a year ago. The prosperity of our foreign trade offers itself as the fundamental explanation of the favorable position we are again occupying in the international exchanges within a month of the termination of a foreign selling movement, during the course of which we were called upon to repurchase from Europe some $75,000,000 of our securities.

Much interest attached to another development of the day closely bearing on the fortunes of the money market. A number of corporations are laying plans to provide themselves with funds, largely for refunding purposes, and formal announcement of one such item of financing an issue of $40,000,000 one-year 5 per cent. notes by the New Haven was made yesterday. Between now and the close of the first quarter of the new year a number of short-term securities issues will fall due, and, if the New Haven's flotation may be accepted as a barometer, will be replaced by new short-term obligations. Much, however, will depend in this connection upon the receptiveness of the investment market toward long-term bond issues. For the time being money is in somewhat scant supply. Herein doubtless lies one of the major explanations of the quietness of the stock market. There were some broad price changes yesterday, but the list as a whole showed only a very small movement. Such as it was it was downward.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 5¼@6 per cent., with the last loan at 5¼ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 5¾ per cent.

Time money rates were 6 per cent. for sixty days, 5¾@6 per cent. for ninety days, and 5½@5¾ per cent. for four months and 5¼@5¾ per cent. for five and six months.

New York Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $322,972,162; balances, $16,081,693; Sub-Treasury credit balance, $778,504.

The local banks have lost $1,623,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 4⅞@4 15-16 per cent. for short bills and 4 13-16@4⅞ for three months' bills; Paris, 3¾ per cent., and Berlin 5½ per cent. Money was 3¼@3½ per cent. in London and 4½ per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 23½ centimes, and the Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 50¼ pfennigs.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

William Skinner, Vice President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, has been elected a trustee of the American Surety Company.

The syndicate formed to take over the New York Central's holdings of Mohawk Valley Company stock, it was reported yesterday, would include H. E. Andrews, Harrison Williams, and a number of their associates. Mr. Williams's office refused to discuss his reported part in the transactions.

Edward E. Moberly has been elected a director of the Fidelity Trust Company.

The reorganization committee of the United States Motor Company, which has selected Walter E. Flanders as President of the reorganized company, announced yesterday that William F. Maguire would be made Vice President and W. M. Anthony, Comptroller.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Averages Decline Slowly.

In the first three days of the current week the average price of 50 railroad and industrial stocks declined .29. On two days the decline amounted to .10, and on one day to .09. Such a quiet and orderly retreat is seldom seen among the quotations.

Frisco Issues Lower.

The unfavorable showing made by the recently published annual report of the St. Louis & San Francisco is being reflected by the behavior of the company's securities. In yesterday's session all three classes of stock made new low records, the common selling down to 19, the first preferred to 60⅝, and the second preferred to 29½.

A Late Listing.

After the close of the Exchange yesterday the ticker announced the listing of Mexican Petroleum preferred. While not of great importance, the announcement created mild surprise, inasmuch as yesterday was not the Governing Committee's regular meeting day. California Petroleum was listed after the close of the Exchange on Friday, and the spirited fluctuation in the issue in the following day's trading aroused some unfavorable comment on the part of those who had not been able to get the usual listing sheet before the stock was put upon the board.

Good Business on B. & O.

The engineers may be going to get another advance in pay; the tariff may be revised at the cost of prosperity; all sorts of direful things may happen, but the officials of the Baltimore & Ohio had a day of happiness yesterday when the figures of October's earnings were made up. Gross earnings for the month were $9,408,000, an increase of $1,148,000 over the corresponding month of last year, and the largest ever reported by the system. Net earnings were $3,086,000, an increase of $414,000. For the first four months of the fiscal year 1912-13 gross revenues have totaled $35,105,000, an increase of $2,955,000 over the first third of last year. Net earnings in the four months were $10,978,000, an increase of $426,000. In this period $4,981,000 was expended for maintenance of way and $6,121,000 for maintenance of equipment, an increase of $765,000 and $508,000 respectively. Of the total revenues, 31 1-3 per cent. went for maintenance.

Directors' Responsibility.

Having determined to call every one who might be able to throw light on any agreement made between the Grand Trunk and New Haven, the Federal Grand Jury had no choice, probably, but to summon all of the New Haven Directors. From what could be learned yesterday, the inquiry will not profit to any great extent by the presence of the New York members of the board. An associate of Mr. Morgan said that Mr. Mellen was intrusted with authority to make traffic arrangements and to handle other matters of which the Directors had no special knowledge, and that they only learned of these things when they came up for approval by the board.

"HR," Not "HV."

The last transaction recorded on the Stock Exchange ticker yesterday afternoon was a sale of Hocking Valley at 120. This sale was reported by the evening editions as representing a drop of 28¼ points from the previous transaction, made on Aug. 14. A few moments later, among the closing quotations, attention was called to a correction, making the last transaction a sale of International Harvester, but the correction was too late for most of the evening papers. The tape abbreviation of Hocking Valley is HV, and of Harvester, HR.

New Haven Heavy.

New York, New Haven & Hartford stock sold down another point, to 133 yesterday, making a new low price for the current year. The issue has been inclined to heaviness lately, and the announcement of more short-term financing served to depress it still further. At the present price, New Haven returns almost exactly 6 per cent. on an investment. A year ago there was considerable speculation over the New Haven's ability to maintain its 8 per cent. dividend, during which the price fell to 126⅞. Mr. Mellen announced at the annual meeting that, looking ahead as far as he could, he was unable to discern any prospect of a reduction, and the timid stockholders took heart again.

Life Insurance Heads Coming On.

The officers of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, in announcing yesterday the plans for the sixth annual convention of the association to be held at the Hotel Astor on Dec. 5 and 6, said that it was expected that nearly every State would be represented. George I. Cochran of Los Angeles will preside at the convention.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Prices Recede After Some Improvement—Moderate Volume of Business Done.

Price movements in the Curb market were narrow, but a fair amount of activity was shown. There was some improvement on quotations, which, however, did not hold well, and in a majority of issues the close was nearer to the low than to the high prices of the session. United Cigar Stores lost half a point, Tobacco Products preferred ⅝, and Western Pacific 5s receded to 83⅝.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 21.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"The supply of money showed signs of being restricted yesterday, but quotations for day-to-day advances and short loans were not altered. Discount rates advanced, owing partly to the low level to which New York sterling exchange had fallen.

"The possibility that New York may after all take some gold from London is being once more considered seriously. Sovereigns to the amount of £250,000 were withdrawn from the Bank of England yesterday for export to Egypt.

"After a brief period of indecision the stock markets developed firmness, and in several directions business showed signs of expanding. The foreign political news was more favorable, so much so that the optimists of the house regarded an early settlement of the Balkan troubles as assured. Certainly the Paris Bourse bought its favorite securities with considerable confidence, making the foreign market firm and the South African department cheerful.

"Consols recovered their previous day's small fall. Buying of Argentine and other foreign railway stocks proceeded apace. Shipping securities showed strength.

"The only department which lagged behind was that for American securities, which reflected the dullness in Wall Street."

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Prices were firm on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 89 francs 90 centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—Atonement Day was observed here to-day, and there was no session of the Börse.

THOMPSON U. S. TREASURER.

Count of Funds, Near $1,500,000,000, to be Biggest in History.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Carmi Thompson was appointed Treasurer of the United States to-day by President Taft, to succeed Lee McClung, who resigned recently. Mr. Thompson will assume his new duties to-morrow. Charles D. Hilles, who was secretary to the President before the beginning of the last campaign, will return to that position.

Secretary MacVeagh to-night appointed the following committee to count the money and securities of the Treasury to verify the accounts of the retiring Treasurer: E. B. Daskam, Chief of the Public Moneys Division; A. T. Huntington, Chief of the Loans and Currency Division, and Leon Isaacson of Ironton, Ohio. Mr. Isaacson will represent the new Treasurer in the count, while the interests of Mr. McClung will be looked after by J. O. Manson of the Treasurer's office.

This will be the greatest count of money and securities in history. It is estimated that Mr. McClung's liabilities will be close to $1,500,000,000, for which amount Mr. Thompson must give a receipt. The count will require at least two months.

THE TREASURY STATEMENT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Treasury statement issued to-day gives receipts and expenditures for yesterday and for the elapsed periods of the month and of the fiscal year as follows:

	Nov. 19.	Month.	Fiscal Year.
Customs	$824,988	$15,572,576	$131,606,362
Int. revenue	1,158,729	17,653,588	122,169,706

Surplus	961,945	*930,276	*3,684,838

*Deficit.

These figures exclude Panama Canal and public debt transactions.

The condition of the United States Treasury at the beginning of business to-day was: Working balance, $90,158,581; in banks and Philippine Treasury, $31,938,436; total in general fund, $146,901,983.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While the market exhibited some softness in the earlier trading, a firmer tone developed later in the day. Specialty movements again attracted attention. There was a commission house demand in particular for the local tractions. There was a transaction in New York, Ontario & Western at 34⅞, the only sale of that stock reported in Wall Street during the day. On the 9:30 o'clock opening call fractional overnight gains were generally reflected by the leading stocks, but reactionary tendencies were soon manifested.

FOREIGN COMMERCE PASSES ALL RECORDS

Exports in October Never So Great as This Year, and Year's Business Beats All Others.

OCTOBER GAIN $44,000,000

For Ten Months of 1912 They Are $1,870,857,254, Against $1,665,886,850 in 1911.

The foreign commerce of the United States broke all records in October, and the great totals of the month, added to those that have gone before of this calendar year, make a ten months' aggregate that is also hundreds of millions above that of last year, which also broke all records.

Exports were announced yesterday from Washington at $254,696,985. This compares with $210,365,516 in October, 1911, the biggest previous October, and with $228,602,683 in December, 1910, which was the highest total ever recorded before in any month. December is always far and away the biggest month in all years for exports.

Imports were reported to aggregate $177,995,830, which compares with $132,605,751 in October, 1911, with $162,999,435 in March, 1910, the previous high-record month, and with $162,571,159 last April, which most closely approached the record. For the ten calendar months the exports have been $1,870,857,254, against last year's high tide of $1,665,866,850. The ten months' imports have been $1,511,129,557, against $1,265,522,936 in the same period last year.

The gain in exports has not, however, kept pace with the increase in imports which has come with the reawakening of prosperity in the country. Our trade balance for the month is $76,701,155, as against a balance of $77,859,765 in October, 1911.

Of our exports for the month $133,715,629 was in the form of agricultural products and $120,981,356 in other merchandise, principally manufactures. It was a big month, compared with recent years, for cotton and the grains. Wheat, corn and oats worth $25,910,428 were poured into ships' holds for export. In September $20,670,047 worth of grains were exported. In October we shipped away $88,689,663 worth of cotton. In September we exported $45,406,258 worth. For grains October was the biggest of all months since December, 1907, and probably the biggest October ever recorded, the largest grain exports being in December. The October of 1909 and 1910 saw exports of cotton larger in value, but smaller in number of bales.

SPEYER'S PLAN FOR LONDON.

No Securities Issued to Unite the Tractions with Underground.

Speyer & Co. explained yesterday that the plan to bring the Central London Railway, City & South London and Metropolitan Electric Tramways Company into the London Underground Electric Railway system would not require the issuance of any new securities by the Underground Company.

The taking over of the other lines is dependent upon the acceptance of an offer of an exchange of securities or of a guarantee of minimum dividends which would be made, with the approval of the Boards of Directors, to all the shareholders of the companies whose co-operation with the Underground Company is desired.

FRANCE REWARDS HEPBURN.

Appoints Him to Legion of Honor for What Chamber of Commerce Did.

The French Government has appointed A. Barton Hepburn, President of the Chamber of Commerce, an officer of the Legion of Honor as an appreciation of the part taken by the Chamber of Commerce in the reception of the French Champlain delegation which visited New York last May. The honor conferred upon him was announced to Mr. Hepburn in this letter from Ambassador Jusserand:

> Washington, 15th November, 1912.
> Mr. Alonzo B. Hepburn, 205 West Fifty-seventh Street, New York City.
>
> Dear Mr. Hepburn: I have been informed by my Government that the President of the Republic has appointed you an Officer of the Legion of Honor.
>
> In accordance with the instructions I have received, I have the honor of forwarding to you the insignia of the order. The diploma will follow in the near future.
> It affords me particular pleasure to fulfill such instructions, and to send you this token of the particular appreciation of my Government for your person and for all you did when the French delegation, headed by Mr. Hanotaux, visited the United States.
>
> Believe, me, dear Mr. Hepburn, very sincerely yours. JUSSERAND.

In his letter of acknowledgment Mr. Hepburn said:

> New York, Nov. 18, 1912.
> Hon. J. J. Jusserand,
> Ambassade de la Republique Francais aux Etats-Unis,
> Washington, D. C.
>
> My Dear Mr. Ambassador: I am agreeably surprised by your advice that the President of the Republic of France has appointed me an officer of the Legion of Honor.
>
> America and Americans can never do enough to requite their obligation to France, whose splendid services gave them their National existence, and whose friendly co-operation has sustained them in their world progress and world politics ever since.
> A visit from such distinguished gentlemen as the delegation headed by Mr. Hanotaux, was a very great honor, which as a Nation we highly appreciated; as President of the Chamber of Commerce, it was my privilege to participate in giving expression to such appreciation.
> I realize that the honor you do me is intended as a compliment to the great commercial body over which I presided, to the men militant, who support the commercial fabric of this great Nation.
>
> I receive the honor with great pleasure, and value it even more highly because of its representative character. Permit me to thank you personally for your kind words and very great courtesy; they lend a personal charm and give emphasis to the respect and affection with which I, in common with all other Americans, regard your good self.
>
> With appreciative thanks,
> Very sincerely yours,
> A. BARTON HEPBURN.

The reception accorded to the delegation which brought Rodin's bust to this country called forth much appreciation in France, where the press praised the friendly spirit displayed toward the French delegation.

PROFITS OF 179 PER CENT.

A Little Retail Problem for Tariff-Makers Shown in an Ad.

"President-elect Wilson and others who believe that the cost of living can be reduced by a downward revision of the tariff and a consequent diminution of the profits of the domestic manufacturer and wholesaler will do well to study out the bearing of some of the current retail prices on the problem," said a well-known local drygoods man yesterday. "This clipping, which was taken from an advertisement in a recent issue of one of the textile trade journals, may be a bit extreme, but it gives a fair idea of why a dollar doesn't mean as much as it used to:

> You increase your profits 21 to 127 per cent. on staple "Blank" numbers—and even more on novelties.
>
> On the best selling number of "Blank" 25-cent shields you can now make 179 per cent.
>
> The entire "Blank" line is included in this plan—and all shields we may make for you under your own brand.

"There is little question that tariff reduction will lower wholesale prices, but what assurance has the anti-protectionist that the retailers will be willing to reduce their prices in proportion?"

Changes in Cotton Grading.

The Revision Committee of the New York Cotton Exchange has increased the penalt yon strict low middling tinged from 80 to 85 points, and the penalty on low middling tinged from 190 to 200 points. No other changes in the differences between grades has been made by the committee. The differences as they now stand will remain in force until the next periodical meeting of the committee in February.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

The Daily Consular and Trade Report notes the following foreign trade opportunities. Further information regarding them may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of the Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of the item referred to:

9,921. OFFICE FURNITURE AND OTHER AGENCIES.—An American Consular officer in a Latin American country reports that a resident of his district desires to communicate with American exporting firms that are willing to grant agencies in that country. He especially wishes to be the representative of manufacturers of office furniture, both wood and steel. References are furnished, and it is stated that the firm has head offices in a European country, with branches in South America, Cuba, and British India. Correspondence may be in English.

9,922. ADDING AND COMPUTING MACHINES.—According to the report of an American Consul in Canada, adding and computing machines are not in use to any extent by firms in his district which have sufficient business to warrant their use. The Consul states that a number of banks and business houses could employ such machines profitably in their offices. He writes that the only way to introduce them is through a competent salesman and expert operator, who can demonstrate their use to the prospective purchasers.

9,923. PUMPING STATION.—The American Consulate at Valparaiso, Chile, reports that bids will be received in the office of the Inspeccion de Hidraulica, Santiago, Chile, until Jan. 2, 1913, for the installation of a pumping station for the waterworks system at Traiguen, a city of about 10,000 inhabitants in the south central portion of the country.

9,924. GRANITE FOR BUILDING PURPOSES AND MONUMENTS.—An American architect residing in a South American country has written an American Consular officer that there is a market in that country for American granites for building purposes and monuments, but it will be necessary to send a full assortment of samples of granite of various colors and treated in various manners of finish—rough, rubbed, polished, &c. The competition that must be met is (1) granite of the country, Tandil, &c., of red, bluish, and gray colors; (2) Scotch and Norwegian products. The writer states that he would be glad to receive a full assortment of samples and prices. He is at present using Deer Island granite for pedestals of monuments, but is in need of a red dark granite polished Quotations should be given, cost, insurance, and freight, city of destination.

9,925. PINE AND LARCH LUMBER.—One of the commercial agents of the Department of Commerce and Labor reports that two business firms in the United Kingdom desire quotations on Pacific Coast white pine, sugar pine, Oregon pine, and Montana larch. Samples of the larch will be appreciated by both firms.

9,926. PAPER TILES.—An American Consular officer in Germany reports that a resident of his district has expressed an interest in pressed paper tiles, diagonal, square, and octagonal in form. He inquires particularly for the name of the manufacturers of what are known as Mattawan tiles, which are said to be used for side walls and flooring.

9,927. MACHINES FOR GRINDING AND POLISHING LAUNDRY IRONS.—A report from an American Consular officer in a European country states that an emery and machine works in his district desires to be put into communication with American manufacturers of machines for grinding and polishing laundry irons, with the object of purchasing such machines from the United States. Correspondence may be in English.

9,928. PARTING AND FACING COMPOUNDS.—A business firm in Germany has informed an American Consular officer that it is interested in form powders, known as parting and facing compounds, and correspondence regarding these products is desired with American firms.

9,929. CORRUGATED FIBER CASES.—An American Consul reports that corrugated fiber cases are known to the trade of his district, and are used for packing small parcels, but not as a substitute for packing cases of any size. A sample forwarded by an American manufacturer was shown to eleven firms, eight of which expressed a desire for further particulars. There are reasons to believe that such cases could be put on that market profitably. Weight, strength, and price are the controlling factors, and on these would depend largely whether or not such cases would sell. Copy of the complete report, giving details as to the present wrapping packages used, prices at which, sold, and names of the eleven firms referred to will be sent to interested firms by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

9,930. PORT IMPROVEMENTS.—An American Consular officer in an Asiatic country has forwarded certain plans which have been submitted for the approval of the local authorities in the improvement of a port. This work will involve the construction of piers, wharves, breakwaters, grain elevators, refrigerating plant, warehouses, &c. The machinery and other equipment required will include dredges, hopper barges, tug boats, iron pontoons, traveling cranes, locomotives, cars, pile drivers, diving apparatus, temporary repair shops, electric light plants, &c. Copy of the complete report giving the estimated cost of the various undertakings and a blue print showing the location will be loaned to interested firms by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. As competition will be keen, American firms should give this matter their attention as soon as possible.

9,931. MOTOR BUSES.—A report from an American Consul states that at a meeting of a municipal council in his district the sum of $40,000 was voted for the purchase of six motor buses to be used for conveying passengers to and from some of the outlying districts of the city not now traversed by the municipal tramway system. Tenders for supplying these motor buses will be invited by the council as soon as the necessary specifications are prepared. In the meantime communications on the subject should be addressed to the Town Clerk.

9,932. SLAUGHTERHOUSE MACHINERY AND APPARATUS.—The supervising architect of a new municipal slaughterhouse in a European city has informed an American Consulate that he is willing to consider offers of slaughterhouse machinery and apparatus. He is also interested in learning the addresses of firms with experience in erecting high chimneys of re-enforced concrete suitable for use in connection with the plant. Correspondence should be addressed to the Consulate for transmission to the architect.

9,933. CONDENSED MILK AND BOOTS AND SHOES.—An American Consular officer reports that a Chinese firm in his district desires to be furnished the names of American manufacturers of condensed milk and of boots and shoes who are looking for agents to push the sale of their goods in certain foreign countries. Catalogues and correspondence should be sent in care of the Consular officer submitting the report.

9,934. COPPER SQUARES AND ALUMINIUM CIRCLES.—A report from an American Consular officer in the United Kingdom states that an inquiry has been received from a local firm for the names of American manufacturers of copper squares and alumnium circles, such materials being used largely in the manufacture of small utensils.

9,935. POWER TRANSMISSION EQUIPMENT.—A business man in England informs an American Consulate that he would like to become the local selling agent for any new device or appliance for a saving in power transmission, especially in textile manufacturing. Any device or appliance tested and established in use is not what he wants, but something new, seeking a market. He desires to act as selling agent only, to show, advertise, and explain, and take orders to be forwarded to the American exporter for filling. He can give bank references, and is already connected in a similar way with some American houses. He is said to be energetic and fully versed in ways and means of developing trade.

9,936. ELECTRICAL MACHINERY.—An American Consul has forwarded a copy of a letter received from a local firm concerning the securing of an agency for some American manufacturer of electrical machinery. The firm desires particularly to secure the agency for an American house which specializes in the construction of electrical machines, particularly transformers, generators, and motors. Copy of the complete report, giving a statement of existing conditions which must be met, terms upon which business will be done, and names of references will be sent to interested firms by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

TWO RAILROAD ISSUES.

$40,000,000 of New Haven Notes—$24,000,000 Central Trusts Coming.

Two important items of railroad financing were made known yesterday. The New York, New Haven & Hartford is putting out $40,000,000 of 5 per cent. one-year notes, and the New York Central lines have made provision for an issue later of $24,000,000 additional equipment trusts.

The New Haven during the last few years has done a large amount of financing by means of short-term notes, and the bulk of the proceeds of this new issue will be used to take up $30,000,000 short-term obligations which will fall due in January, and some maturing issues of subsidiary properties. Something less than $10,000,000 will be available for improvements. The notes are being placed through a banking group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co.

The notes are being offered to-day by J. P. Morgan & Co., the First National Bank, and the National City Bank at 99½ and interest. Payments on subscriptions to the notes will be accepted at any time from Dec. 2 to Dec. 16. The bankers will accept the 4 per cent. notes of the New Haven maturing Jan. 15 next at par and interest in payment of allotments of the new notes.

The New York Central has been buying a large amount of new equipment, much of it at the favorable prices which prevailed in the railroad equipment market, owing to the slackness of orders. Now the equipment companies are very active supplying the equipment which the railroads have ordered. The purchases which the New York Central proposes financing through this equipment trust issue will fill its requirements for 1913, and delivery of the equipment will be made mostly during the coming year. The lines concerned in this financing are the New York Central proper, the Michigan Central, the Lake Shore, the Big Four, the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, and the Toledo & Ohio Central. The Guaranty Trust Company will be the Trustee of this issue, as it is of the other New York Central equipment trusts.

50 WALL TO NEW OWNER.

Mechanics' and Metals Bank Acknowledges Purchase—To Occupy Site.

The purchase of 50 Wall Street, which changed hands several weeks ago, was formally acknowledged yesterday by the Mechanics' and Metals National Bank, which has bought the building for its own use. It will move from its present building at 33 Wall Street, which has been sold to J. P. Morgan & Co., about May 1. No extensive changes are to be made for the time being in the bank's new site at 50 Wall Street.

This property adjoins the Bank of New York and its acquisition by the Mechanics' and Metals Bank recently gave rise to surmises that the two banks would join in erecting a modern office building at the corner of Wall and William Streets, taking in 50 Wall Street. This was regarded as the more probable because of the knowledge that a merger of the Bank of New York, the Mechanics' and Metals National and the Fourth National was being considered. These plans are in abeyance if they have not been dropped.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat Still Falls—Cotton Wavers—Corn, Oats, and Pork Strong.

Wheat declined to new low levels on the lower cables and heavy movement, recovering on rumors of large export business. Corn was firm, with good buying, on the disappointing movement of new corn and the confident holding by the interior. Oats were firm on lighter receipts and the position of spot oats.

Provisions were strong and active on the reports of largely decreased supply of hogs in the country. Cottonseed oil was firm with crude. Cotton was irregular. Spot news again favored holders. The foreign market was weaker. Crop estimates still vary from slightly less than 14,000,000 bales to somewhat more than 14,250,000. Coffee was easier in absence of support.

WHEAT.

After making new low records, wheat recovered sharply in the afternoon, rallying ¾ to 1¼c, and closed at a small net gain. Shorts were good buyers in the last hour, on rumors of a million bushels of wheat for export at Winnipeg, and 400,000 bushels from Kansas City. Both Kansas City and Winnipeg, however, showed least recovery from the low point. Exporters state that some business has been done the past few days from the Gulf, but they were skeptical regarding the Winnipeg business. It was thought that the business was cost, insurance, and freight Buffalo, in a desire to get the grain down to Eastern lake ports before the close of navigation. The extreme difficulty of getting the grain moved to the seaboard would preclude any large business at present. Receipts were not quite so heavy, although still very materially larger than last year. Minneapolis advices were of moderate flour trade. The sales of flour the past week have been less than the output of the mills, and the desire to get flour from the mills has decreased materially. The output at the three Northwestern points for the week was 510,000 barrels against 502,000 the previous week and 356,000 last year. Foreign markets were irregular; the English markets were lower, while some of the Continental markets were higher. The Argentine crop news was favorable, and weather conditions were reported improved. Heavy offerings of Russian wheat in Liverpool were reported, and also better weather conditions in Australia. Cash wheat was nominal, with No. 2 red, 106½; No. 1 northern, 94¼; No. 2 hard winter, 95¾; No. 1 Manitoba, 95¼.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN was firm all day, closing at a net gain of ¼ to ½c, the principal gain being in the December. The offerings of corn from the country are still limited, and even premiums of two to three cents a bushel over December shipment do not seem to attract many acceptances. The disappointing movement of corn, considering the quality and the weather, has brought quite an improvement in tone and change of feeling regarding the situation. Some export business is reported in corn, but the total export interest is hampered by the traffic and freight conditions. Cash corn was steadier with the export grade quoted at 53¼c, free on board, and cost, insurance, and frieght corn 68½ down to 58c, nearby and forward shipment, as to grade.

OATS.—Prices showed an improvement, with the close at the best of the day. Buying was influenced by more moderate receipts, firmness in cash oats, and the good interior shipments. The offerings of oats from the country are reported to have fallen off considerably, on the decline in prices. Cash oats were steady, with standards quoted at 37c, No. 3 white 36¾c, No. 4 35½c, white clipped 37@39½c.

PROVISIONS.

The market was active and strong, closing at best prices, with a gain of about half a dollar a barrel in pork, and a gain of about ¼c per pound in ribs. The advance was on active buying by packers, helped by a report on the hog supply, claiming a total of only 30,900,000 hogs in nine large producing States, against 37,500,000 last year, a decrease of 6,600,000 hogs. Hog receipts the past few days, however, have been much larger than for a number of weeks.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The upward movement in cottonseed oil values was more pronounced during yesterday's session. Strength was based principally on the crude situation. Higher prices were paid at the South, yet the volume for sale was not depressing. There were more claims of a betterment in the consuming demand, but the reports were not without contradiction. It was evident, however, that inquiry for futures had expanded. Part of the absorption was credited to speculative shorts, while it was also asserted that the South was again bullish on the list, their theory being that not much crude oil will be obtained, excepting at an advanced level. Southeastern crude was quoted at $5 to $5.08, Valley at $5.08 to $5.14, and Texas $4.94 to $5.

COTTON.

Decidedly less resiliency was apparent during yesterday's session. Values for the most part of the day were close to the previous night's finals, generally ruling slightly below, although at the outset there was a brief display of strength. At that period the market ignored the weak Liverpool cables, with a continuation of firmness in the near deliveries. Seemingly, however, buyers were more readily supplied. Gossip circulated that important interests in the trade were attempting complete control of the Winter options, but there was no confidence in such intimations of congestion. Undoubtedly, if concentrated effort is made to advance quotations to unwarranted levels, offerings from the South will be attracted.

Most of the selling which occurred in the course of the day seemed to represent precaution. The gains of more than ½c per pound since the close of last week inspired considerable realizing for speculative account, with evening-up also noted in advance of to-day's ginning figures. Moreover, uncertainty as to the probable action of the Revision Committee in readjusting differences of spot cotton when delivered to the local market lessened the inclination to enter into new commitments. It developed after the close of the day that the changes perfected were unimportant. Sentiment, however, still favors the long side in most quarters mainly because of the preponderance of bullish information pertaining to the spot situation over the South.

The consensus of opinion is that the Census Bureau, in the report to be issued at 10 o'clock this morning, will disclose ginning to Nov. 14 of close to 10,300,000 bales. Of late the official ginning statistics have been somewhat under expectation, but the belief is that there has been great progress made during this last period because of the propitious weather conditions. A year ago there were 11,313,000 bales ginned as of Nov. 14, which meant 1,342,000 bales for the time intervening from the preceding report. If to-day's figures are about 10,300,000 bales, there will have been, approximately, 1,400,000 bales ginned to the period, and if the total to date represents 72.7 per cent. of the crop or the amount represented last season, an outturn of about 14,500,000 bales would be suggested.

Southern spot markets were officially reported unchanged to ⅛c advance yesterday. The Liverpool market showed spot sales of 8,000 bales, these being slightly larger than recently. New York spot was unchanged; middlings, 12.40c. Optimistic trade accounts concerning the domestic state of trade are still in evidence. Some ventured the assertion that the present volume of spinners' takings will not continue, and that exports will gradually fall under those of last season. This would only be natural, inasmuch as practically no one in the trade expects to see last year's total exports of 10,500,000 bales duplicated. To date the shipments aggregate 3,320,000, as against 3,415,000 a year ago.

COFFEE.

Coffee closed at a net decline of 6@10 points on sales of 41,250 bags, of which about 11,000 bags were switches from near to distant positions. Spot prices were shaded, and Rio 7, which was recently quoted at 14⅝c, it was said could be purchased at 14½c, while Santos 4s were at 16½@16¾c.

Havre came ½@¾f. lower; there was a holiday at Hamburg; Rio declined 75 reis and Santos was unchanged. Receipts at primary points were smaller, believed to be due to the strike of carmen.

ANSWERS TO BROKERS.

Life Companies Give Fire Risks to One as Business Precaution.

A statement was issued yesterday by the Equitable Life Assurance Society and the Metropolitan Life in reply to criticism by fire insurance brokers of its practice in placing through one broker all fire insurance on properties on which it holds mortgages. At a meeting of brokers on Tuesday a committee was appointed to contest this practice.

In the society's statement it was said that the rule was adopted twelve years ago as the result of experience. The matter was considered in all its bearings when the new administration took charge, and the rule was confirmed. When the mortgagor was allowed to effect the insurance renewals were often neglected, and much of the insurance was improperly written. It was pointed out that the mortgage usually amounted to about two-thirds of the value of the property.

"The right of control," said the statement, "is justly conceded to the most interested party in transactions of importance, and there is no sound reason for its denial with respect to mortgage fire insurance. Our broker is charged with protecting the interests of the mortgagor and serves him in matters of rate reductions and losses."

Among the advantages of dealing with one broker were cited the distribution of risks in any locality among a number of companies, and reinsurance, when necessary, without the delay incident to consulting many brokers. The risks are distributed among 200 companies.

Mortgagors, it was said, knew of the rule before they became borrowers, and if not satisfied with it could borrow elsewhere.

"In view of the heavy obligations resting on life insurance companies," the statement concluded, "to safeguard the interests of their policy holders, we think the rule is well justified."

F. H. Ecker, Treasurer of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, said:

"We have read the statement made by the Equitable concerning the methods of placing fire insurance on buildings on which loans are made by the company. It fairly states the position of the Metropolitan on the main points. We believe that our system is an advantage to the borrower and that our interests as mortgagees are better protected."

INSURANCE LAW VOID AS TO SECTION 142

Court of Appeals Finds Legislature Imposed Purely Arbitrary License Restrictions.

DECISION IN BROKER'S SUIT

Payment of Commissions Had Been Refused Under the Law Because He Had No State License.

According to an opinion handed down yesterday by the Court of Appeals at Albany, Section 142 of the insurance law has been declared unconstitutional. The section in question provides that > no person, partnership, association or corporation shall act as broker in the solicitation or procurement of applications for insurance, or receive for services in obtaining or placing such insurance, any commission or other compensation from any underwriter authorized or permitted to do an insurance business in this State, or agent thereof, without first procuring a certificate of authority so to act from the Superintendent of Insurance which must be renewed annually on the first day of January, or within six months thereafter.

The section further provides that > before any broker's certificate of authority shall be issued by the Superintendent of Insurance, there must be filed in his office a written application which must set forth that the applicant is engaged or intends to engage in good faith principally in the insurance business, or that he conducts or intends to conduct such business connection with a real estate agency or real estate brokerage business.

The opinion handed down yesterday was in the case of William Hauser, a lawyer, against the North British and Mercantile Insurance Company. Upon the application of the plaintiff the defendant issued, in the months of February and March, 1912, two policies of fire insurance and delivered them to him for the owners of the property insured. The premiums were duly paid and Hauser demanded the usual broker's commissions, which were refused, on the ground that Hauser had not obtained a broker's certificate of authority from the Superintendent of Insurance.

Hauser brought suit against the company for the amount of the commissions due him, and was awarded a verdict in the lower courts. This verdict was affirmed yesterday by the decision of the Court of Appeals.

Justice Gray, who wrote the opinion of the court, declared in his decision that the section of the insurance law in question was clearly unconstitutional inasmuch as the Legislature had overstepped the limits within which it may regulate and restrict the business of a citizen.

"We may readily concede," continued Justice Gray, "that as a measure regulative of a business pursuit, which, from the extent to which it is carried on, is presumably affected with a public interest, the requirement by the Legislature of a license would not be an unreasonable exercise of power. That would afford an opportunity for inquiry into antecedents and fitness of character, and be a reasonable enough precaution in the public interest. But the Legislature has prescribed in this statute a condition for the issuance of the license, which is a purely arbitrary restriction. There is no good reason and no public interest can conceivably be subserved in prohibiting persons from conducting the business of an insurance agent or broker in connection with any other lawful business or occupation in which they may be engaged."

Justice Gray concludes by finding that Hauser is entitled to his commission and directs that the judgment of the lower court be affirmed with the stipulation that no costs shall be entered for either party as against the other.

John J. Hoey, Deputy Superintendent of Insurance for New York City, explained last night that on Jan. 1, 1913, a new brokerage law would take effect, but inasmuch as it contained a similar section to that which the Court of Appeals has declared unconstitutional, the department will seek to have this section stricken from the law, leaving "trustworthiness and competency" necessary qualifications in order to get a certificate from the State Insurance Department. In the meantime, under the opinion of Justice Gray, such certificates are not needed, inasmuch as the entire section providing for them has been declared invalid.

Waldo Drops His Herald Libel Suit.

Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo has dropped his $250,000 libel suit against The New York Herald. The suit was based on a publication in The Herald of what purported to be an account of the testimony of Lieut. Daniel Costigan before the Grand Jury in the Rosenthal case. Costigan later issued a denial in affidavit form. The discontinuance of the suit was consented to by George Gordon Battle, attorney for Mr. Waldo, and Jay & Chandler, attorneys for The Herald.

TO BUILD CUBAN RAILWAY.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, Del., Nov. 20.—A certificate was filed here to-day for the incorporation of the National Railway Company of Cuba, with a capital stock of $20,000,000.

The company has been formed to acquire the concession granted by the Government of Cuba, by a decree of Oct. 5 last, to construct a railroad uniting the ports of Caribarien and Neuvitas, through Camaguey and Santa Cara. The total length of the line is to be 400 kilometers.

The incorporators are Stanley L. Conklin, Roland R. Conklin, Huntington, L. I.; J. M. Tarafa, Havana; Hay Drock, H. Miller, Howard K. Wood, H. O. Coughlan, Joseph F. Curtin, A. J. Besizzi, and Cecil A. Clarke, New York City, and Lionel Emdin, Deal, N. J.

CRITICISES COTTON MAKERS.

Shouldn't Speculate, Exchange Man Says—Business Outlook Bright.

Arthur R. Marsh, ex-President of the Cotton Exchange, addressing the Finance Forum of the West Side Y. M. C. A. last night, declared that American cotton manufacturers should confine themselves to that business and not speculate in the price of cotton, which, in effect, most of them did.

"The English manufacturers and most of the German and French manufacturers," he said, "have learned that their profits are sure if they rely solely on manufacturing. This they do by the process of hedging. An English spinner never contracts to sell goods without buying a hedge, and never buys cotton without selling a hedge. In this way he is protected against fluctuations in the price of cotton. I know a spinner in Lancaster whose profits last year were 96 per cent., whereas the average in Fall River is less than 6 per cent.

"We hear much talk about the necessity of people in the business getting together and fixing prices to save them from bankruptcy. In the cotton market there is no fixing of prices, but by means of these hedges for future delivery merchants have found out how to do business on a margin of three-fourths of 1 per cent. When American manufacturers learn the advantages of this operation, instead of trying to make a second profit out of fluctuations in the price of cotton, they will be much better off, and there will be much less running to Washington."

James H. Brookmire explained his system of charts as an index to business conditions. He said it was easy to foretell a period of business liquidation, as it was always preceded by from three to six months by liquidation in the stock market. He said business expanded until the banks were unable to furnish additional funds and maintain their legal reserves without selling their securities. The next step was to call loans, which came when business was most expanded, and liquidation necessarily followed.

In the immediate outlook, he said, there were three factors to consider—money conditions, mercantile conditions, and politics. The banking situation was satisfactory, and mercantile conditions were unusually favorable, surplus stocks having been disposed of. Bumper crops insured good business until the middle of 1913, after which it would depend on politics and the prospects for next year's crops.

"The possibility of overexpansion," he concluded, "with tariff, trust and currency legislation is the only obstacle to a long period of prosperity."

SAYS CODE WASN'T MORSE'S.

Prof. Money Traces Telegraphic Symbols to Gaelic Alphabet.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Morse code, by which messages are flashed over telegraph wires throughout the world, was not the invention of Samuel F. B. Morse, but was of Irish origin, being the old Gaelic dot and dash alphabet in use as early as 1150, was a statement made to-day by Prof. James Money before the Archaeological Society of Washington at its meeting in the National Museum.

The declaration stirred up a heated controversy. Prof. Money said the Gaelic alphabet, or the Ogem system, as it was known, was actually the basis of the so-called Morse code. He insisted that his contention was fully borne out by the records of the ancient Irish people as found in stone and wooden carvings.

"There were seventeen letters in the Gaelic alphabet," he declared, "and they began with one dash, went up to five dashes, then from five dashes down to one dash, and then began the dots, very much the same as the Morse alphabet used in telegraphy."

LONGER HOURS AT LIBRARY.

Special Rooms to be Open to Public Until 10 P. M.

In order to accommodate readers and students who find it necessary to use the Public Library in the evening a revised schedule of opening has gone into effect, under which certain rooms heretofore closed after 6 o'clock are open until 10 P. M.

Besides the main reading room and the public catalogue room the following special rooms are to be open on week days from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. and from 1 P. M. to 10 P. M. on Sundays: American History, Art and Archaeology, Genealogy, Jewish, Slavonic, Science, Economics and Sociology, Public Documents, Current Periodicals, Newspapers and Technology. The Print Room is open from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. on week days and from 1 P. M. to 6 P. M. on Sundays, while the Map, Music, Oriental, and Patents rooms are only open from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. on week days and are closed on Sundays. But books which are shelved in the Map, Music, or Oriental rooms may be consulted in the main reading room when these special rooms are closed, and books in the Patent Room may be obtained through the Technology Room, which is open in the evenings and on Sundays.

This makes it possible to gain access to the books in almost any special department of the library. The Children's Room and the library for the blind are still closed in the evenings and on Sundays.

The United Ribbon Company won lower duty on artificial silk yarn in the form of tram, assessed at 50 cents a pound, but not less than 30 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 405, Tariff act of 1909. Judge Howell granted 45 cents a pound, but not less than 30 per cent. ad valorem under aonther provision of Paragraph 405.

Collector Loeb held certain earthenware decorated and dutiable at 60 per cent. ad valorem, under Paragraph 93 of the act of 1909. Importers who vainly protested that the ware was undecorated and therefore entitled to a lower rate included Bawe & Dotter, A. C. Bosselmann & Co., F. B. Vandergrift & Co., the Delft Sectile & Importing Co., R. H. Macy & Co., L. Straus & Sons, and Lewis & Conger.

COTTON GOODS MARKET.

Many Lines Selling Well and Advancing with High Raw Material.

Business, from the jobbers' viewpoint, continues good in the cotton goods market, and merchandise both for Spring and immediate delivery is in active demand. Ratines, crêpes, and piques are selling well and the call for ginghams is improving. Printed goods are not especially active yet, but they are expected to come into better demand soon.

The demand for heavy constructions is generally steady throughout the trade, and prices are firm. With raw cotton advancing steadily, the market is firmer than it was last week, and in some instances the prices of finished materials has been placed at higher levels.

Some small export business is still carried on with the Red Sea districts and China, but buyers and sellers apparently cannot agree on either prices or deliveries. Mills are sold ahead and many orders on ginghams, drills, and sheetings are being turned down because of lack of goods on hand.

LINEN PRICES FIRM.

Mills Behind in Their Orders and Stocks Are Low.

The linen market continues strong, with prices very firm. The heavy demand for linens for the women's wear trade is keeping all the looms making these goods busy, and prices rule higher than the present cost of the raw material would seem to indicate. Colored dress linens are receiving good attention, and deliveries are hard to get until after the first of the year. A good many advance orders have been taken for household linens, and stocks are low throughout the country. Fancy novelties for the holiday season are selling well.

Manufacturers of quilts are sold ahead for several months. The mills in some sections of the country are having difficulty in obtaining help, and as a result are far behind on deliveries.

ORANGE CROP BOUNTIFUL.

The Year's Supply in America Reaches Record Levels.

Oranges should be plentiful enough this year for every one to have them. The California crop will approximate 24,000,000 boxes, the Florida crop 7,000,000, and the Porto Rican crop 2,500,000, making the total about 33,500,000 boxes. This is by far the largest crop ever harvested in the United States and its possessions. Porto Rico is fast coming ahead as an orange producer, the fine flavor of Porto Rican fruit making it popular with connoisseurs. Seedless California navels are the best all-around sellers in the domestic markets, probably owing to their brilliant color and uniform size.

There is little fault to be found with the present demand in the local market. The holiday call is beginning, and shippers are getting a large number of orders to fill in time for Thanksgiving.

Printcloths More Active.

There was more activity in the print cloth market yesterday, with prices firm under a good demand for near-by delivery. Wide goods were traded in largely. The day's quotations follow:

27-inch, 56-52s, 3 3-16; 27-inch, 56-56s, 3 5-16c; 27-inch, 64-60s, 3⅝c; 28-inch, 64-60s, 3⅞c; 28-inch, 64-64s, 4 1-16c; 38½-inch, 64-60s, 5⅛c; 38½-inch, 64-64s, 5¼c; 39-inch, 68-72s, 5⅝c; 39-inch, 72-76s, 6½c; 39-inch, 80-80s, 7¼c; brown sheetings, Southern standard, 8@8⅛c; brown sheetings, 4-yard, 56-60s, 6⅜@6½c; brown sheetings, 3-yard, 7¼@7½c; brown drills, standard, 8@8⅛c; denims, 9-ounce, 16½@17c; tickings, 8-ounce, 13@13½c; standard prints, 5⅛c, and standard staple ginghams, 6¼c.

Good Demand for Notions.

According to an official of one of the largest houses in the local fancy goods and notions trade, business continues unusually good, considering the continuance of unseasonable weather. There is a healthy demand for merchandise covering the entire line of small wares and fancy goods. Leather novelties, beaded bags, and celluloid hair ornaments are selling well, and Parisian ivory novelties are also in good demand. Umbrellas with fancy handles are among the leaders in popularity for the holiday trade. Fancy boxed jewelry of all descriptions is largely sought.

BUSINESS NOTES.

H. Berger & Co., furriers, 3 West Eighteenth Street, have leased the tenth loft in the building at 48 West Thirty-eighth Street, containing 10,000 square feet of floor space.

Smith & Neuer, cloaks and suits, 263 Greene Street, have engaged new quarters at 164 West Twenty-fifth Street. They will occupy the seventh loft in the building at that address.

Announcement is made of the purchase of the mill of the Paul Clemens Silk Manufacturing Company, Scranton, Penn., by D. G. Dery, 381 Fourth Avenue. The mill contains between 300 and 400 looms, and is the twelfth to come under the direction of Mr. Dery.

A good number of buyers from various parts of the country attended the auction of 4,000 pieces of black and colored silks, plain and fancy, account of the Phoenix Silk Manufacturing Company, at the rooms of Townsend & Montant, 87 Leonard Street, yesterday. Bidding was active, and the prices obtained were apparently satisfactory to the parties concerned.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

There is a growing demand for staple checked ginghams noted in the cotton goods trade. Reorders on these goods have been large during the last few days, and manufacturers are not accepting orders for delivery later than January at present prices.

Combination sets of suspenders, hose supporters, and neckties to match put up in appropriate boxes are being well taken by retailers for the holidays.

Duplicate business in Canton and outing flannels in certain quarters of the market is reported to be improving. These goods have sold well, and merchants are looking for more to replace depleted stocks.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The exports from Burma by sea to all countries, including India, increased during 1911 over the previous year by $2,651,250, notwithstanding a decrease of more than $500,000 in the value of rice and of more than $100,000 each in the shipments of jade and teak timber. The available supply of teakwood of good quality is running short in Burma.

Straw braid was imported into the British Isles in the first nine months of this year to the extent of 12,800,000 pounds, an increase of 4,000,000 pounds over the same period last year.

The Austrian Lloyd announces two new express passenger steamers for its Trieste-Aden-Bombay service, each of 8,000 tons burden. The two new steamships, Gablona and Marienbad, will make Aden a regular port of call and add to the already fine fleet of the Austrian Lloyd in Eastern waters.

IRON TRADE CONDITIONS.

The steel trade shows no signs of curtailment because of impending tariff changes. Large sales of ore for next year are being made close to the price basis of 1911. The Iron Age says:

> Steel trade conditions thus far show no change which can be considered due to plans announced for early legislation on duties, though it is known that the buying policy of many manufacturers will be conservative, in view of their opinions as to the effect of tariff reductions.
>
> The Steel Corporation is operating 95 per cent. of its steelmaking capacity, and last week reached 96 per cent. Its bookings are still running in excess of its production, and its policy appears to be to sell as far into next year as buyers' needs require at the contract prices now ruling.
>
> Railroad requirements have again been a large factor in the week's business. Car orders have been estimated at 12,000 to 15,000. In the Chicago district 30,000 tons of car material was closed by one seller, nearly all for delivery in the second half of 1913. In Eastern Pennsylvania inquiries are up for 50,000 tons of rolled steel for the second and third quarter delivery to a railroad car works.
>
> It is estimated that more than 2,000,000 tons of rails are already booked for 1913. The United States Steel Products Company has taken 18,000 tons for the Trans-Australian Railway. Of the 65,000 tons ordered for the New Haven and controlled lines about 25,000 tons each goes to Bethlehem and Pennsylvania steel companies and 15,000 tons to the Lackawanna Company.

The Iron Trade Review thus outlines the situation in the ore market:

> Selling of iron ore for 1913 delivery has started in at a lively rate, and fully 5,000,000 tons have been booked. It is expected that within a very few days a large percentage of the ore offered for sale will be taken by consumers. It had been expected that 1911 prices would prevail, but on account of the reduction in freight rates of Minnesota ore-carrying railroads since 1911 of 20 cents a ton, the firm which made the first sale of the season on Tuesday decided to shade 1911 prices by 10 cents, making the schedule, Old Range Bessemer, $4.40; Mesabi Bessemer, $14.15; Old Range non-Bessemer, $3.60; Mesabi non-Bessemer, $3.40. This schedule is an advance of 65 cents on Bessemer ores compared with 1912, and an advance of 60 and 55 cents respectively on usual quotations on Old Range and Mesabi non-Bessemer.

The American Metal Market Report says:

> An apparent anomaly in the market is the weakness in iron and steel scrap, which has openly declined and sometimes shows odd lots offered at still lower figures, and consumers, particularly in the Pittsburgh district, are postponing shipments. The condition is attributed to too much speculative buying by dealers on the recent advance.
>
> Unfinished steel has grown almost unquotable, offerings being very rare. Billets and sheet bars are quotable at least 50 cents higher than a week ago, though transactions are so limited as to furnish relatively little clue to the market. The condition confronting some of the independent sheet and tin plate mills, as to steel supply for first quarter, has grown acute, and considerable idleness of finishing capacity is promised.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Old Astor and Lorillard Holdings in Pearl Street Sold—West Side Transactions—Big Business Deal in Upper Montclair—Bronx and Suburban Activities.

The sale yesterday of two parcels of property in Pearl Street within a block of each other, between John and Beekman Streets, serves to direct attention to the realty activity which has lately characterized the old insurance and shipping section east of Broadway. The two properties sold include 253 and 277 Pearl Street. In each case the transaction was negotiated by the Charles F. Noyes Company, the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company being associated in the sale of 253. This plot, occupied by a four-story building, covering a lot 22.10 by 113, is on the west side of Pearl Street, between John and Fulton Streets. It was sold for William H. Sage and Alfred R. Conkling, trustees, to Frank Schlate. The property is a part of the old Lorillard estate, having been owned by the Lorillards for many years. It has been held at $30,000 and a five-year mortgage of $21,000, at 4 per cent., has been placed by the brokers for the new owner.

The other plot, 277, is also on the west side, but on the block above, between Fulton and Beekman Streets, a lot 25 by 101, and occupied by a four-story business structure. This also has an old family history, having been in the Astor ownership for many years, and has been sold for Robert and Mrs. Sarah S. Collier, the latter a granddaughter of William Astor. The property has been held at $35,000 and was sold for all cash. The buyer will hold it for investment.

Negotiations, it is learned, are pending for the sale of 228 Pearl Street.

Operators Buy Amsterdam Ave. Corner.

A syndicate of operators composed of Fisher and Irving I. Lewine and Isidor H. Kempner have bought from the estate of Conrad Stein the five five-story tenements at the southeast corner of Sixty-third Street and Amsterdam Avenue, occupying a plot 100 by 100.5.

The property is known as 69 to 75 Amsterdam Avenue and 152 West Sixty-third Street, this being the first transfer in over thirty years.

Joseph F. Feist has sold for Louis Borchardt the four-story tenement 447 West Thirty-ninth Street on a lot 25 by 100.

The Private Dwelling Market.

The three-story and basement dwelling 139 West Seventy-sixth Street on a lot 18 by 102.2 has been sold by Mary R. Richardson. The buyer will occupy the house, which is located between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues.

An investor has purchased from the Kenton Realty Company 144 East Forty-fourth Street, a four-story dwelling on a lot 15 by 100.5. The buyer will alter the parcel into stores and bachelor apartments.

An adjoining owner is reputed to have purchased from Anna Kristie the three-story and basement dwelling 154 East Forty-fifth Street on a lot 18.9 by 100.5.

Taxpayer for Broadway Corner.

A one-story taxpayer will be erected on the northwest corner of Broadway and Eighty-fourth Street, purchased by Max Marx from Harry Schiff. The plot has a frontage of 102.5 feet on Broadway and 133.5 feet on Eighty-fourth Street.

Upper Montclair Syndicate Buys Business Block.

A deal of more than usual importance and interest has recently been closed in Upper Montclair, N. J., whereby a syndicate of business men, known as the Realty Associates of Upper Montclair, have purchased the entire block opposite the Erie Railroad Station. The property has been bought from the Van Geisen Estate. It has been owned by the family for over a century, and until the present sale the owners have refused to part with any portion. Besides the railroad frontage the plot has large frontages on Bellevue Avenue, Valley Road, and Lorraine Avenue, comprising practically about 1,500 feet of street frontage.

The deal was negotiated by Johnson, Adams & Greacen. Plans are now being prepared for improving the property with a series of high-class business structures in a harmonious style of architecture for commercial uses. A station plaza is also proposed to add to the picturesque features of the place, the design of the new owners being to utilize wise methods of city planning with a proper amount of attractiveness for a large business centre.

Bronx.

The Realty Realization Company has bought from Rudolph Simon the pot 229 by 100 at the northeast corner of Hughes Avenue and Fordham Road. The buyer gave in exchange 522 East 139th Street, a six-story flat on plot 37.6 by 100, between St. Ann's and Brook Avenues.

Bryan L. Kennelly sold to Daniel Meehan the plot 125 by 185 by irregular at the southwest corner of Aqueduct and Ogden Avenues. The property was scheduled to be sold at auction yesterday.

James T. Barry has purchased from the Cioffi Company the plot 50 by 100 on the west side of Bryant Avenue, 300 feet north of Freeman Street. The buyer gave in exchange the plot 225 by 100 on the east side of Seabury Place, 50 feet south of 172d Street, the sale of which was recently reported.

Brooklyn.

The Kraslow Construction Company has purchased for immediate improvement with four-story apartment houses, a plot 131 by 130, on the west side of Ocean Avenue, 100 feet north of Beverley Road.

The buyers recently bought the adjoining plot and are now completing a six-story elevator apartment known as Buckingham Court. The new apartments are to occupy plots of 65 by 100 each. The property is part of the estate of Gustav Jahn. John F. James & Sons were the brokers.

The three-story dwelling 167 Park Place has been sold by Elizabeth F. Sterling to an investor.

James J. Keogh has sold 423 First Street, a three-story and basement brownstone front dwelling, on lot 21 by 100, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues. Burrill Brothers were the brokers.

Long Island.

The old Ludlow estate, consisting of a tract of about 100 acres at Oakdale, has been purchased by Commodore F. G. Bourne. The property borders on the South country road opposite Commodore Bourne's present estate.

$75,000 Lease in Williamsburg.

The United Cigar Stores Company has leased in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn a triangular block bounded by Broadway, Lorimer, and McKibbin Streets. The property was leased by Ezra B. Tuttle, President of the Williamsburg Savings Bank, for a period of fifteen years, at net rental approximating $75,000 for the full term.

The present structures on the site consist of small shops which will be remodeled.

Recent Buyers.

Douglas L. Elliman is the buyer of 1,215 Park Avenue, sold last week by the estate of Henrietta Steinfelder.

Stephen Wirt is the buyer of the dwelling, 76 West Forty-eighth Street, the sale of which, by Charles Lallonette and others, was reported Monday.

Commercial Leases.

Pease & Elliman have leased for a term of years in the Broadway Central Hotel the store 667 Broadway to Herman Gertner.

John A. Evans has leased to Bernard Feinstein for Joseph Tesoro a motion picture theatre, now under construction on Arthur Avenue south of 187th Street, for a term of ten years at an aggregate rental of $25,000.

L. L. Rosenthal has leased the store and basement 144 West Thirty-fourth Street for the Robard Realty Company to L. Storin for a term of five years; also store and basement at 1,970 Seventh Avenue to Joseph Weiland for a term of five years.

William J. Roome & Co. have rented the store and basement at 48 West Twenty-sixth Street to Nathaniel A. Blank for a restaurant.

Corn & Co. have leased the store and basement 1 East Twenty-eighth Street to First & Beirach for a term of ten years. After extensive alterations the premises will be occupied as a restaurant.

American Express Building Rumor.

The rumor of a large improvement by the American Express Company on its property at 63 and 65 Broadway was revived yesterday, and although the officers of the company declined to make any statement it was said that plans for a tall office building were under consideration. The property fronts 79.8 feet on Broadway and runs through to Trinity Place, 210.4 feet in depth. It adjoins on the north the Empire Building, and the southerly end of the block, with the Exchange Alley frontage, is being improved by the Adams Express Building Company.

$525,000 for L. I. City Factories.

Plans calling for the erection of two more big factories in the new automobile centre of Long Island City have been filed with the Building Bureau, and ground will be broken at once. The plans were filed by the Goodyear Improvement Company, a subsidiary company of the Goodyear Rubber Company, and the Arrow Motor Company. The former concern will build a four-story brick factory, 52 by 268 feet, to be on Jackson Avenue at the corner of Honeywell Street.

The Arrow Company plans call for the erection of a four-story brick factory on Freeman Avenue between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

It will be four stories, 200 by 205 feet, with an extension of 54 by 51 feet. The cost of the Goodyear Building is estimated at $225,000, while the cost of the Arrow Building is $300,000.

$897,557 for Queens Buildings.

Building operations in the Borough of Queens last week amounted to close to a million dollars, a new record for the last quarter of the year.

The total of operations for the week was $897,557, in which there were 109 applications for new buildings amounting to $849,250; thirty-four applications for alterations of a value of $25,145; forty-six applications for plumbing permits of an estimated cost of $23,126.

Apartments for L. I. City.

The Queensboro Property Company will erect four four-story brick apartment houses on Academy Street, north of Graham Avenue, Long Island City, at a cost of $47,000.

Realty Notes.

The Ruland & Whiting Company negotiated the sale of the property 132-134 Perry Street for the New York City Society of the M. E. Church to James H. Cruikshank and William D. Kilpatrick.

The Consolidated Gas Company took title yesterday to the property 130 to 134 East Fifteenth Street, 74.6 by 84.

The parcels are directly at the rear of Tammany Hall and will be improved with an eighteen-story structure.

Henry T. Richardson has leased from John D. Locke of Washington, D. C., for a term of five years, the four-story dwelling 11 West Fifty-second Street. The Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company negotiated the lease.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

City.

The Municipal Civil Service Commission has denied the request of the Building Superintendent of Manhattan that four first-grade clerks, who were appointed in August, 1911, be admitted to the examination for promotion to second-grade clerk.

The commission has also denied the request of the Commissioner of Accounts that Alexander Frank, an Examining Inspector of the third grade, be permitted to qualify in an examination for promotion to the fourth grade. This position was transferred from the exempt to the competitive class on July 26, 1912, and Frank has not served the required six months in the grade.

The following have been approved:

Request of the Public Works Commissioner, Manhattan, that Matthew F. Kinney and George C. Burch, who were notified for non-competitive examination for Provisional Inspectors, but were unable to attend, be summoned for the next examination.

Statement from the Public Charities Department that no one can be obtained from the appropriate list of nurse's assistant to accept appointment as nurse at the New York City Home, Blackwell's Island, requesting the emergency appointment of Miss Jennie Reynolds, and asking that she be summoned for non-competitive examination to qualify for provisional employment.

The following have been restored to the eligible lists specified:

Katherine H. Walsh, 197 Sullivan Street, Brooklyn, stenographer and typewriter, second and third grades; the record shows that she declined appointment in the Board of Estimate on account of temporary inability due to the illness of her mother.

William J. Gallagher, 428 Central Park West, clerk, second grade, for temporary work; he states that he did not receive the notice from the Finance Department so as to report within the time prescribed.

Michael J. McCormack, 225 Hudson Street, clerk, second grade, temporary work; he states that he was ill when notified by the Finance Department, and did not know his name had been certified until too late to respond.

Censored Want Advertisements

"Only advertisements fit to print."

A good bookkeeper hunted for a position for two months until nearly in despair. He advertised in three newspapers, but had no better position offered him than one at $6.00 with a Bronx plumber.

He then advertised once in The New York Times and received an answer from a National bank and two more from merchants with high ratings. As his experience lay along banking lines, he went first to the bank and found what he wanted. He discovered, also, that he was the man the bank wanted.

Later he learned that one of his former advertisements had been pointed out to the cashier of the bank by a clerk who had been watching various mediums. The cashier had refused to answer it, with this comment: "I know of no reason for believing that an advertiser in any newspaper is of higher calibre than the readers of that newspaper."

MORAL:—Decide for yourself, if you do not already know, just what kind of people read The New York Times—then advertise for that situation, or any other want, in The New York Times. Telephone 1000 Bryant.

The type used for "Wants" is called agate. By counting seven words to the line in small type, or four words if set in capitals, you may readily estimate what your advertisement will cost by consulting the following table:

THE NO FUSION EDICT STIRS PROGRESSIVES

Hostile Spirit Manifest, and Prendergast Says Flatly He Will Lead Opposition to It.

CALLS IT A SUICIDAL POLICY

As a Bull Mooser, He's Willing to Support McAneny, Democrat, or Whitman, Republican, for Mayor.

Col. Roosevelt's ultimatum at the Bull Moose conference at the Holland House on Tuesday, that the new party should refuse to co-operate with any other party even to the extent of fighting Tammany in the city next year, stirred up bitter opposition yesterday in various Progressive circles. The only person of prominence who would go on record as opposing the Colonel's views, however, was Controller William A. Prendergast. The attitude of the Progressive conference was a great disappointment to him, he said, and he thought the party had neglected a great opportunity. He said:

"It was possible for the leaders of the Progressive Party yesterday to take advanced ground on the question of good municipal government. Instead of doing so they treated the question by evasion. The tabling of the resolution prepared by the committee, of which Mr. Woodruff was Chairman, instead of helping the situation, has really confused it and cannot fail to embarrass the party. If adopted next Spring, this resolution would nullify absolutely the right of local autonomy and surrender the judgment of New York City Progressives into the hands of men throughout the State who have little interest in New York City affairs, and in the main are not well informed of the requirements of New York City's government.

"The resolution should have been put to a vote and beaten absolutely. To let the question hang in the air simply gives outsiders the impression that the conference did not know its own mind and did not have the moral courage to act upon the question then and there."

The Controller pointed out that there were thousands of men in New York who did not believe in allowing Tammany Hall to govern the city, and that these men, although not Progressives, were willing to enter into a combination of interests that would be strong enough to defeat Tammany.

"The Progressive Party is founded upon the principle that a man is not called upon to subscribe to a course which he believes is opposed to good government and contrary to the views of his own conscience. We will put this principle in force in the coming municipal campaign. Let there be no doubt about that. It is not a question of candidates or places. If the Progressive Party is prepared to live up to its ideals it would be willing to say that it would support any anti-Tammany candidate, no matter what party he belonged to, who represented the principle of home rule and good government for New York City.

"About two weeks ago, when first discussing this question, I suggested a man of the type of Mr. McAneny for the office of Mayor. He is a Democrat, but I for one am just as ready to vote for Mr. McAneny, if the judgment of all those interested in the movement for good government is that he is the best man, as I am to vote for a man who labels himself Progressive.

"There are many people who think that District Attorney Whitman would be a splendid candidate for Mayor. His notable success in his office and the courage with which he has fulfilled his duty, and especially his success during the last couple of months, certainly give justification for their sponsorship of him. In the same spirit, if the anti-Tammany interests believe that Mr. Whitman would be the best candidate for Mayor, I will vote for him and will support him as heartily as I know how. The fact that he is a Republican would not deprive him of my support in the municipal campaign."

William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, said yesterday that the action of the Progressive State Committee seemed "suspiciously like bossism."

DIVORCE BAR TO BISHOPRIC.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 20.—"The fact that the man is divorced is enough to make it improper for him to be consecrated," said Bishop William Croswell Doane at the annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Albany, in a debate preliminary to the refusal by that body to consent to the consecration of the Rev. Dr. H. B. Silver of Topeka, newly elected Bishop of Kansas.

Much difference of opinion was expressed. The original resolution refusing consent contained Dr. Silver's name, but as finally adopted specified no one. A motion to reconsider the adoption of the resolution was voted down.

Bishop Doane desired the resolution adopted as originally introduced, to contain the name of Dr. Silver.

STOLE TO REGAIN LOST LOVE.

Steurer Spent the $1,500 Freely, but Without Avail, He Admits.

When Ralph Hewitt Steurer, 20 years old, was arrested yesterday at the office of the National Surety Company charged with the theft of $1,500 from the Dallas Gas Company of Texas, he not only confessed the crime but threw in a romantic tale of love and adventure for good measure.

After high life in Brooklyn had put him $500 in debt, young Steurer said he left his furnished room at 311 Carlton Avenue and went to Dallas, Tex., only to learn by mail that his lady love, whom he had left behind, had decided to marry another man. Concluding that he must hurry back and marry the girl himself, he took $1,500 from the cash drawer of the Dallas Gas Company, where he kept books, and landed in Brooklyn with a wardrobe costing $500.

But in spite of the fact that he spent $52.55 for automobile hire and dinner alone, with a $2 tip for the chauffeur on a joy ride to Lake Ronkonkoma, the young woman, who is said to be Miss Marie Marmion, of 51 Windsor Place, Brooklyn, refused to elope with him.

Disappointed in love, Steurer headed West, spending money freely for automobile rides and stopping at the best hotels while his funds lasted. Being a member of the Bedford Branch of the Y. M. C. A., he found his membership card useful in travelling. On the strength of it, J. R. Mesenger, Secretary of the State Executive Committee of the Illinois Y. M. C. A., advanced him $20.50 and bought him a ticket to New York.

Detectives Reeve and Williams, of the National Surety Company trailed him from Texas to Brooklyn, thence to Winnepeg, and back via Chicago to New York, where he was arrested yesterday and held without bail by Magistrate Freschi to await extradition to Texas.

"On $45 a month a fellow can't be pulling off theatre parties of five or six about every night without getting into debt," young Steurer philosophized as he was being led to a cell. "I had a fine time while the money lasted. Therefore I have no fault to find with anybody."

Blue Chinchilla Overcoats $25 and $30

CHINCHILLA Overcoats hold the centre of the stage this season. And because they are so popular and in such great demand, substitutions have begun to creep in—so here and there, you will find chinchilla cloths that really are not chinchilla cloths at all, but imitations.

We know,—because we have examined it, and because Hart, Schaffner & Marx have too,—that the chinchilla cloth in our overcoats is right.

We have chinchilla overcoats in the widest variety of styles,—some like the picture (a coat that falls just to the knees and has a smart belted back), others with shawl collars and the belted back; some with the new peaked lapel and belted back; some plain box coats.

They are priced at $25 and $30.

And when we, who know values, say that they are the best values for the money we have ever seen,—you may be sure that they are indeed unusual. Other chinchillas and montagnacs up to $75.

Won't you come in and see them?

You can try on every blessed one in our stock without putting yourself under any obligation to us whatsoever. In fact, we would be very glad to have you do it.
